

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

THE TAGALOG LANGUAGE.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Special attention is called to what is said in the note on the last page of this book with regard to the most peculiar orthographical character in Tagalog. Students are particularly recommended to read such note carefully before their going into the Grammar, so that, from the start, they may not get accustomed to write it in the wrong manner it will be found printed throughout the work.

THE TAGALOG LANGUAGE.

A comprehensive grammatical Treatise adapted to self-instruction and particularly designed for use of those engaged in Government service or in business or trade in the Philippines,

The Tagalog Language.

PREFACE.

The great practical advantages enjoyed by one who speaks a native language or dialect over him who knows not a word uttered by those with whom he comes in daily contact are too obvious to require mention. The belief that Americans who look forward to a permanent or long residence in these Islands will be quick to perceive the benefits to be derived from a knowledge of the most widely spoken native language in the Philippines was the inspiring cause of the author's undertaking this work. It is offered as a practical aid to the acquisition of a thorough knowledge of the Tagalog language.

The method of instruction followed throughout this work is in accordance with the system which seems to be easiest for learners, whatever their age, to grasp a new language, namely, that of explaining its grammatical construction, as far as possible, in the same phraseology and on the same lines as they have been accustomed to in learning their own and other languages.

It was at first intended to avoid any unnecessary philological investigations or scientific theories of the language as being beyond the scope of a practical Grammar, but when such language as the Tagalog, so dissimilar in construction to those of the western world, is to be considered, some scientific remarks showing its peculiar character can hardly be dispensed with. This has been done, to some extent, in the "Introduction" and occasionally in the text, mainly in the explanatory notes generally preceding every lesson and part of speech.

As it will be difficult at the outset, that the student should divest himself of the notion that Tagalog can be learnt or taught on identically the same lines as modern languages, it may, perhaps, appear to him, at first sight, that too much space has been devoted in this Grammar to explanations of this kind and that repetition of and frequent reference to them may, in some cases, render the style somewhat prolix. This, if we understand it rightly, is only seeming and the apparent deficiency is accounted for by the nature of the language and the age of the persons probably undertaking it.

As Tagalog is not a modern language and necessary, like others, for common professional purposes or scientific research, it is not for children, but for persons of mature years, (especially for those who trade and fill official duties in the Philippines) to learn it. Now, it would hardly be desirable to teach such persons as will probably study Tagalog in the Islands, in the same manner as children are taught. Reason being to Maturity what Memory is to Infancy, a method grounded on a mere exposition of English words or sentences coupled to their counterparts in Tagalog, as is usual in a dictionary or a vocabulary, would be a complete failure, as most of such learners would have the opportunity of a better teaching derived from the natives in the midst of whom they live. It is believed that theory and a frequent reference to those rules which more directly show the fundamental principles the language rests upon, conjointly with the practice of such words and idioms as are used in common topics for all requirements of every-day life will best accomplish the learner's end. It is in this way that the student of mature years for whom the task of committing the lessons to memory is so difficult will be able to acquire the language by merely reading the grammar over from time to time as he may find it necessary to do. When adequate illustrations have been given on a special point; a rule, as comprehensive as it may be, immediately follows; when the matter is treated of as a heading, the rule precedes and the illustrations follow.

Great care has been taken in noting, either in the text or in foot-notes, every word of Spanish origin and in tracing it back to its original and simple spelling in the language so as to show clearly the change undergone in its adaptation to Tagalog. If such words appear combined with any Tagalog suffixes or prefixes so as to impart some special sense, the various elements have been separated and explained, when this has been deemed necessary. But above all, we have endeavoured to explain as fully as we could, a matter which, it may be said, constitutes the very pith of the language, that is to say, the particles and their use in word-building. Every one of them has been fully treated of, both as it occurs in the first lessons and in the closing part of the book, when all the imparting senses and combinations they are susceptible of have been brought together and thoroughly reconsidered.

Besides the reading exercises given in the last three lessons every other lesson is provided with an exercise in which the words and phrases given in such lesson or in the previous ones have a free play. In considering the matter offered for training in such exercises, the student must bear in mind that, religious thoughts excepted, abstract ideas, which form so large a part of our topics in conversation, have but little place in that of natives, and that the expressions resorted to, puerile or strange as they may appear to our minds, constitute however the conversational ground with that part of the native population with which, most probably, those for whom this work is intended have to deal. The exercises are arranged in questions and answers for the teacher (if there be one) and the pupil to engage in dialogues and the same may be extended to similar topics or read aloud as many times as may be necessary to acquire fluency. The exercises should, of course, be written without any other assistance than the vocabulary in the lessons and the mistakes made should, then, be corrected by comparison with the key which is given at the end of the book.

The author is, however, conscious of many imperfections in his work, but when it is considered that this is the first English-Tagalog grammar ever published and that the Tagalog language differs so widely in its structure and idioms from all modern languages, the great difficulties to be encountered in compiling even the simplest treatise of this kind will be better perceived and appreciated. It is hoped that this effort of the author will be found a useful and profitable source for better qualified persons to pursue the subject more deeply and in a more scientific and successful manner, and that the work, despite its imperfections, will be welcomed and appreciated by Americans both in these Islands and at home,

INTRODUCTION.

Tagalog is one of the many dialects derived from the Malay language and can hardly be spoken of without reference being made to the trunk or fountain from which it originally sprung. Malay is not the language of a nation, but of tribes and communities widely scattered from the eastern coast of the Bay of Bengal to the Malay Peninsula, Sumatra, Sunda, Java, Borneo, Celebes, Flores, Timor, the Moluccas and the Philippines.

The similarity of the dialects used by the inhabitants of the above-mentioned countries with their stem the Malay as spoken in the west coast of the Malay Peninsula, was first noticed by Europeans in the sixteenth century when Magellan's Malay interpreter was found to be understood from one end of the Malay Archipelago to the other.

Tagalog has received the influence of Sanskrit, and of the Arabic and some other Semitic languages, but in a smaller degree than the other Malay dialects. It has, however, been influenced by Spanish in a much larger proportion than either Javanese or the Malay of the Straits of Malacca have been, respectively, influenced by Dutch, English or Portuguese.

The earliest Aryan influence came from Sanskrit in an epoch not yet accurately determined. It seems to be the prevailing theory that immigrant tribes coming from Mid-Asia settled along the shores and spread themselves over the Peninsula, Sumatra, Java, Borneo and Celebes, but their further progress over the many islands more to the north and east appears to have been checked by older and less conquerable races. In one way or another these tribes must have made the island of Java their favorite abode or the court or focus from which Hinduism irradiated with a force decreasing proportionally with the distance to the countries it endeavoured to reach. This is proven by the fact of Javanese having become the recipient of a larger number of Sanskrit words and in a greater degree of purity than any other dialect of Malay derivation, their number decreasing as we recede from Java. Further research as to the comparative number of Sanskrit terms passing into Javanese and Tagalog will show that while in the former the proportion may be rated at the eleven per cent, it scarcely reaches in Tagalog one and a half per cent of the whole aggregate of words. This percentage, as may naturally be inferred, is somewhat, but not much larger, in the southern Filipino dialects, Bicol and Bisayan and still more in those spoken in the Sulu islands and in Borneo, but yet the proportion is not such as to constitute any of them a composite language on this sole account.

We subjoin a table of words of Sanskrit origin, which are, among others, made use of in Tagalog. This is mainly done to show what deviations both in meaning and in spelling, the words have undergone in their adaptation to the language, and at the same time, to instruct pupils as to the general way of Tagalizing words when they may have recourse to English words to express some new idea, a thing which they cannot help but do occasionally in Tagalog.

It should be noticed that the very miscellaneous character of words imported into Tagalog from Sanskrit and the absence of many terms incidental to the ethical and religious Hindu institutions will tend to prove the small degree of influence Hinduism had in moulding the character and customs of the inhabitants of these Islands at those times.

The influence coming next to that of Sanskrit came later with the irruption of the Arabs and added a Semitic element to the language. While it put a stop to the flowing into the vernacular of any new terms of Sanskrit origin, it, however, retained those already in general use, supplementing them with those appropriate to the ideas of a new and more advanced civilization, and above all with those relating to the Mohamedan religion introduced to the partial displacement of the worship of Budha. But the greatest revolution to the language came to Malay

(1) Sanskrit words are here transliterated into Roman characters, as few students would be acquainted with the Sanskrit ones.

VI.

through the introduction of the Arabic character in general writing, especially in Literature, which is still preserved in the Straits Settlements and elsewhere. (1) This revolution did not travel far into the different parts of the Malay Archipelago and the same causes which opposed the advancement of Hinduism in the Philippines, but chiefly the strong check which Mohammedanism encountered in comparatively recent times on the part of Spaniards after the conquest, prevented its adoption by the inhabitants of the Islands, who continued to write in their ancient rudimentary characters. This fact and the introduction of the Spanish alphabet, so simple and rational in structure, must be noted to the advantage of the learner of Tagalog. While a student of Malay must determine beforehand whether he intends to speak or to write the language or whether both things are aimed at, and in the latter case, the difficulty of obtaining any fluency in reading a new character often appears so great as even to discourage him from making a beginning, the learner of Tagalog will enjoy the immense advantage of learning at once both the speaking and the writing, and on account of a fairly strict correspondence between Spanish Prosody and Orthography, he will be easily led to write any Tagalog word he has not been previously acquainted with, if it is distinctly uttered to him.

The Arabic element in Malay is not accurately determinable, for new words and expressions are constantly being introduced. In Tagalog, however, the same has had but little influence and perhaps does not number one per cent of all the words, it having besides put a stop to by the introduction of the Spanish element. Some Arabic terms are still pouring into the Moorish dialects of Mindanao and Sulu Islands where Mohammedan rites prevail yet to some extent.

We subjoin a set of words of Arabic origin, used in Tagalog.

Chinese is another element added to Tagalog through a long and close intercourse of Chinese with native people. Opinions have been expressed to the effect of Malay being of a primitive Mongolic origin. As for Tagalog, it might perhaps be true that Chinese was the earliest influence the language of the aborigines and first settlers received and that which it was moulded after, for although actual Tagalog is mainly dissyllabic, there is not wanting evidence of a monossyllabic tendency, but if so, the primitive Chinese element has been so far either assimilated or corrupted as to be hardly recognisable in the language of a now-a-days.

The easily determinable portion of Chinese is that which has come to Tagalog since the discovery and falls short of the amount that one would be led to infer from the fact of Chinese influence in other respects.

This may be due partly to difficulties of compenetration¹ in the character of the two languages and to the conquest having given rise to a necessary preference for Spanish; but chiefly to that inbred disposition on the part of the Chinese race to shut others out from acquaintance with their national institutions and racial characteristics and to the natural reluctance of the Islanders to adopt the manners and speech of a class of people whom they saw despised and held aloof, and whose religion, practices, and even dressing, on the other hand, they were forbidden to imitate. Thus, a race of people, who, from the remotest epoch, have been so widely scattered throughout the Archipelago, and, in many other respects, so connatural to its native population, could only leave behind in the language, such terms as generally designate those tools and sorts of food which natives soon adopted and partook of; or kindred names, the latter mostly confined to the use of a particular class of people, as shown in the following table.

As has been hinted elsewhere in this outline, Spanish is by far the largest Aryan element introduced in Tagalog and that which supplies its many deficiencies and imparts to it its comparative efficiency and comprehensiveness.

The aboriginal dialect previous to the admixture of Spanish is but the poor vocabulary of men hardly raised above savage life. The purely native element in Tagalog profusively furnishes all the requisitive terms to express the physical objects surrounding men leading a primitive life in the forest and all that has to do with their food, dwellings, agriculture, fishing, hunting and domestic affairs. As soon as the analysis reaches moral ideas or conceptions in science the lack of appropriate terms commences to be felt, and it will be seen that their sense its to be conveyed to the native mind either by metaphors and round-about expressions or by having recourse to Spanish. Hence many Spanish words, unaltered or distorted, passed into the language to express those things or ideas that natives were not and could not be acquainted with in their isolated condition of life before the conquest. From this it will easily be inferred that a previous knowledge of Spanish is of assistance in the study of Tagalog, not only on account of the numerous Spanish words that found their way into the language, but chiefly on account of the orthographical frame which is wholly Spanish. On the other hand, natives prided and they still, to some extent, pride themselves, on using such Spanish terms and expressions as may best command the belief of their being conversant with the latter, and this in a way that is sometimes destructive of the Tagalog syntax.

It is not here intended either to exhaust the number of Spanish words made use of in Tagalog or to go deeper into a matter that is treated more at length in the part devoted to Grammar, where every Spanish word has been noted and explained. It is only as an illustration that we give hereafter a table of some terms borrowed from Spanish.

Having thus sketched the strange elements of which Tagalog is made up, it only remains for us to give a brief account of the character and peculiarities of the language.

X.

Tagalog is the most important dialect of the Philippines. This is not on account of its being spoken by the largest proportion of the inhabitants in the Islands, for Bisayans are in greater number than Tagals; but on account of Tagalog having become predominant and becoming more so every day, as the language of the most cultured part of the whole population and that which any average-educated native from other Districts must soon learn on his coming to Manila for instruction.

The similarity between Tagalog and the other dialects spoken about the Islands is such as to make it easy for natives from different parts to understand each other by using their respective dialects for general conversational topics. The same must be the case with foreigners if they succeed in acquiring something more than a superficial knowledge of the language, as they can scarcely fail to understand and be understood at every corner of the Archipelago, if they speak Tagalog with some degree of fluency.

It will not appear irrelevant, now that the similarity of the Filipino dialects is to be considered, to say something about what it consists in as regards Tagalog and the two dialects next to it in importance, Bisayan and Bicol. While the construction remains the same or nearly the same throughout them all, only some words vary from one to another dialect, as is even the case with any one of the dialects, from one place to another. In many an instance, words that are rarely, if ever, used in one dialect have a general use in the other with the same or analogous meaning; sometimes terms of identical signification in both dialects, retain in spelling the same vowels while one or more consonants vary and are replaced by others according to certain rules. It is by studying this affinity and interchangeability of certain consonants that the scholar will be enabled to understand many words of the southern dialects. A change which, among others, does not fail to occur, is the softening of the R of Malay and the southern dialects into L or into D for Tagalog, as seen in the following table.

English.	Bisayan.	Bicol.	Tagalog.
Not to have or to be.	Uaráy.	Uará.	Ualá.
Letter, writing.	Súrat.	Súrat.	Súlat.

Shirt.	Bado.	Bado.	Baro.
Trousers.	Sarúal.	Saróal.	Salaual.
Maid.	Daraga.	Daraga.	Dalaga.

XI.

Many words are either equal or so similar as appears from the following table:

English.	Bisayan.	Bicol.	Tagalog.
Woman, female.	Babáy.	Babáy.	Babaye.
Man, male.	Lalaquí.	Lalaquí.	Lalaquí.

To walk.	Lácao.	Lácao.	Lácad.
Bread.	Tinápay.	Tinápay.	Tinápay.
Ten.	Polo.	Polo.	Póuo. (1)

As regards the amount of effort necessary to acquire a knowledge of Tagalog that will be of practical advantage to the learner, it may be said that Tagalog is a language of which it is very easy to learn to speak a little; it is, however, very difficult to acquire the idioms of natives. Facility of expression and the accurate use of idioms can only be acquired by much practice in speaking with natives. Correctness cannot be entirely learnt from grammars, and instruction derived from books must be supplemented by constant practice.

Tagalog is thought to be a poor language and so it is, but not perhaps so much so as is generally supposed. That it often fails to furnish us with words for abstract ideas is a deficiency which it has in common with all uncultivated languages or rather with all races who have not yet risen to the height of our civilisation and development.

Tagalog as compared with Malay and the other dialects of Malay derivation is a great deal more free in construction and more concise. This is partly due to the influence of Spanish, but chiefly to Tagalog being richer in sense-modifying particles than any of those dialects. The flexible power of such particles and their manifold combinations with each other must be closely observed by the learner if he aims at something more than to clothe English sentences with Tagalog words.

One of greatest difficulties to be encountered is perhaps that regarding the right accentuation of Tagalog words and the best course to be recommended to the student in this respect, is to observe how natives pronounce and accentuate in the respective locality.

The lack of uniformity of expression throughout the Tagalog region is such as to make it difficult to teach the colloquial language without imparting to the lesson the distinct marks of a particular locality. The construction of the language and the general body of words remains, of course, the same or nearly the same, but in every Province or division of a Province there are peculiar words and expressions, and variations of accent and pronunciation which belong distinctively to it. Words common in one district sound strangely in another, or it may be they convey different meaning in the two places. It has been our aim to supply a work in which only such terms as are common to the whole body of Tagalog-speaking people appear, and the student may rest assured of his being understood everywhere in the Tagalog community if he makes use of them.

(1) Most of these terms are also common to the dialect of Ilocos, but it differs more from Tagalog in construction, than the latter from Bicol and Bisayan, and even from Malay.

XII.

Natives speak more tersely than Europeans, but their abrupt sentences which seem rude to western ears convey no idea of impoliteness to the native mind.

The written language is more pompous and less idiomatic than the colloquial dialect. If, however, the subject of speech is carried away from common topics to the utterance of passionate feelings, the natives' imaginative power displays itself in an overflowing of metaphors, riddles and highflown expressions.

The advantages to be derived from acquiring a language so peculiar in character will be better appreciated by tradesmen and people filling official duties in the Philippines, when they perceive the ease with which they can transact their respective business by dealing directly with natives. As for the scholar, over and above the enlargement of mind, he will enjoy the benefit of getting deeply into the innermost character of a race of human beings whose proceedings, otherwise, defy explanation. Any other study which does not necessarily embody their manner of casting thoughts, however ethnological it may be, would fall short of the purpose.

We are not in a position to make any authoritative statement looking forward to a further development of the language or as to whether the political change in the Islands will promote or check its progress; but if Tagalog is to continue to be the vehicle of the thoughts of so many million people, a magnificent future may be anticipated for it. As receptivity, not originality, is the main feature of every tribe of the Malay race, so their language shows that capacity for the absorption and assimilation of foreign elements which has made English one of the most exhaustive languages ever spoken in the World.

ORTHOGRAPHY.

Tagalog is now written in the Roman character brought over by Spaniards and the Spanish alphabet, in its adoption, has been modified to suit the peculiarities of the language.

Although the introduction of the Spanish alphabet fully superseded and swept away the ancient rudimentary aboriginal character, the use of which is at present thoroughly discontinued in the Islands, the interest of the student may be promoted by giving him, before passing over to the modern orthography of the language, the following summary account of what characters the primitive alphabet consisted in, as still to be found in some European and Malay dictionaries.

The characters made use of in writing by natives previous to the arrival of Spaniards, were seventeen, viz:

INDEPENDENT VOWEL SIGNS.

A. a.

E. e. or I. i.

O. o. or U. u.

CONSONANTS.

Bah

Cah

Dah

Gah

Ngah

Hah

Lah

Mah

Nah

Pah

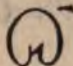

Sah

Uah

Yah

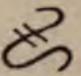

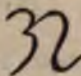

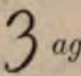

Tah

Every one of these consonants carried along with it the inherent vowel sound of (ah); a tittle placed above indicated the sound of eh-ih thus,  beh-bih, and the same dot placed under the consonant made it sound oh-uh  loh-luh, and so forth for the rest. Independent vowel characters were used only when a vowel came alone, or two vowels came together in the word to express the last of them in the diphthong, as, for instance, in    agáo, "to snatch". It is easy to conceive how deficient this system was to represent the Phonetic of all the vocables, as syllables in the composition of which, an inarticulate consonant, alone, or two, one articulate and the other not, entered, could not find adequate means of expression in writing. Thus, in many cases, the reader's mind was left to conjecture from the context, which word of those expressible by the same characters was meant, and the work of the writer ought to have consisted in his selecting such vocables as could less entail confusedness, thus narrowing the art into a profession, kept by a special rank of people, and drawing a line of separation between the spoken and written language.

This matter of the primitive alphabet having been outlined, we pass over to the practical part of it, and since Spanish Orthography has been so far introduced in Tagalog, the following remarks as to the sound of vowels, Spanish consonants used in Tagalog, and combinations with each other should be learnt by the student.

There are in Spanish, as well as in English, the five following vowels:

A-a, E-e, I-i, O-o, U-u,

the sound of which corresponds nearly with that of the same letters in the English words:

Far, Bell, Mill, Off, Bull,

besides Y-y, which, when it comes at the end is considered as a vowel.

The same vowels are made use of in Tagalog; but the sound of A-a is independent; those of E-e, I-i, O-o, and U-u are, in the majority of cases, respectively, freely exchanged, to suit euphony or the taste of the speaker; so that, properly speaking, the fundamental vowel sounds in Tagalog are only three: A-a, I-i, U-u; I-i, or E-e having the broad expanded sounds lying between the vowel sound in "sheep" and in "bed" passing through the vowel sound in "bid" and somewhat in "first"; O-o or U-u, those between "Ball" and "Bull".

CONSONANTS.

All the Spanish consonants are made use of in Tagalog, but the peculiar to the latter are:

B-b, C-c, D-d, G-g, H-h, L-l, M-m,

N-n, P-p, Q-q, R-r, S-s, T-t, Y-y, and sometimes, although improperly, V-v is used for B-b or for U-u. (1)

Over and above these consonants borrowed from Spanish and having, generally, the same sound they have therein, there is another, Ñg-ñg, peculiar to Tagalog and a very important one. The Tagalog alphabet consists, therefore, of the following twenty written characters.

A, B, C, D, E, G, H, I, L, M, N, Ñg, O, P, Q, R, S, T, U, and Y.

PRONUNCIATION.

VOWELS.

A-a, absolute vowel sound, always having that of the same letter in the English word "Far", example: Aga (pron. áh-gah) "to dawn"; aso (pron. áh-soe.) "dog"; Abala, (pron. ah-báh-lah) "occupation". A, is freely met with at any portion of the words.

E-e, variable vowel sound, generally exchangeable for I-i, having the sound of English e in "bed" or i in "bid. E-e, is but rarely met with at the middle or at the end, and never at the beginning of words (some not-altered Spanish words excepted.). It can be considered as a superfluous vowel doomed to disappear and be replaced by I-i without detriment to the language. It is however still preserved in some words as in maseilán or maseilán, (pron. mah-seh-láhn or mah-say-láhn.) "prudish"; "delicate"; babâe, babaye or babây, (pron. bah-bâh-eh, bah-bâh-yeh or bah-by.) "woman", "female".

(1) Native pedantry, quite of late, has put in use K-k, W-w and other somewhat injudicious novations, people formerly engaged in plotting against Spanish rule thus paying homage to the work carried out in their secret lodges or Catiponans and to its hieroglyphical writings. While there may be good reasons for the use of K-k, we fail to see what the reason may be for writing Cawit instead of Cavite and which other Orthography could better suit Tagalog, than the Spanish one. It is not that we consider the latter, in its application to Tagalog, as entirely irreformable, but that such needful changes as, no doubt, it requires, be done according to linguistic principles and not from political prejudice. In so far as the matter stands we do not favour these novations and the student is hereby informed that such words as Kapatid, "brother" or "sister"; Gawá, "work"; will always be spelt in this Grammar Capatid, Gawá.

I-i, variable vowel sound, exchangeable for E-e, having for its principal sound that of ea in "meat". It is predominant and becomes more so every day for replacing that of E-e. I-i, can be found everywhere in words, but at the beginning is not so frequent as A-a and O-o. Examples: Ibig or ybig, (pron. ee-big) "to wish", "to love"; Inà, (pron. ee-nâh.) "mother"; Minsán, (pron. mean-sâhn.) "once"; Tahí, (pron. tah-heé.) "to sew".

O-o, variable vowel sound, exchangeable for U-u, mainly sounding nearly as O in "Off". Example: Otang or Utang (pron. âw-tang or oó-tang.) "debt"; Cocô (pron. Coh-côe.) "nail of the fingers". O-o, is much more frequently met with at the beginning than U-u; but in composition when the final o of a root-word is to be appended by some suffix, o is generally changed into u. Example: Olô, "head"; Olohan or better Oluhan, "big-headed" or "bolster".

U-u, variable vowel sound, exchangeable for O-o, sounding like u in "bull". Few words begin with this vowel; but is frequently met with at the middle and, although not so much, at the end. Examples: Ualá, (pron. Ooah-lâh.) "nothing"; Putí, (pron. Poo-teé.) "whiteness"; pucáu or pocáo, (pron. poo-câh-oo or paw-câh-oh.) "to wake". U generally replaces final o in root-words when the latter are recomposed by means of a suffix as said above.

What is said about the interchangeability of E and I, O and U must not be construed to mean that either of them have an equal phonetic value in writing. E, if written, should always be pronounced as e in "bed"; I as i in "mill"; O, as o in "roll" and U, as u, in "bull". Thus, natives, when they want to produce the vowel sound of "bed", write e and so forth for the other vowels. What is generally indifferent, especially in polysyllables, is to pronounce and write E or I, O or U; I and U, however, being prevalent; but if for reasons of taste, for the sake of euphony, or to suit the peculiar local manners of speaking, one of these interchangeable sounds is preferred, it should be written accordingly. The broad scope of the vowel sounds accounts for this expansion, as no misconception can arise from pronouncing one way or the other, there being, properly speaking, only three vowel sounds in Tagalog.

Looking further into the matter, a scientific research will prove that natives pronounce the second and third vowels in a way sharing nearly equally of the sounds into which they can be expanded, somewhat after the manner that the vowel e is pronounced in the English word "pretty", for the former, and something as an intermediate sound between o in "roll" and u in "bull", for the latter.

XVII

CONSONANTS.

B-b, sounds as in English, no matter what part of the word it comes in. Examples: Bata, (pron. báh-tah,) "child"; Tabá, (pron. tah-báh,) "fatness"; Dibdíb, (pron. deeb-deéb,) "breast".

C-c, has the palatal sound it has in "cart". Examples: cagat, (pron. cah-gátt, "to bite"; Bácal, (pron. báh-cahl,) "iron"; Palacol, (pron. pah-lah-cóll) "axe"; Itac, (pron. ee-táck) "knife". This letter in modern Spanish, when coming before e or i, sounds like English th in "think". No such sound of th exists in Tagalog: thus, if any Spanish word in which c fulfils the above-mentioned conditions is made use of in Tagalog and it is preferred to preserve the letter, it should be pronounced s. For instance, Cebólla, (Sp.) "onion"; is to be pronounced Sebolla, (that is to say, Seh-bóh-llah, and not theh-bóh-llah, as it should have been); but it is much better to Tagalize the word by writing Seboya, Siboya or Sibuya, (pron. Seh-bóh-yah, or See-bóh-yah See-boó-yah, the last being the best Tagalized and pronounced of the three.

Owing to the palatal sound which this letter has before a, o, u, or a consonant and to the lack of fixedness in the orthography of the language, C is written by some people to represent the sound of qu in "conquer". Thus, aquin, "mine"; is written by some acin; but we consider this an improper manner of writing and it is only mentioned to acquaint the student with it and to enable him to understand such deviation when he may find it used in other books, for nothing of it will be found in this Grammar, where aquin and similar articulations are always written qu.

D-d. It is not so dental in Tagalog as it is in English. Its sound is so mild as to resemble that of R with which it is interchangeable in many cases. Examples: Dugó, (pron. doo-góe,) "blood"; Bondoc or Bundoc, (pron. bohn-dóck or boon-dóck,) "mountain"; Capatid or Capatir (pron. Cah-pah-teéd or Cah-pa h-teér,) "brother" or "sister". D-d, at the end of a word may be written d or r (the termination d being preferable) and the sound shares of both letters, somewhat as in English; but in root-words, initial d is generally changed into mild r in compositions where any particle ending in a vowel is prefixed; for instance: dami, "much"; caramihan, instead of cadamihan, "majority". The same is the case at the end, when the writing with d is preferred, as from pílad or pálar, "lucky"; capalaran instead of capaladan, "happiness". In the middle of a root d is more used than r when a consonant precedes; r, on the contrary, is generally preceded by a vowel; pandac, (pron. pan-dáck), "dwarf"; sira, (pron. scé-rah), "to destroy".

G-g, sounds as in English in the words "get", "grave", "finger". Examples: Gabi, (pron. Gah-bée,) "night"; pagod or pa-gor, (pron. pah-gód or pah-gór), "weariness"; dalag (pron. *dah-láh*g), "a kind. of fish". G-g, has in Spanish two sounds, a harsh guttural one, stronger than that of the English h, and another mild, according, respectively, to its coming before e and i or any other letter. In the Spanish syllables gue gui, u does not sound at all, (1) it being only a sign of pronunciation, indicating that g is not to be pronounced gutturally, but that it sounds as the same letter in "gate". This is sometimes disregarded in Tagalog, some people writing gintó instead of guintó, (pron. geen-tóh.) "gold", etc. Now, if the proper rules of the Spanish Prosody are to be applied here as elsewhere in Tagalog, gintó should be pronounced heen-tóe, while guintó, which is the correct term, should sound geen-tóe, as it should be. The student is warned that the articulations ge in "gelder" gi in "gift" will always be written in this. Gammar indifferently gue, gui, or g-e g-i, the hyphen being used, especially in composition, for the same purposes as the insertion of the u, as explained hereafter. G-g, when at the end of a particle should be distinctly pronounced in a very mild and particular way somewhat resembling the sound it has in the English word "dignity". Hearing it, however, pronounced by a native will convey a better idea of its sound. Any disregard on this point might lead to many misconceptions, for madali, and magdali, although both of them are compounds of dali, "swiftness", differ broadly in sense. To what has been said about the insertion of u, the following is an exception. When any particle ending in g is to be prefixed to a root beginning with i, the u may or may not be inserted; but in the latter case, the g of the particle should be separated from the i by a hyphen, thus to denote that g has the mild sound which it would have, had u been inserted. Example: Ibig, "wish", "love"; pag-ibig or paguibig, (pron. pag-geé-beeg.) "to wish", "to love"; and not pah-heé-beeg in the first of these cases. The hyphen may also be used when the root to which a particle ending with g is to be prefixed, begins with the same consonant, as in gauá, "work"; pag-gauá "working"; or when h, should be separated from any other consonant with which it might have a different sound, as muc-há, (pron. mooek-háh), "face"; duc-h,á (pron. dook-háh), "poor"; or to indicate that two consonants do not fuse into each other, as in bulac-lac, (pron. booh-lack-láck), "flower".

H-h, sounds exactly as in English. Examples: Halagá,

(1) There are some cases in which the u inserted between g and any of the vowels e or i, sounds, both in Spanish and in Tagalog; but then the crema () should be used. For instance, uica means "word" in Tagalog: if a particle ending in g is to be prefixed, (as mag is sometimes), thus forming magüica, "to pronounce"; (pron. mag-ooeé-kah), the crema is necessary, for otherwise the compound resulting would be maguica and it should have to be pronounced mag-geé-kah, destructive of the sound uica.

XIX

(pron. hah-lah-gáh), "price"; halayháy, (pron. hah-li-hí), "to put linen to dry". H-h, is never a final consonant. (1).

L-l, sounds as in English. Examples: Locsó, (pron. Locks-ó) "jump", "leap"; talabá, (pron. tah-lah-báh), "oyster"; cambál, (pron. cam-báhl), "twin".

M-m. Its sound in Tagalog does not differ from that which it has in English. Example: Mahal, (pron. Mah-háhl), "dear"; salámat, (pron. sah-láh-matt), "thanks"; gótom, (pron. gòh-tom), "hunger". M-m and not N-n is generally used before b and p in root-words: Sambít, "to mourn"; tampal, "slap".

N-n, sounds as in English. Examples: Nácao (pron. náh-cah-oh), "stealing"; tandá, (pron. tan-dáh), "oldness"; dáan, (pron. dáh-ahn), "road".

Ñg-ñg. This is an exclusive Tagalog consonant and a very peculiar one, both in character and in sound. The latter is produced by expelling the breath towards the roof of the mouth so that a portion of the air should come forth through the nostrils. The student should have it pronounced by a native. Examples: Ñgayón (pron. Ñgah-yóhn), "now", "at present"; sañgá, (pron. sang-áh), "branch" of a tree". Ñg, is never a terminal consonant.

Ng-ng, at the end of a word may be a part thereof or a euphonic ligament; in either case, both letters have a nasal sound, g having the mild, but still perceptible sound it has in "dignity" as above said; but if ng belongs to the word and the latter is suffixed with any aditament beginning with a vowel, ng is changed into ñg and the sound is the nasal one peculiar to the latter; for instance: Magaling, "good", "sound"; cagaliñgan, "goodness", "soundness". Ñg, always comes before a vowel.

P-p. It has the same sound as in English. Examples: Para, (pron. Páh-rah), "like"; pacpac, (pron. pack-páck), "wing"; daquíp, (pron. dah-keép), "to seize".

P-p, replaces f in all Spanish words, in which the latter enters, when they have been Tagalized, the sound of f being exotic and of very difficult pronunciation for a native. Thus, for instance, favor, "favor", is Tagalized into pavor and so on.

Q-q, has the same sound as in French or in the English words "antique", "conquer", and should always be written qu (the u being soundless) with either e or i following. Examples: quilala, (pron. kee-láh-lah), "to be acquainted with"; que- brada, (pron. kay-bráh-dah.) "wreck". In inserting the u due attention is paid to Spanish ortographical rules which Tagalog has been built upon; but owing, however, to the same causes as explained for the misuse of C and G and to a different employing of Q when Tagalog began to be written, still Q alone and not Qu is found in some ancient books and even now some persons write qibo instead of quibo and so on for analogous articulations, a practice which is, on no account, to be recommended. Q is never a final letter.

(1) The fact that h is frequently met at the end in Malay words when written in the Roman character and that of the same consonant never being a final letter in Tagalog, constitutes a deficiency in the latter imputable to those only who first adapted the Spanish alphabet and prosody to Tagalog. The importance of appending h to a final sharply-accented vowel does not seem to have appeared to their minds, nor they seemed to realize the simplicity resulting from writing gandah, batoh, etc, instead of gandá, bató, etc, to form the derivatives cagandahan, batohin, thus doing away with one of the greatest difficulties in the language.

R-r. The sound of this consonant is somewhat to be compared to that of the same in English when it comes at the middle of a word, as, for instance, in "very"; but in so far as it shares that of D with which it is frequently interchangeable, the student would do well to notice how it is pronounced by natives. R-r is never found at the beginning but at the middle or the end of words; at the end, however, d is preferable to r. Examples: marahil, (pron. mah-ráh-heel) "perhaps"; lácar or lácad, (pron. Lih-car or láh-cadd), "to walk"; toró, (pron. tor-óh.) "to point out": As for its interchangeability with D, see this letter.

S-s, has the sound of English s in "same", "yes". Examples: Siyá (pron. see-yáh.) "he or she"; lisan, (pron. leé-san.) "to leave off"; labás, (pron. lah-báss.) "outside". S-s, replaces C in the Spanish syllables ce, ci, za, zo, zu, (pron. thay, theeh, thah, thoe, thoo) (pron. th as in "think"), in all Spanish words made use of in Tagalog, this strong sound of th not existing in the language as above said. Cebolla, Ciceron, zapato, Zoilo, zueco are Tagalized into sibuya, Siseron, sapato, Soilo, sueco.

T-t, sounds as in English in "tea". Examples: Tónay or túnay, (pron. tónn-i or toó-nnie), "true"; patáy, (pron. pah-tíe.) "dead"; at, (pron. at.) "and".

Y-y, at the beginning of a word or a syllable and before a vowel, is considered as a consonant, and as a vowel at the end. Its sound is that which it bears in English in "yes", "day". Examples. Yacap (pron. yah-cáhp.) "to embrace"; diyata, (pron. dee-yáh-tah.) "therefore"; baybáy, (pron. by-bíe.) "beach". This letter is used for Spanish Ll as Tagalized in cebolla, sibuya. Y preceded by a consonant is never to be found at the end of words.

ESPECIAL REMARK.

Persons consulting Spanish-Tagalog dictionaries must be aware of the indiscriminate use of some letters: E and I, O and U, C and S or Q, D and R, Y and I, Ll and F, gue gui and ge, gi, Qu and Q, looking for the same word written in the various manners in which it can be, that they may get at it some way or other.

XXI

PROSODY.

Although Spanish Prosody could not be so fully applied to Tagalog, this has been however done in so far as its application is not destructive of the peculiar character of the latter. The student's work, therefore, may be advanced by his previously being acquainted with the following prosodical remarks.

COMPOSITION OF SYLLABLES.

A syllable in Tagalog may consist:

- A) Of a single vowel, as a in a-ca-la, "to guess."
- B) Of one vowel and one consonant or vice-versa, as in, in in-sic, "chinese;" ha, in ha-bá, "length."
- C) Of one vowel between two consonants, as pan in pan-hic, "to go upstairs".
- D) Of one vowel and two consonants, provided the latter be not fusible into each other, as ang in ang-cam "race", "ancestry".
- E) Of one consonant, one vowel and two consonants under the same conditions as above, as ling in ling-cod, "to wait upon".
- F) Of two consonants and one vowel, one of the former being a liquid one, as clá in ba-clá, "astonishment". (1) Words consisting of two similar portions are excepted, as in bulac-lac, "flower".
- G) The same combinations as in F, followed by a consonant, as clar in ba-clar, (2) "reed-net for fish"; (fishing-enclosure), crot in si-crot, "a kind of play with pebbles".
- H) Of one consonant, one vowel and two consonants under certain conditions to be explained hereafter, as locs in locs-ò, "to jump".

DIVISION OF SYLLABLES.

A consonant between two vowels joins the second vowel, (unless the last vowel should be separated for purposes of composition when the affixes in or an ought to be preceded by the aspirated sound of h, as explained further on.) Examples: A-bâ "oh;" ba-ta, "child". Dissyllables consisting of two equal portions are excepted. Examples: ac-ac, "notch"; ol-ol, "mad". Combinations into which l or r enters with a consonant with which either of the former can be fused are considered as a single consonant in root-tagalog words, for the purposes of division, as in i-clî, "shortness"; ha-blâ, "complaint", "charge". This is not generally applicable either to derivatives and contractions or to root-words ending in a gravely accented vowel (◌), when the latter is to be separated for purposes of composition as above indicated. Examples: Mag-la-bâs, "to take out"; put-lin, "cut it"; pacl-â "displeased".

(1) In this the language has been influenced by Spanish Prosody, for the liquid consonants were formerly, and are still, pronounced separately by some people, especially by those who have been kept aloof from intercourse with Spaniards. Thus, baclá, is pronounced by them ba-clá and so forth for similar articulations.

(2) Combinations F and G are not found in the first syllables of genuine Tagalog words.

When two consonants come between two vowels, to each vowel a consonant is joined. Examples: lun-tis, "to be in family way"; hin-hin, "still, quiet".

When three consonants come between two vowels, the two first consonants join the first vowel, as in Dang-cal, "length measure from the thumb to the extremity of the little finger stretched out".

The case of three consonants coming between two vowels only occurs in cases as in the preceding example when g comes after n followed by a consonant, or in combinations in which l enters fused with some other consonant.

Every final consonant joins the preceding vowel to form a syllable therewith.

Every final vowel thus accented (◌) should be considered as separated from the preceding letters and forming a syllable by itself. This is of the utmost importance as serving to distinguish many words which are written alike and only differ in the accent. Thus, ba-ta, means "child"; but bat-â, means "to suffer"; ba-sa, means "to wet"; but bas-â, means "to read", and so on for many other words.

THE ACCENT.

The most difficult thing in Tagalog is perhaps to lay down proper rules on the accent, and those follow but a vain phantom who seek to prescribe exact modes of accentuation for vocabularies regarding which even native authorities are not agreed and of which the pronunciation may vary according to locality. The experience of Spanish friars and Tagalists sufficiently proves this; there are words in their dictionaries written in as many as three different ways.

The written Spanish accent indicative of the syllable upon which a particular stress is laid has been somewhat injudiciously applied to Tagalog. Some grammarians go so far as to admit of seven different manners of accentuation; some, four; and some others, three; which they represent by (◌) acute; (˘) grave, and (ˆ), circumflex. There are even others who make use only, either of the first or the first two, while most writers do not seem to acknowledge any; for, whatever they may think thereof in theory, they, at least, use none in practice, leaving rather the reader's presupposed knowledge to pronounce in the proper manner or in the way that may better suit the local peculiarities. The fact is that the Spanish accent has been carried away from its province and that it was intended to make it explain linguist peculiarities which would have better means of expression by other orthographical signs. The matter stands however in such a way as hardly to be changed, and the adoption of a method being necessary, we have, for purposes of the teaching, adopted that which seems to be the simplest, and we admit and shall make use of two accents in this work; the acute (´), and the grave (˘), the latter always bearing upon the final vowel, and this merely as indicative of words, the enlargement of which requires the insertion of h when any additament beginning with a vowel is to be suffixed thereto, and thus it may be that the student may not find it employed outside this work. (1) Nor should learners be discouraged by finding sometimes the same word either differently accented or unaccented. It is that in some cases the accentuation is influenced by the word preceding or following, or by the sense to be denoted, in a way which practice alone can teach.

To a thorough understanding of the matter the following rules are established.

Unaccented words ending in a vowel, or in n or s are grave. The stress in this case bears upon the penultimate syllable. Examples: Acala, "to think"; bayan, "town"; gatas, "milk". Pron. acála, báyan, gátas.

Unaccented words ending in a consonant (n and s excepted) are acute, (ictus). The stress here is on the last syllable. Examples: Payat, "lean, meagre"; manoc, "fowl". Pron. payát, manóc.

Words ending in a vowel thus accented (˘), should be pronounced acute in a peculiar way: the last vowel should be pronounced separately from the rest, so as to constitute a syllable by itself and, moreover, the grave accent it bears is an indication that if the word is to be enlarged by in or an suffixed, in or an should be written and pronounced hín, han. Examples: Gondà, "beautiful"; cagandahan, "beauty"; tabì, "aside"; tabihan, "secluded place"; tauó, "man"; catauhan, "mankind". Any deviation from these rules will be marked by the accent. Thus, bintí, "calf of the leg"; bucá, "to lay open"; caníla, "their"; tatlò, "three"; tamís, "sweet"; salamín, "looking-glass"; should be accented, for otherwise they would be grave, while dápat, "worthy", útang, "debt"; lálím, "depth"; on the contrary, are accented to indicate that they are to be pronounced grave instead of acute as they should be if no accent marks were used.

XXIV

The accent serves in many cases to distinguish words which, although written alike, differ in meaning, as gatas, "milk"; and gatás, "path"; gáling, "source", "origin", "coming from"; and galing, "fair", "sound", "healthy"; sacá, "afterwards"; and sacá, "to till", "to farm".

For the proper accentuation, care should be taken with regard to words ending in a vowel or in n when they, for reasons to be explained, receive the euphonic ligament of g or ng. Thus, for instance, bintí, which is marked as an acute word will also be so marked in the phrase bintíng matabá, "big calf of the leg"; to indicate that it is the same word bintí linked to the following one tabá for the sake of euphony. In the same manner and for the same purpose, the accent will or will not be employed respectively in salamíng mahal "costly looking-glass"; bayang malaquí, "large town".

Words ending in y or in two vowels will always be accented on the vowel bearing the stress, y being sometimes a vowel, and sometimes a consonant, and the joining of two vowels not always constituting a diphthong for the effects of pronunciation.

By paying attention to the foregoing rules, students will be assisted in attaining a desirable pronunciation. They must, however, understand that the adoption of the two orthographical signs of accentuation in this work is merely a matter of expediency, as most books written in Tagalog are deprived of such characters.

DIPHTHONGS AND TRIPHTHONGS.

The joining together of two or three vowels is frequently met with in Tagalog words. For the purposes of pronunciation they do not constitute diphthongs or triphthongs in the English prosodical sense, as each vowel preserves its proper sound, ua, uo, ui, iu, sometimes forming syllables by themselves; tíua, "laughter"; gaurí, "skill"; gaurá, "work"; íua, "dagger", bituín, "star".

The accent in relation to the structure and meaning of words.

Some knowledge can be derived with regard to the accented syllable of a word by considering its structure and meaning. As general rules which, of course, admit of many exceptions, the following are laid down:

Acute (ictus) words are:

Root-words ending in a consonant, both syllables, or the last two syllables of which are equal or similar in structure. Examples: camcam, "to take away"; tastás, "to unsew"; bulac- lae, "flower"; calisquis, "fin of fishes"; haloquipquip, "folding of the arms".

Root-words or derivatives the last two syllables of which end in ay; as baybáy, "sand"; talaytáy, "to circulate".

Root-words and derivatives ending in a consonant preceded by one vowel and two consonants; as tampal, "slap"; baloctot, "intermingled".

Grave words are:

Polysyllabic root-words ending in consonants and consisting of two equal dysyllabic parts; as gonamgónam, "to muse", galang-gálang, "reverence".

Dysyllabic root-words ending in vowels and consisting of two equal parts, as coco, "lukewarm"; caca, colloquial word for "eldest brother"; pipi, "mute", "dumb".

Derivatives from acute or grave root-words when they have been enlarged by a suffix, as from bató, "stone"; batohin, "made of stone"; from samá, "accompanying"; samahan, "accompanied"; panhic, "going upstairs"; panhican, "staircase". To this rule some imperatives are an exception.

No rule can be laid down for words not comprised in the above divisions.

As for the meaning, generally words denoting celerity are acute; as tacbó, "to run"; lipad or lipar, "to fly"; those importing motion in quite a general sense are acute or grave according to the idea which is to be conveyed with regard to the degree of acceleration in the action. Thus, lácad is grave and means "to walk" in the natural way; while maglacad, which means "to walk much", "to walk" swiftly"; is acute. Words denoting slowness are generally grave in accent, as; tiguil, "to calm", "to refrain from"; tahan, "to stop".

PECULIARITIES.

Under certain conditions to be explained in the text, words having a particular mutual dependence are linked to each other by means of particles or connectives adhering thereto or placed between them, either to suit euphony or to impart a particular relation. The ligaments made use of for this purpose, are g, suffixed to words ending in n, when they should be linked to the following one; ng, affixed to those ending in one or two equal vowels, and na, placed between those ending in a consonant (n excepted) or two different vowels, and the following word to be linked thereto. Ay or ai, y or i is likewise a connective to be placed between words entailing a verbal relation.

The illustrations hereafter will convey to the student's mind the understanding which is required at this stage. Bayan, "town"; malaquí, "large"; bayang malaquí, "large town"; mabuti, “good”; taús “man”, “person”; mabuting taús or tauóng mabuti, “good fellow”; malicot, “naughty”; anac, son or daughter”; malicot na anac, or anac na malicot, “naughty son or daughter”; bundoc “mountain”; matías, “high”; ang bundoc ay matías, “the mountain is high”.

At or t is sometimes a connective used between causal conjunctions and the word following, as in Di acó paroróon, sapagca,t, acó,i, may gautá, “I shall not go there, because I have business”.

Some words undergo certain contractions on account of briefness or euphony. In ay and at, “and”; for instance, a, may be dropped when the word immediately preceding ends in a vowel. If it ends in n, both the n of the word and the a of ligaments may be dropped, the fashion in such case having established the putting of the t or y-i remaining of the ligament between two commas; (1) as in gabí,t, árao, for gabí at árao, “night and day”; carunu gan,t, cabanalan instead of carunungán at cabanalan, “wisdom and virtue”; Si Pedro,i, mabuti, instead of Si Pedro ay mabuti, “Petter is good”; iyá,i, mahaba, instead of iyáin ay mahaba, “that is long”.

READING and PRONOUNCING EXERCISE.

Reading in Tagalog is therefore as simple as in Spanish: it merely consists in reading and pronouncing every letter (except u when it is inserted between g or q and certain vowels as stated), according with the sound assigned to it, in the chapter devoted to Orthography in this work.

The student, before passing beyond to the Grammar, should try to comprehend as fully as he can the foregoing remarks and to read and pronounce correctly the following exercise:

Tagalog.	Malaquíng	totoó	ang	catungculan

(1) This work not being reformatory in kind, we confine ourselves to the teaching of the language as it is at present written; but there is little doubt that Tagalog requires reformation in this and some other points.

GRAMMAR.

FIRST LESSON.

UNANG PAGARAL.

THE ARTICLE.

The definite article the, in the singular, is expressed in Tagalog by ang, which may be said to stand for the English definite article, though it is rather a particle capable of expressing many other relations. Ang is used only before common, abstract, and proper nouns of things. Proper nouns of persons (personal names) take in Tagalog, contrary to the English usage, their proper definite article Si. As for other proper nouns, natives say: Ang Pasig, ang Pilipinas, ang Maynila, ang Cavite; "The Pasig," "the Philippines," "Manila," "Cavite." The indefinite article a or an may be expressed in Tagalog by the numeral adjective "one," isá.

The (sing.)	Ang.
Have you?	{ ¿Mayróon ca po? (indeterminate.) { ¿Na sa iyò bagá? (determinate.)
Yes Sir, I have.	{ Oo, po, mayróon acó. (indet.) { Na sa aquin po. (det.)
I have (some.)	Mayróon.
Sir.	Po.
Have you any hat?	¿Mayróon ca pong sambalelo ? (1)
Yes, I have a hat.	Oo, mayróon acóng sambalelo .
Have you my bread?	¿Na sa iyò bagá and tinápay co?
Yes, I have your bread.	Oo, na sa aquin ang tinápay mo.

Common, abstract, and proper nouns of things in the singular, possessive pronouns and clauses serving as subject to a sentence, are generally preceded by the particle or article ang.

The subject of a sentence, whether a noun or pronoun, may be placed either before or after the verb it governs, the order being governed by considerations of euphony.

May-óin and may (its root) are constructed between two nominatives. Mayróon may be used alone, may, always requires some object of possession following.

(1) Corruption of the Spanish word sombrero, "hat."

To have, as an active verb, followed by a noun in an indeterminate sense, is translated by may or mayroon. (1) If the noun refers to some specific or particular thing, it is translated with na and the objective case (ablative of place) of the noun or personal pronoun which is the subject in English, the literal translation being "your bread is with me". Sa is sometimes used before cay.

Numeral adjectives are not considered as determinative, unless they themselves are otherwise determined by some word having a determinative character. Example: Mayroon acóng dalauáng paco, "I have two nails"; ang dalauáng paco ang na sa aquin, "I have the two nails". (Literally, the two nails are with me.)

Properly speaking, the interrogative sense is not indicated in Tagalog by any sign or particular manner of construction; but by the employment of such words as bagí, cayá, etc., their use being optional. The interrogative signs, taken from Spanish, are however, largely used. They should be placed both at the beginning and at the end of the sentence. The tone of the voice, alone, may sometimes mark the interrogation sufficiently.

What table have you?	{ ¿Anòng lamesa ang na sa iyò?
I have your table.	{ Ang lamesa mo. { ang na sa aquin. Ang iyòng lamesa }
What? (nominative).	{ ¿Anò?; ¿anò bagá.

(1) May and mayroon may be written mey and meyroon and pronounced accordingly.

(2) The Spanish word mesa used with the article.

The possessive pronouns and the possessive case of the personal pronouns are alike and have two forms, one prepositive and the other postpositive.

Interrogative pronouns take sometimes the article when they come alone in the sentence; but it is a practice which is not to be recommended.

Ang is likewise a relative pronoun standing for "what" or "that which", as in jalíng sambalelo ang na sa iyò? and similar cases.

FIRST EXERCISE.

Have you any bread? Yes, Sir, I have some bread. Have you my bread? I have your bread. Have you the meat? I have the meat. Have you your meat? I have my meat. Have you the salt? I have the salt. Have you my salt? I have your salt. Have you the sugar? I have the sugar. Have you the water? I have the water. Have you your water? I have my water. What paper have you? I have my paper.

SECOND LESSON.

YCALAUANG PAGARAL.

GENDER.

Inflexion for gender is unknown in Tagalog, and the sexes are generally distinguished by the addition of such words as lalaqui, "male"; babaye, "female", in the case of living things. In a few instances, the distinction in gender is expressed by different words, as in amá, "father"; inà, "mother, etc.

John.	Si Juan.
Ortiz.	Si ortiz.
Robinson.	Si Señor Robinson.
Mr. Branagan	{ Si Señor Branagan.
	{ Ang Señor Branagan.
Dr. Martin.	{ Si Doctor Martín.
	{ Ang Doctor Martín.

Christian names and surnames in the singular and nominative case require the particle Si before them. When used with titles, they may be preceded by the same particle or by that of common nouns, according to whether stress is laid on the name or on the title.

The father.	Ang amá.
The mother.	Ang inà.
The brother.	Ang kapatid na lalaqui.
The sister.	Ang kapatid na babaye, (1).
Eldest brother. (first born).	Coya, caca. { (colloquial names)
Eldest sister.	Ati, ate. }
My eldest brother.	Si coya, Si caca.
My eldest sister.	Si ate.
My father.	Si amá.
My mother.	Si inà.

The article Si of proper personal nouns may be also used before common nouns to indicate living beings unique in kind and pertaining to the speaker. When animals are named after persons or bear specific appellations by which they are known, such nouns may likewise take Si in the nominative. Thus, of a horse known as Babieca, may be said, Si Babieca. The use of Si in reference to a person who is not an intimate relation of the speaker is mockery.

(1) Babaye, "woman", "female" may be written babayi, babâe batây.

Thou, you (sing.)	Icáo, ca; icáo po (polite.)
House.	Báhay.
Rice-field, farm.	Búquid, or, búquir.
Book.	Libro (Sp.)
Power, authority.	Capangyarihan.
Strength, force.	Cabagsican, calacasan.
God.	Dios , (Sp.); Bathala, (Tag.)
Leaf.	{ Dahon, (Tag.); pohas , (corr. from Sp. { word hoja , "leaf.")

Icáo, is used alone and precedes the verb; ca, follows it.

The house of John.	An cay Juang báhay.
John's house.	Ang báhay ni Juan.
The power of God.	Ang capangyarihan nang Dios.
God's power.	Ang sa Dios na capangyarihan.
The leaf of the book.	{ Ang dahon nang libro. { Ang sa librong dahon.
Book-leaf.	Dahon libro.
Love.	Sintá.
Loving (pres. participle.)	Pag-fbig.

Common and proper nouns of persons in the possessive case are immediately preceded by the particles nang or sa, ni or cay respectively; sa and cay being used when the object of possession comes before the possessor.

In nouns common to both genders, the distinction in sex is made by adding lalaqui (male) for the masculine, babaye (female) for the feminine.

Dios is used as a common noun.

Compound nouns, in which one of the member qualifies the other, are generally formed in Tagalog in a manner contrary to that of English, viz.: by naming first the principal noun and second the qualifier, no ligament being employed if the first member ends in a consonant.

DECLENSIONS. (1)

The particles used in place of articles are declined thus:

Article for common, and proper nouns of things in the singular.

Nom.	The.	Ang.
Poss.	Of the.	{ Sa, nang; nã. { (contract). (2)
	To the.	Sa.
	The.	Nang, sa.
Object.	{ Cause or place { Instrument.	In, by, at the.	Sa.
		By, through, with the.	Nang.

(1) For a better understanding of this matter we consider the English objective case divided into dative case (indirect object), accusative (direct object) and ablative as in Latin, and the ablative case subdivided into local and instrumental.

(2) Nang is contracted into nã. Such contraction, although frequently met with in other books will not be found in this grammar, as it will be destructive of the prosody and the student might be induced into a false pronunciation thereof.

Article for proper nouns of persons, in the singular.

Nom.	(1).	Si.
Poss.	Of.	Cay, ni.

		inst.		Nang.
		By, with the.

Declension with a proper noun of person.

Nom.	Peter.	Si Pedro.
Poss.	Peter's, of Peter.	Cay Pedrong.... ni Pedro.
Object. (all its divisions.)	Peter; by, to, etc. Peter.	Cay Pedro.

Not to have (active verb), not to possess; there is (or are) not. (indefinite).	}	Ualá.
To have (active verb.); there is (or are).	}	May, mayróon.
I have no table.		Ualá acóng lamesa.
		Acó.i. ualáng lamesa.
Have you not the meat?		¿Ualá bagá sa iyò ang lamán or lamangcati?
There is some salt.		May asín, mayróon asín.
There is no sugar.		Ualáng asúcal.
He or she.		Siyá.
Is there any paper on the table?		¿Mayróon bagáng papel sa lamesa?.
There is no sugar in the water.		Ualáng asúcal sa túbig.
Is there any house in the farm?		¿May bahay cayá sa búquid?
There is none.		Ualá.
Have you the leaf of the book?		¿Na sa iyò bagá ang dahon nang libro?
I have it.		Na sa aquin nga.
Have I any book-leaf?		¿Mayróon bagá acóng dahon libro?

May is used without any ligament. As for mayróon and ualá, when they come before a pronoun, the nominative of a sentence, the ligament passes over to the pronoun. If the nominative comes before, the ligament may be employed. ¿Mayróon nang papel bagá? Ualá acóng papel. Otherwise: ¿Icaó.i. mayróong papel? acó.i. ualáng papel.

Nga is a particle largely used in Tagalog, which carries the sense to its most complete expression, as in. na sa aquin nga; "I have it indeed"; Ualá nga, "There is absolutely none". It should be carefully distinguished from na.

(1) There is no equivalent in English.

When the subject in a sentence comes before the verb, the verbal ligament ay-i should be placed between. No ligament is used in the contrary case.

SECOND EXERCISE.

Has my father any salt? He has none. Have you a mother? I have. Has the king any sister? He has none. Has the bishop any brother? He has. Has John any water? John has some water. Has he any house? Certainly, he has a house. Has God any power? Yes, indeed, He has power. Has your love any force? Yes, my love has force. Has God love for man? Yes, God has love for man. Is there any book at your house? Yes, at my house there is a book. Has your mother's love any force? Yes, indeed. Which book have you? I have Peter's book. What farm has your father? He has the king's farm.

THIRD LESSON.

YCATLONG PAG-ARAL

NUMBER, AND THE ADJECTIVE.

A definite plural number is expressed in Tagalog by the use of the particle mañya or such collective numeral adjectives as páwa, lahat, dilán, "all." Sometimes, however, the number remains indefinite and should be gathered from the context. When there is nothing to show whether singular or plural is meant, the noun may generally be assumed to be in the plural or used in an indefinite sense.

Anything which is good, the idea of goodness.	Buti, (root-word).
Good. (adj.).	Mabuti.
Anything bad, the idea of wickedness.	Samá, (root-word).
Bad. (adj.)	Masamá.
Anything pretty, the idea of prettiness.	Dikit, (root-word).
Pretty.	Mariquit.
Anything beautiful, the idea of beauty.	Gandá, (root-word.)
Beautiful. (adj.)	Magandá.
Ugly, wicked.	Pañit, lupit.
Anything old.	Tandá, (root-word.)
Old (in age.) (adj.)	Matanda.
Man, person, creature.	Tau.

Child.	Bata.
Horse.	Cabayo, (corr. from Span. word ca- balle.)
Mare.	Cabayong babaye.
Judicious, prudent.	Mabait.
The looking-glasses.	Ang mañga salamín.

(1) Mañga, will often be met with contracted into mga; but for the same reasons as explained for ng in the second note of the preceding lesson, such contraction will not be used in this grammar.

The men, the persons, the people.	Ang mañga tauò.

One.	Ysá.
Two.	Dalauá.
One person, a person.	Ysang tauò.
Two children.	Dalauang bata.

Common nouns and adjectives are put in the plural by using the particle mañga, to be placed between that which indicates the relation of case and the noun or any attribute thereof, unless the number is indicated by a numeral adjective. Nouns in the vocative case (nominative of address) or in apposition, drop ang in the plural.

The adjectives formed by a root-word and the prefix ma, may, also, be put in the plural by repeating the first syllable of the root if such syllable consists of one or two letters and the first two letters thereof if it consists of more, the use of mañga being optional.

The nominative case of the first person pronoun has three forms in the plural: tayo, camí, quitá. Tayo, should be used when both the speaker and the person addressed are included in the notion; camí, when only the speaker is concerned. Thus, an American speaking to a native must say; tayo; i, mamamatáy 'we are mortal'; caming mañga americano, i, mapuputí, "we, americans, are white.

Quitá is exclusive or dual; as exclusive, it means, you (thou) and I alone; as dual, it is possessive with regard to the speaker and nominative for the person spoken to; it is somewhat as, thou art... by me.

Root is the term which denotes but the simplest idea of a thing, a quality or an action, and which requires some elaboration to express the various relations, the thing, quality or action is capable of. There are substantive, adjective and verbal roots. Roots possessing substantive force may be made to mean a quality by prefixing the particle ma, as seen in the above instances, they being thus converted into as many adjectives. Roots having an adjective force may be, and generally are, expressed without any elaboration.

Ma is the prefix most frequently used for making adjectives from substantive roots. Adjectives are also made from verbal roots by employing other affixes in several ways, to be explained in subsequent lessons.

The illustrations in the vocabulary show that adjectives in Tagalog may come before or after the nouns they qualify.

DECLENSIONS.

The article in the plural.

Nom.		The (plural).	Ang mañga.
Poss.		Of the "	Nang mañga. sa mañga.
	Dat.	To the "	Sa mañga.
	Acc.	The "	Nang mañga. sa mañga.
Object.	Abl.	local and causal.	In, at, from, etc. the. Sa mañga.

	Dat.	To the.	Sa.
	Acc.	The.	Nang. sa.
Object.	Abl.	local and causal.	From. in. Houses. mañga bahay.
		instrumental.	With, by, from. the. Sa. Nang.

Declension of a noun in the plural with an adjective.

Nom.		The.	Ang.
Poss.		Of the.	Nang. sa.
	Dat.	To the.	Sa.
	Acc.	The.	Nang. sa. mañga asong pífigit.
Object.	Abl.	local and causal.	In at. ugly dogs. Sa. mañga pífigit na aso.
		instrumental.	With, by, etc. the. Nang.

Proper nouns have no plural. It is, however, a peculiarity of Tagalog that proper nouns of persons should be preceded by Siná, the plural of Si, not when persons bearing the same name are meant; but when the principal person, the one who is as head of the family or association is to be represented together with his or her intimate relations or with those connected with him in other respects. Siná is declined as follows:

Nom.	Siná.
Poss.	Niná. caná.
Object. (all its divisions.)	Caná.

So, for instance, "Jane and her family" (or persons in any intimate connection with her), is declined as follows:

Nom.	{ Jane and her people.	Siná.	} Juana.
Poss.		Niná, caná.
Object. (all its divisions.)		Caná.

Edward and his people.	Siná Eduardo.
The farm of Thomas' family.	{ Ang búquid niná Tomás.
Astor & Coy.	Ang caná Tomás na búquid.
To Russell & Coy.	Siná Astor.
	Caná Rusel.

THIRD EXERCISE.

Have we understanding? Yes, we have. Have they any good clothes? No, they have none. Have you (plur.) any bad looking-glasses? Yes, we have some bad ones. Have I your pretty horses? Yes, you have them. Have the judicious children my beautiful dogs? Yes, they have your beautiful dogs. Have they my fine books? No. Which hats have we? You have Peter's hats. Has John my old brothers' good horses? He has none. Has Peter's father my children's old horses? He has them not. Have old people love for children? Yes, Sir, they have love for children. Have John's family any good houses? No, they have no good houses, but (1) they have some pretty farms. What farms have Peter's family? Peter's family have beautiful farms. Have they the ugly houses of John's family? They have not the ugly houses of John's family. Are there any books on the tables? There are no books on the tables. Have your sisters any old dogs? No, they have no old dogs.

(1) But, cundi.

FOURTH LESSON.

YCAAPAT NA PAGARAL.

THE LIGAMENTS, AND THE VERB TO BE.

As has been indicated in foregoing chapters, the Tagalog language is distinguished from other Malay dialects by the employment of certain endings or separate particles intended to link words, clauses and sentences to each other. The proper use of such connectives or linking-particles is more a matter of practice than of theory, as euphony, in many cases, determines whether they shall be used or not.

Hereafter we give such explanations as may be useful at this stage; but this matter being both so important and abstruse, we refer the student to the sixty ninth lesson, where some further rules are given on the subject.

The mutual relation between a substantive and its qualifying word should be indicated by a ligament added to, or following the first word, unless the second be a monosyllable. According as the first vocable, whether the substantive or the qualifying word, ends in n, one or two different vowels or a consonant (except n), the ligament employed should be g, ng or na, respectively. Examples: batang malicot or malicot na bata, "naughty boy"; iyóng bahay or bahay na, "your (sing.) house"; itóng isa, "this other"; iyáng dalawang libro, "those two books"; anóng tau?, "what person?"; araw na malinao, "clear day".

The subject, be it a noun or a pronoun, of an active affirmative sentence should be linked to the verb by means of ay-i (1) if the subject precedes the verb; but not when this order is inverted. Examples: Acó, i pangmamá, pangmamá acó, "I entered"; ang ibon ay hungmuhuni, hungmuhuni ang ibon, "the bird sings".

Two clauses having mutual connection should likewise be linked by ay-i. Example: Can dumating si Pedro ay umalis ca, "if Peter arrives, go away".

A clause serving as subject of an active affirmative sentence should be linked to the verb in the same way, when such clause precedes the verb, but, ordinarily, not when the order is inverted, as: ang pag-ibig sa Dios ay nagpapapuri sa tau, or, nagpapapuri sa tau ang pag-ibig sa Dios, "to love God ennobles man", or, "it ennobles man to love God". However, the ligament may be preserved even when the subject follows the verb, when for the sake of greater emphasis the verb is preceded by a relative pronoun or used in the participial sense in Tagalog, as: ang nagpapapuri sa tau ay ang pag-ibig sa Dios, "what ennobles man is to love God".

In compound active sentences the principal and the secondary sentence are linked to each other by means of at, when a conjunction of cause is used, as: hiudi acó nacababasa sa pagca,t, ualá acóng salamin, "I cannot read, because I have no spectacles".

1) The student is notified that ay-i, ay-n, ay-o, or ay is by some pronounced ah-ay, or rather in a manner equally sharing of both sounds.

When an interrogative word is used to start a sentence, the verbal ligament is replaced by the nominal one, which, in this case, stands for the article or the relative pronoun, as: ¿sinong nagnacao?, "who stole?", ¿anóng sabì mo? "what do you say?"; literally, "who is he who stole", "what is that which you say?", it being indifferent to say, sinong or sino ang nagnacao?, anóng or ano ang sabì mo?; the latter forms are however preferable as being both more idiomatic and emphatic.

The ligaments are not generally used before monosyllabic words or expletive particles, nor before the particles serving to establish the relation of case, for instance: damit sa arao arao, "daily wearing apparel"; lalaqui man, babaye man, "be it man or woman"; ang caloualhatian ó gloria bagá, "bliss, that is to say, glory"; itó,i, caná Pedro, "this is for Peter and his family".

The ligament is also dropped before the possessive pronouns if put after the nouns they qualify, as; salapí niyá, caniyáng salapí; "his or her money".

The numeral adjectives drop the ligament when they come before the restrictive prefix ca, as in ápat catauó "four persons only".

No ligament is used between the subject and the verb if the former is preceded by some negative or prohibitive particle; for instance: Di acó cungmacáin, "I do not eat"; houag lumácad, "don't walk"; hindí camí magnanácao, "we are not thieves".

The verbal ligament may also be dropped for euphony' sake if the word serving as the subject ends in i. Ex. Ang pantali napatid; "the tying rope parted".

We have said elsewhere that the a of ay and at may be dropped when coming after words ending in a vowel, and that if they end in n, both the n and the a may be dropped. This is not, however, the case when at and ay are followed by a monosyllabic word, as, for instance, in sa cagaliñgan at sa cabanalan; "for goodness and virtue"; ang calolóua, ay sa Dios, "the soul is for God".

The preceding remarks refer to ligaments considered as euphonic characters; but they may, too, express by themselves essential and very important relations of other kind. Thus, to be, in its copulative sense, when it takes a noun or an adjective for predicate, is expressed by the ligament ay-i; and the endings g, ng or the particle na stand sometimes for relative pronouns and cannot, therefore, be dropped.

"To be", whenever it asserts presence is translated by sa and a noun of place in the local ablative case, or by prefixing na to any word demonstrative in character.

Whenever "to be" is the copula and has no other value than to assert some attribute of the noun is not translated in Tagalog by any specific word, but the meaning may be conveyed in several ways. If a noun or an adjective is used as the predicate of another noun or pronoun, it is enough to insert ay-i between them to indicate the copula. As ay-i is not generally used in interrogative sentences when the subject comes after the verb, the relation is then expressed by some expletive or completive particle. Sometimes the ligaments or the arrangement of words serve to express the same relation of copula, as when a relative pronoun is understood, for instance: ang banal na tauo, "the virtuous man", or, "the man who is virtuous".

FOURTH EXERCISE.

Where is your father? My father is at home. Where is my brother's son? He is at church. Where is their daughter? Their daughter is at church. Where is our son? Our son is at school. Is the child here? No, the child is not here, he is in the country. Are your sister's children there (yonder)? My sister's children are not there (yonder.). Where are they? They are at home. Is it he? It is he. Is it you? (plural) It is not we. Are my mother's brothers there? My mother's brothers are not there, they are at John's. Is the mountain over there? Yes, it is over there. Is your ring a gold one? No, it is a silver one. Is your table a wooden one? No, my table is a glass one. Have your bishops any iron rings? No, they have no iron rings; they have some gold rings. Are our looking-glasses made of silver? No, Sir, they are made of glass. Have you any steel books? No, I have paper books. Have your sisters any wood pens? No, they have no wood pens, they have some steel pens. Have I any wooden hat? No, I have no wooden hat, I have two cotton ones.

FIFTH LESSON.

YCALIMANG PAGARAL

DEMONSTRATIVE PRONOUNS.

The demonstrative pronouns in Tagalog are those treated of in this lesson. They can be used either as adjectives or as true pronouns; when used as adjectives they generally precede the noun which they qualify.

Straw.	Guinigan.
Thread.	Simulid. (root-word, salir , "to spin"; si-sulid , spun).
Stocking.	Medias. (Sp.) (plural).
Half.	Calapati.
Fork.	Tencor. (Sp.).
Leather.	Balat. (Tag.); curo (Sp.).
Shoe, boot.	Sapin. (Tag.); zapato . (corr. from Sp. w. zapato).
Wool, down.	Balahibo. (Tag.); lana (Sp.).
Ribbon.	Sintas. (corr. from Sp. w. cinta); galón (Sp.).
The Earth, (the world).	Ang lupa, ang sangcalupán, sangdaigdigán.
Earth, (matter).	Lupa.
Land.	Cati, catihan.
Gun.	Bartil.
Something, anything.	Anomán, halang na....
Have you anything?	¿Mayroón kang anomán?
I have something.	¿May anomán ka?
Nothing, not anything.	Mayroón, may anomán acó.
I have nothing.	Ualá.
The cloth.	Ualá acóng anomán.
Soap.	Ang cayo.
What (what thing) have you?	Sabón (corr. from Sp. word, jabón).
I have your steel pen.	¿Anò bagá ang na sa iyò?
What (indet.) have you?	¿Ang iyóng plumang patalim ang na sa aquin.
I have some bread.	¿Anóng mayroón ka?
Wine, any kind of liquor.	May tinapay acó.
Coffee.	Alac.
Tea.	Café (Sp.), capé (corr. from Sp. café).
Cheese.	Sá (Chinese).
My candlestick.	Quiso (corr. from Sp. word queso)
String.	Ang squing candelero (Sp).
	¿Ang candelero co. (Tag.), sasaugán).
	Lábid, lúbir, tali.

Tying-string.	Panali (root-word, tali , "tying"); pantalí-
Something good.	Banlá nang mabuti, anomán mabuti.
Anything good.	Anomán mabuti.
This.	Yarí, yerí, itò.
That (that near you).	Yyán, yan.
That (far from the interlocutors).	Yaón, yon.
This book.	{ Yaring libro, yaring librong yarí; itòng
	{ libro, itòng librong itò.
That table. (near you).	Yyáng lamesa, iyáng lamesang iyán.
That church (far away).	{ Yaóng simbahan, yaóng simbahang
	{ yaón.
The neighbour.	Ang caapidbáhay. (1)
Neighbours.	Magcaapibáhay. (two).
Crown.	Pótong or pútong.
Palace.	Palasio. (corr. from Sp. word palacio).

The particle in prefixed to a root beginning with a vowel or inserted between the first consonant and vowel of those beginning with a consonant, or consonants, forms a new word which indicates the result of the action. Thus, from sulid, "to spin"; sinulid, "what has been spun", "the thread".

Sang, is a collective particle which if prefixed to a root indicative of a divisible thing, expresses, with the suffix an, the whole contents thereof. Thus, lupa, "earth;" sanglupán, "the world," "all the inhabitants thereof."

When may is used for "to have" it must be followed by the thing possessed.

"No," in response to a question with the verb "to have" is generally translated by ualá; in response to other questions, hindí is generally used.

Pan, prefixed to a root indicating a manual action, forms the instrument which serves to execute it. Thus, from sulat, "to write;" panulat, "pen;" tali, "to tie;" panali, "tying-rope." The change of s and t into n will be explained in further lessons.

The Tagalog demonstrative pronouns are those in the vocabulary. Yarí or yerí and itò stand for "this;" yarí-yerí is dying away and being rapidly replaced by itò. Yyán, yaón-yon, stand for "that;" iyán, pointing out a thing lying near the person addressed, and yaón-yon pointing out objects far away from both interlocutors. The plural is formed by immediately preceding them with the pluralizing particle mañga. Tagalog employs the repetition of the demonstrative pronouns in the nominative to render them emphatic.

Ca, is one of the most important prefix particles and is used in several ways. When ca is prefixed to nouns or verbs denoting, respectively, persons or collective reciprocal actions, it denotes one of the corresponding parties. If the compound so formed is prefixed by mag, it is made plural without requiring the employment of mañga, which can, however, be used, and indicates two, at least, of the parties.

Declension of the demonstrative pronouns.

Nom.	This.	Yarí, yerí.	Ytò.
Poss.	Of this.	Dinì sa, nirí.	Ditò sa, nitò.

(1). A compound from apir "to join", báhay, "house" and ca, particle indicating companionship and restricting the sense to one alone of the corresponding parties.

Object.	{ Dat. Acc. Abl.	{ local and causal. instrum- ental.	To this. This.	Dinì sa. Dinì sa, nirí.	Dit' sa. Ditò sa, nitò.
			At, in, upon, etc. this. By, with, etc. this.	{ Dinì sa. Nirí.	{ Ditò sa. Nitò.
			THAT.	NEAR.	FAR.
Nom.			That.	Yyán.	Yaón.	Yon.
Poss			Of that.	{ Diyán sa, niyán.	{ Dóon sa, niyaón.	{ Niyóon. Niyón.
Object.	{ Dat. Acc. Abl.	{ local and causal. instrum- ental.	To that.	Diyán sa, Diyán sa, niyán.	Dóon sa, Dóon sa, niyaón.	Niyóon. Niyón.
			In, at, upon, etc. that. By, with, etc. that.	{ Niyán sa. Niyán.	{ Dóon sa. Niyaón.	{ Niyóon or niyón.

In the possessive and direct object cases the particle sa, which precedes the nouns, follows the demonstrative pronouns, the reason being that it refers to the thing pointed out and not to the pronoun. The two forms of the possessive case should be used in the way and cases already explained for those of the personal pronouns.

This person.	Ytòng tauò, itòng tauò itò (emphatic).
Of that child, that child's.	Niyáng bata, niyáng batang iyán. (emph.).
To or for that bishop.	{ Dóon sa obispo, dóon sa obispong yon (emph.)
These men (persons).	{ Ytòng mañga tauò. { Ytòng mañga tauòng itò. (emph.).
Those dogs' meat.	{ Diyán sa mañga asong carne. { Ang carne niyán mañga aso.
To or for those children.	{ Dóon sa mañga bata. { Dóon sa mañga batang yaón.
Those books (object).	{ Niyaón mañga libro. { Niyáon mañga librong yaón.

It should be noticed that owing to the inflective character of the demonstrative pronouns in their declension, the relation of case is expressed by the pronoun if it comes before the noun, and by the latter if coming first. Thus, "that boy's book," is rendered, ang libro niyáng bata, or, ang libro nang bata iyán, and so forth for the other cases.

FIFTH EXERCISE.

Have you my gold ribbon? I have it not. Have you anything? I have nothing. Have you my steel pen? I have it not. Which pen have you? I have my good silver pen. What have you? I have nothing. Have you my steel or my silver pen? I have your steel pen. Have you my soap?

I have it not. Have you my candlestick? I have it not. Which candlestick have you? I have my gold candlestick. Have you my string? I have it not. Have you my good wine? I have it not. Have you that book? I have it not. Have you that meat? I have it. Have you anything good? I have nothing good. What have you pretty? I have the pretty gold ribbon. Have you anything ugly? I have nothing ugly, I have something fine. What have you fine? I have the fine dog. Have you your glass pen? I have your fork. Has he this or that crown? He has this, he has not that. Have my sisters the clothes of these children? They have not these children's clothes, they have those of their brothers. Is that pen for that man? That pen is not for that man, it is for those women.

SIXTH LESSON.

YCAANIM NA PAGARAL.

INTERROGATIVE PRONOUNS.

The following are the interrogative pronouns in Tagalog: ¿ano? "what?", "which?"; ¿alín? "which?"; (discriminative), and ¿sino? "who?". The first two may be used as adjectives and may be preceded by the article ang; sino can neither be used as an adjective nor, as a general rule, takes the article.

The merchant, the tradesman.	{ Ang mapagcalácal, mafiñgalácal. (from calácal , "merchandise"); ang comerciante (Sp.)
The Frenchman.	{ Ang taga Pransia , ang pransés (corr. from Sp. word Francia and francés .)
Umbrella.	Páyong.
Corkscrew.	{ Panbucás nang prongo (Tag.); tirabusón . (corr. from Sp. word tirabuzón).
Carpenter.	Anloague.
Nail. (iron spike).	Paco.
Hammer.	Pamocpoc (root, pocpoc , "to strike").
Beer.	Serbesa . (corr. from Sp. word cerveza).
Ink.	Tinta . (Sp.)
Honey.	Polot, pulut.
Walking-stick.	Tongcod, tungcod or tungcor.
Thimble.	Dedal . (Sp.)
Needle.	Caráyom.
Pin.	Aspíler (corr. from Sp. word alfiler .)
Watch.	{ Orasán (corr. from Sp. word horas and an to denote the place where hours are marked.)
The Englishman.	{ Ang inglés (Sp.); ang taga Ynglater-ra , (Sp.)
Sheep, ram.	Tupa (from Sp. topar , "to butt.")
Mutton.	Lamán nang topa.
Butter, lard.	Mantica (corr. from Sp. word manteca).
Button.	Botón . (Spanish) or bitones ,
Bed-sheet, quilt,	Cómot .
Neither.....nor.	{ Man. (always postponed). Hindí man.....hindí man or rin. hindí.....hindí namán.
Neither I nor you.	{ Acó man, icáo man. Hindí man acó, icáo ay, hindí rin.
Have you the needle or the pin?	{ ¿Na sa iyò bagá ang caráyom ó ang aspíler.?

I have neither the needle nor the pin.	Ualá sa aquin ang caráyom man, ang aspiler man.
Who (sing.).	¿Sino? ¿sino bagá?
Who has? (indet.).	{ ¿Sinong mayróon?, ¿sino ang mayróon?; ¿sinong may?
Who has? (det.).	¿Na sa canino? (bagá).
Knife, cutlass.	Itac, (Tag.), cuchillo (Sp.).
Who has any knife?	{ ¿Sino cayá ang may itac? ¿Sinong mayróon itac?
Who has the knife?	¿Na sa canino ang itac?
The man has a knife.	Ang tauò ay may itac.
The man has the knife.	Na sa tauò ang itac.
Purse.	Sòpot or súput.
Who has the purse?	¿Na sa canino ang súput?
The woman has the purse.	Ang súput ay na sa babaye.
Who has it?	¿Na sa canino bagá? (ang súput).
Peter and John have it.	Na cay Pedro,t, cay Juan. (ang súput).
Or.	O, (Sp.); cun. (Tag.) (little used).
Either.....or.	Maguín.....maguín,
Be it.....or.	Man.....man.
Either by night or by day.	Maguín sa gabi, maguín sa árao.
Either at home or at church.	Maguín sa báhay, maguín sa simbahan.
Be it man or woman.	Lalaquí man, babaye man.
What countryman are you?	{ ¿Taga sáan ca? (bagá)
What is your country?	Taga España acó; acó,i, taga España ;
I am a Spaniard.	Castila acó; acó,i, castila.
My country is Spain.	{ Español (Sp.); Castila (corr. from Sp. word Castilla)
Spaniard.	{ ¿Taga sáan cayá yaón mañga tauóng yaón?
Of what country are those people?	Yaóng mañga tauò ay mañga insic.
Those people are Chinese.	{ Yaóng mañga tauóng yaó,i, taga Song- song.
Those people's country is China.	Vaso (Sp.).
Glass. (tumbler).	Bigás.
Rice.	{ Salop.
Ganta { a measure about 1/25 of the } Peck. { English bushel.

The particle mapag, prefixed to a verbal or substantive root, forms the frequentative noun for what the root means; man, under the same conditions, forms a verbal noun indicative of what a person is engaged in customarily.

Taga, placed before s an or the name of a place or country denotes origin.

An, affixed to a root denotes place, or the thing or person on which or on whom the action is accomplished.

The fashion is going on somewhere among natives to have the noun subject of an active sentence, again represented at the end by the third person pronoun. Ang tauò ay may itac siyá, "the man has a knife"; yaóng mañga tauóng yaó,i, mañga insic silá, "those people are Chinese". The student is hereby cautioned against this manner of expression which, although not entirely ungrammatical, should be used sparingly.

Wood house.

Báhay na cáhoy.

Gold ring.

Singsing na guintó.

Steel pen.

{ Plumang patalim, asevo (Sp. word acero corr.)

Compound English nouns one of which expresses the matter a thing is made of, are generally expressed in Tagalog by means of the ligaments, the thing preceding the matter as above.

One glass of water. Ysàng vasong túbig.
Two gantas of rice. Dalauàng salop na bigás.

The relation between continent and contents is likewise expressed by the linking particles.

Clothing for children. Damit sa mañga bata.
Writing-table. Lamesang sulatán, lamesa sa pag súlat.

Compound nouns one member of which denotes the use for which the other is intended, are generally translated by inserting the particle sa, which is also used as a translation of the preposition "for".

Declension of interrogative pronouns.

Nom.	Who?	¿Sino?
Poss.	{ Of whom? Whose?	{ ¿Canino?, ¿nino?.
Object. (all its forms)	Whom?	¿Sa canino?

Nom.	What?	¿Anò?, ¿ang anò?

Obj. {	Abl. { local and causal, instru- mental.	In, at, etc. which?	¿Sa alín?.
		By, with, etc. which?	¿Nang alín?.

Sino, is used for persons, and is not generally preceded by the article. The second form of the possessive case should be used only when the question has not been heard or understood.

The plural is formed either by repeating the pronoun or by using the pluralizing particle before or after the noun to which it makes reference, if there be any, as is frequently the case when "to be" enters in English to put a question, as shown in the following illustrations:

Nom.	{ Who (plural) are those men? (people).	{ ¿Sino-sino yaóng tauò? ¿Mañga sinong tauò yaón? (somewhat improper). ¿Sinong mañga tauò yaón?.
------	--	--

Poss.	{ Whose (plural) are those rings?.	{ ¿Canicanino (1) iyán mañga singsing?.
Dat.	{ For whom (plural) are those hats?.	{ ¿Sa canicanino bagá yaón mañga sam-balilong yaón?.
		{ ¿Anò anòng papel itò?

		{ ¿Nang anò anòng báhay, itòng mañga pacong itò?
What kind of houses are these nails of?		{ ¿Nang mañga anòng báhay, itòng mañga pacong itò?. (somewhat improper).
		{ ¿Nang anòng mañga báhay itò mañga pacong itò?
Of the wood houses.		{ Sa mañga báhay na cáhoy. (nang, may also be used, although not so properly).
Which candlesticks have you?		{ ¿Alín-alíng candelero ang na sa iyò?
		{ ¿Mañga alíng candelero ang na sa iyò?
		{ ¿Alíng mañga candelero ang na sa iyò?
I have the bishop's candlesticks.		{ Ang sa obispo mañga candelero ang na sa aquin.
		{ Ang mañga candelero nang obispo ang na sa aquin.
		{ ¿Sa alín-alíng mañga hari, i.òng mañga pótong na itò?
For which kings are these crowns?		{ ¿Sa alíng mañga hari, itòng mañga pótong na itò?
		{ ¿Sa mañga alíng hari i.òng mañga pótong na itò?

The possessive case with sa should preferably be used in answering a question.

Alín may serve for persons and things; anò, only for things.

Who are you? (sing.).	¿Sino ca? (bagá).
Who are they?	¿Sino-sino (bagá) silá?
What do you want? (sing.).	¿Anò ca?, ¿anò ca bagá?
What are you doing here?	{ ¿Aanò ca ditò?, ¿anò ca ditò?, ¿nag-aanò ca ritò?.
What is his business there?	¿Aanò siyá dóon?, ¿nagaanò siyá róon?
What do you wish?	¿Anòng íbig mo?
I wish.	Ybig co.
You (sing.) wish.	Ybig mo.
He or she wishes.	Ybig niyá.
We wish.	Ybig natin, íbig namin.
You (plural) wish.	Ybig ninyò.
They wish.	Ybig nilá.

Ybig, in this sense, is a passive and invariable verb for to "wish", "to desire."

Natives avoid as much as they can the employment of third person pronouns in reference to things. They generally repeat the noun or

(1) It is a general rule that repetitions of syllables or words for various purposes in Tagalog do not pass beyond, respectively, the second letter or second syllable thereof. Thus, canicanino, instead of caninocanino, since canino is a three-syllable word.

try to construct in such a manner as to render it unnecessary to use the pronoun. Examples: ¿mabuti bagá ang libro?, "is the book good?"; mabuti ñga, "it is good," "certainly, it is;" instead of mabuti siyá.

SIXTH EXERCISE

Has the king the glass or the steel pen? The king has neither the glass nor the steel pen. Which pen has the bishop? The bishop has the fine pen. Have you the stocking? You have neither the stocking nor the pin. Has the Englishman the corkscrew? The Englishman has neither the corkscrew nor the needle. Is the merchant here? No, he is not here. Has the Frenchman my umbrella? He has not your umbrella. Is the corkscrew on the table? The carpenter has it. Who has their hammer? The carpenter has neither the hammer nor the nail. Which merchant has any beer? The merchant of my town has two glasses of beer. Whose ink is that? It is my brother's. What honey have the Englishmen? The Englishmen have some good honey. Which walking-stick has your mother's daughter? My mother's daughter has no walking-stick at all, she has her thimble, her needle, her pin and my watch. Are there any sheep in Spain? Yes, there are some. Is mutton good? It is very good. Who has my mother's bed-sheets? Peter has them. Is my knife made of iron? No, it is made of steel. For which person is that purse? That purse is for my sisters. Are you Spaniards? Yes, we are Spaniards. Who have my rice? The Englishmen have it. Is that ganta yours or my son's? That ganta is neither yours nor his. Where is John? John is not here, he is either at church or at school. Is he not at home? He is at home. What is your (pl.) country? Our country is France. What countrymen are those people? They are from this country. Are those people Chinese? They are not Chinese. This house is not a wooden one. Those looking-glasses are not silver. These rings are not gold. What are you, gentlemen? We are carpenters.

SEVENTH LESSON. YCAPITONG PAGARAL.

PERSONAL AND POSSESSIVE PRONOUNS.

Declensions are given hereafter of all the Tagalog personal pronouns from which the possessive ones are derived. That of the third person has three dictions in the plural; Tayo, Camí, Quitá or catá, "we". Tayo is used when the person addressed is intended to be included. Camí, on the contrary, like the royal "WE" in English, excludes the person addressed and is therefore the correct pronoun to use in prayers addressed to the Deity. Catá, has very little use in the nominative case; it is rather dual and partakes of the possessive case. Quitá, is also used in this latter sense.

Declension of personal pronouns

FIRST PERSON.

SINGULAR.

Nom.	I.	Acó.
Poss.	Of me.	Aquin, (prep.); co, (postp.).
Object. (all its divisions).	Me.	Sa aqufn.

SECOND PERSON.

Nom.	Thou.	You.	Icáo, (prep.); ca, (postp.).
Poss.	Of thee.	Of you.	Iyò, (prep.); mo, (postp.).
Object. (all its divisions).	Thee.	You.	Sa iyò.

THIRD PERSON.

Nom.	He, she, it. (1).	Siyá. (1).
Poss.	Of him, of her, of it.	Caniyá, (prep.); niyá, (postp.).
Object. (all its divisions).	Him, her, it.	Sa caniyá.

(1) Siyá, "it", is not generally applied to inanimate things, unless the latter are personified as in fables, etc.

PLURAL.

FIRST PERSON.

ABSOLUTE PLURAL.

Nom.	{ We, (both, the speakers and the persons spoken to, in- cluded)	} Tayo.
Poss.	Of us (of all of us).	Atin, (prep.); natin, (postp.).
Object.	(all its divisions). Us.	Sa atin.

RESTRICTIVE PLURAL.

Nom.	{ We (the persons spoken to not included).	} Camí.
Poss.	Of us.	Amin, (prep.); namin, (postp.).
Object.	(all its divisions). Us.	Sa amin.

EXCLUSIVE & DUAL PLURAL.

Nom.	We, (thou and I alone).	Quitá.
Poss.	Of us.	Canitá, (prep.); ta, (postp.).
Object.	(all its divisions). Us.	Sa canitá.

ANOTHER DUAL PLURAL.

Nom.	We.	Catá.
Poss.	Of us.	Atá, (prep.); ta, (postp.).
Object.	(all its divisions). Us.	Sa atá.

SECOND PERSON.

Nom.	You. (ye).	Cayó.
Poss.	Of you.	Ynyò, (prep.); ninyò, (postp.).
Object.	(all its divisions). You.	Sa inyò.

THIRD PERSON.

Nom.	They.	Silá.
Poss.	Of them.	Canilà, (prep.); nilà, (postp.).
Object.	(all its divisions). Them.	Sa canilà.

Personal pronouns like possessive pronouns have two forms in the possessive case: aquin, iyó, caniyá, amin, canitá, inyó, canilà, are prepositive, that is to say; precede the verb in passive sentences; co, mo, niyá, natin, namin, ninyó, ta, nilà and the nominative quitá (as dual) follow it. The nominative ca is likewise put after the verb in active sentences. Quitá, and catá are used indiscriminately. They both have very little use in the nominative case.

Possessive adjective pronouns, as stated before, are expressed in Tagalog by the possessive case of the personal ones, those of the latter preceding the verb, also precede the noun when used as possessive pronouns, and the others follow it. Possessive pronouns may be, and generally are, preceded by the particles (articles) of common nouns and they are declined and made plural in a similar manner. The same restrictive and dual sense existing between atin, amin, and canilâ; and natin, namin, ta, as personal pronouns exists too as possessive pronouns.

Our soul.	{ Ang atin calolóua.
	{ Ang calolóua natin.
My house.	{ Ang aquin báhay.
	{ Ang báhay co.
My hands.	{ Ang aquin mañga camáy.
	{ Ang mañga camáy co.
Your (sing.) fingers.	{ Ang iyóng mañga daliri.
	{ Ang mañga daliri mo.
His or her eyes,	{ Ang caniyáng mañga mata.
	{ Ang mañga mata niyâ.
Our teeth (those of the person addressed included.)	{ Ang ating mañga ñgipin.
	{ Ang mañga ñgipin natin.
Our tongue (that of the person addressed, not included).	{ Ang aming dila.
	{ Ang dila namin.
Your (plur.) clothes.	{ And inyóng damit.
	{ Ang damit ninyò.
Their eyebrows.	{ Ang caniláng mañga quílày.
	{ Ang mañga quílày nilâ.

The possessive absolute pronouns are expressed by the prepositive forms of the possessive case preceded by the article.

Mine.	Ang aquin.
Yours, thine.	Ang iyò.
His, hers, its.	Ang caniyâ.
Ours.	Ang amin, ang atin.
Yours (plur.).	Ang inyò.
Theirs.	Ang canilâ.

The dative case with the article is also used for this purpose. Thus, ang sa canilâ may be employed for "theirs", etc.

Girl, maid, lass.	Dalaga.
Youngman, bachelor, lad.	Binata, bagong tauò.
Tailor.	Mananahé, (Tag.); sastre , (Sp.).
Baker.	Panadero , (Sp.); magtitinápay, (Tag.).
Silk.	Sutlá, (Tag.); seda , (Sp.).
Gown.	Quimón, (Tag.); bata , (Sp.).
Chicken.	{ Sísiu, manóc na sísiu; poyo , (corr. from { Sp. word pollo .)
Pencil.	Lapis (corr. from Sp. word, lápiz).
Friend.	Caibigan, catoto.
Intimate friend.	Casi.
Key.	Susi.
Chocolate.	{ Sicolate , (corr. from Sp. word chocolate).
	{ Cabán.
Trunk, chest.	Bayong, bÁCól.
Bag, sack, basket.	Maguinoó, guinoóng babaye.
Lady, younglady, mistress.

Bottle.	Bota (corr. from Sp. word, botella).
Peasant, countryman.	Mag-asatá, maghubuquir.
Servant.	Amá, lingcoñ.
Kinsman, relation.	Camaganac.
There, thither.	Dón.
To go there, thither.	Parón, (active and passive) (1)
To sit down.	Upó or upó-roto: umupó. (active.)
To say, to tell. (something).	Sabí: root: sabihin. (passive).
To speak.	Osap: root: magósap. (active).
To speak, to pronounce.	Uma: root: magúica. (act.).
To do, to make. (something).	Ugá: root: gacín. (contracted pass. form.)

If pa is prefixed to an adverb of place, the verb of motion indicated by the adverb is formed; when prefixed to a noun of place, na should be inserted between to form the verb of motion towards that place.

A verbal root only expresses the abstract idea of the action and should be associated to some particle to express the several tenses and meanings it is capable of in the active voice; in the passive, it may be prefixed by u-i over and above other prefixes it may admit of, and suffixed by in or an according to the sense etc.

Do not go there (sing.).	H mag cang parón.
Do. (plur.)	Hmag cayóng parón.
To go to the farm, into the country.	Pasabúquid.
Sit down here. (sing.).	Dito ca umupó.
Let them not go into the country.	Hmag silang pasabúquid.
Don't say it (sing.).	Hmag na mag sabihin (prohibiting).
Don't do it (plur.).	Hmag na mag sabihin (negative in composition)
She is not my mother.	Hmag na yóng ina.
Are they not your relations?	Hindi ba sila siya?
Let John sit down there.	Umupó áyan Si Juan.

The subject, be it noun or pronoun, of an active sentence is put in the nominative case; if the sentence is a passive one the subject should be put in the possessive case.

In spite of what has been said before with regard to the position of the postpositive form of the possessive case of personal pronouns, these are, nevertheless, placed before the verb in sentences beginning with an adverb or a negative particle. The same may also be the case in interrogative sentences, as in:

What else should I say? ; Anò pa ang sicut cong sabihin?

He and I (both of us)	Camí niyá.
You (sing.) and John. (both of you).	Cayó ni Juan.
He and their mother (both of them).	Silá nang caniláng iná.
You (sing.) and they.	Cayó nilá.
He and his master.	Silá nang caniyáng pañginóon.
Jesus and His mother.	Mag-iná ni Jesús.
Alfred and his children.	Si Alfredo nang caniyáng mafiya anac.

When two personal pronouns or a pronoun and a noun join in an active sentence, the personal pronoun, be it singular or plural, may be put in the nominative case and in the plural, and the noun or the other pronoun, in the possessive case of the proper number. The orderly arrangement of first, second and third person should be kept, as it would be a fault to say: silá mo,

(1) In Tagalog, intransitive as well as transitive verbs have a passive voice.

instead of cayo niyà, to indicate "he and you". The same peculiarity exists when a collective or companionship noun formed with mag is coupled to a personal name, mag, being always with the noun of the principal corresponding party.

These forms of construction peculiar to Tagalog are however obsolescent and being replaced by the more natural ones of the western languages.

From the demonstrative pronouns the following largely used adverbs of place are derived:

Here,	{ (indicating a place very near to the speaker).	Dini.
Here	{ (indicating a place equidistant from both interlocutors).	Ditò.
There	{ (indicating a place nearer to the person spoken to than to the speaker).	Diyán.
There, thither.	{ (indicating a place far from both interlocutors.)	Dóon.
To come here.		Parini, paritò.
To go there.	{ (motion to the place where the person addressed stands).	Pariyán.

SEVENTH EXERCISE.

Has this man the pencil? He has it not. Have I the chocolate? You have neither the chocolate nor the sugar. Has my friend your stick? He has not my stick, he has my umbrella. Is your house pretty? Our house is not pretty; but it is good. What is that you have in your hands? What I have in my hands is a pencil. What is that they have in their fingers? What they have in their fingers are rings. What have I on my eyes? It is spectacles that you have on your eyes. Have we any teeth? All of us have teeth. We, men, have a tongue? Yes, we, men, have a tongue. Are natives' noses beautiful? No, they are not beautiful. Are their eyebrows pretty? Their eyebrows are pretty. Where is the girl? The girl is at home. Who is the father of this youngman? The father of this youngman is the tailor. Who has the baker's silk? My sons have the baker's silk. Where are her chickens? Her chickens are at the farm. Who has our friends' pencils? Nobody. Are they our friends? They are our intimate friends. Who has my relation's chocolate? His friend has it in the trunk. Where is the lady's bag? The lady's bag is not here. Where is the chest-key? The peasant has it. What are those bottles made of? Those bottles are made of glass. Have you any male-servant? I have no male-servant, what I have are two female-servants. Are your relations at church? No, my relations are not at church, they are in town. Where is the church? The church is on the mountain. Is that lady his mother? She is not his mother. Are we good friends? We are good friends. Who are your friends? I have no friends. Are John's relations your friends? They are my friends.

EIGHTH LESSON.

YCAUALONG PAGARAL.

THE SUBSTANTIVE.

Substantives are either primitive or derivative, the former being those which in their original signification are substantives. A difficulty which attends the classification of Tagalog words into various parts of speech, according to the system applied to European languages, consists in the number of words which, while yet unmodified by particles, are either verb or substantive, adjective or adverb, according to the context, or, more generally, according to particles which precede or are prefixed to them.

The noun, as a rule, undergoes no change to denote number, gender or case, the latter being expressed, as in English, by prepositions.

A root while still retaining a certain predominant character which renders it, to some extent, classifiable as nominal, adjectival, verbal, etc., expresses but the simplest idea of the thing, quality or action and hence, generally, it requires the association of certain particles to develop the various relations the idea is capable of.

The congeniality of these particles with the language is such as to cause sometimes a root having a definite nominal force to be combined with noun-building particles to form either secondary derivatives or substantive terms which differ but little from the original meaning, somewhat in the manner of the difference in significance in the English words, "reciprocation", "reciprocity", "reciprocalness"; "gratitude", "gratefulness", etc.

Substantives in Tagalog are formed from all parts of speech, but especially from adjectives (adjectival or quality roots) and verbs.

The present lesson is intended to illustrate some of the commonest ways to form nouns. Other ways are to be found in further chapters throughout the grammar, as it would be inconvenient to acquaint the pupil with them at this stage.

Substantives used in a general sense take the article in Tagalog. "Riches are mere vanity". Ang kayamanan, walang abalohan.

Went (thither).	Naparón.
Came.	Naparitò, naparini.
Went there.	}
(to the place where the person addressed stands)
Went home.	Napasabahay.
To be going there.	}
(marking present motion to a distant place)
To be going into town.	Napapasabayan, or, napasasabayan.
To be coming on, here.	Napaparitò, or, napariritò. Napaparini, or, naparirini.

New.	Bagò.
Old, worn out.	Luma.
Crashed, broken into pieces.	Basag.
Entire, whole, sound.	Bcò.
Cat.	Pusa.
Uncle.	Amaín.
Aunt.	Ali.
White thing.	Putí (root).
White (adj.).	Maputí.
Black thing.	Itim.
Black (adj.).	Maitim.
Great, large thing.	Laquí.
Great, large, grown up. (adj.).	Malaquí.
Great, excellent, remarkable, cons- } picuous. }	Daquila.
Virtuous.	Banal.
Sound, healthy thing.	Galing.
Sound, healthy. (adj.)	Magaling.
Wise. (idea of wisdom).	Dúnong or dónong.
Wise. (adj.).	Marúnong or marónong.
Whiteness.	Caputían.
Blackness.	Caitimán.
Greatness, growth.	Calaquihán.
Greatness, excellence.	Cadaquilán.
Virtue.	Cabanalan.
Soundness, health.	Cagalíngan.
Wisdom.	Carunúngan.

Abstract nouns may be formed by prefixing ca and suffixing an-han to the root.

Divinity.	Pagcadios.
Manhood, humanity.	Pagcataud.
Manhood, masculineness.	Pagcalalaquí.
Womanhood.	Pagcababaye.
Wisdom, learning. (in action)	Pagcadúnung.

The prefix pagca, may likewise form abstract nouns, especially of common and proper nouns or adjectival roots expressing attributes of mind, the nouns so formed partaking more or less of the verbal character.

Accompanying,	companion.	Samà,	casamà.
Embarking,	fellow-passenger.	Sacáy,	casacáy.
Aiding,	assistant.	Túlong,	catúlong.
Quarrelling.	{ quarrelling-person, } { enemy. }	{ Auay,	caáuay.
Teaching.	school-mate.	Aral,	caáral.
Like,	similar, coequal.	Para,	capara.
Face,	{ face-resembling } { person. }	{ Muc-há,	camuc-há.

If ca is prefixed to a root denoting an idea of association, fellowship, reciprocity or likelihood, a verbal noun indicating one of the mutual parties is thus formed. If two of the mutual associated parties are to be meant, mag should be prefixed to the verbal noun already formed.

Two companions.	Magcasamà.
Married couple. (husband and wife).	Magasáua.
Two brothers or sisters.	Magcapatid.

Two brothers-in-law.	Magbayáo.
Two sisters-in-law.	Maghípag.
Two friends.	Magcaibigan.

If three or more of the corresponding parties are to be expressed (this manner of expression being selected) ca. should be repeated if the noun is not dual in character; and the first syllable of the root if it is only formed with mag.

Three or more brothers or sisters.	Magcacapatid.
Three or more companions.	Magcacasamá.
Three or more brothers-in-law.	Magbabayáo,
Three or more married couples.	Magcaasána.

In common nouns denoting correlation of consanguinity or mutual dependence, mag, is prefixed to that of the principal correlative party to express his or her association with the secondary corresponding party.

Father and son.	Magamá.
Mother and daughter.	Mag-iná.
Master and servant.	Magpaingínón.

If more than one of secondary associated parties are to be expressed, the first syllable of the principal one should be repeated.

Father and children.	Magaamá.
Mother and children.	Mag-iiná.

Mag, is also prefixed to one of the associated parties when it is coupled to a proper personal noun, but then the latter should be put in the possessive case.

Jesus and His mother.	Mag-iná ni Jesús.
George and his son.	Mag-amá ni Jorge.
Mary and her father.	Mag-amá ni María.

An-han, if suffixed to a substantive root indicative of a natural product, the noun of the place for such product to be found, is formed.

Paddy,	rice-field.	Palay	palayan.
Cocoa-rut,	cocoa-nut-plantation.	Niog,	niogán.
Sugar-cane,	sugar-plantation.	Tubò,	tubohan.
Plant,	garden.	Halaman,	halamanan.
Stone,	quarry.	Bató,	batohán.

If ca is prefixed to these first derivatives, the second derivative thus formed will be more collective.

Rice-field,	Tract abounding with.	Palayan,	capalayan.
Plantation of plantain-trees	} Do. do.	Saguinán,	casaguinán.

The same suffix forms the place of performance with a substantive root implying a verbal sense.

Bath,	bath-room.	Paligo,	paliguán.
Cell,	sleeping-chamber.	Silid,	siliran.
Dancing,	ball.	Sayáo.	sayáuan.

Father-in-law or mother-in-law.	Bianán. (lalaqui or babaye).
Son or daughter-in-law.	Manúgang. do do.
Short, little, small.	Maliit, muntí.
Nobody, no one.	Ualá sinomán,i, hindí; isá ma,i, ualá.
Buffalo. (animal).	Calabáo, damúlag.

Bird.	Ybon.
Copper.	Tangsó.
Name.	Ñgalan, pañgalan.
Broom.	Ualís, pañgualís.
Foot.	Paà.
Mouth.	Bibig.
Somebody, some one, any body, any one, whoever, whosoever.	} Sinomán, bálang na tauò.
Any, anything, whatever, what- soever.	} Anomán, anománg bagáy.
Whichever, whichever.	Alín man, alín mang bagáy.
How much?, how many? (when a number is inquired after).	} ¿Ilán?, ¿ilán bagá?.
How much?. (when measure is inquir- ed after).	} ¿Gaanò?.

An interrogative pronoun followed or suffixed by the adverb man is thereby converted into an indefinite one.

EIGHTH EXERCISE.

Did your uncle go there? My uncle did not go there, it is my aunt who went there. Did your wife's friend come here? He did not come here, he went home. Did Alfred and his master go to your house? They both went to our house. Where are John's two companions? They went into town. Did they go there? Yes, they went there; but the three brothers Cruz are coming. Did not Peter and his father go to the country? Peter and his father did not go to the country, they went to church. Are the wife and the husband going there to the forest? They are going to the town. Is your clothing new or old? My clothing is old (worn out). Are their looking-glasses entire (sound) or broken? They are not broken, they are worn out. Are my mother's sister's cats white or black? My mother's sister's cats are neither white nor black. Is your sister's virtue great? My sister's virtue is great. Is the wisdom of God, great? The wisdom of God has no equal. Who are wise? The sound are wise. Is the whiteness of our souls a beautiful thing? The whiteness of our souls is a beautiful thing. How many fellow-passengers are they? Peter, John and Mary are fellow-passengers. How many companions are you? George and I are companions. How many enemies came here? No enemies came here. Are Mary and you alike in face? Yes, Mary and I are alike in face. How many brothers are they? They are two brothers. Are you master and servant? Yes, we are master and servant. Are you father and son? No, we are not father and son. Are they sisters-in-law? Yes, they are sisters-in-law. Are they friends? No, they are not friends. Did John and his brother go into the forest? John and his brother did not go into the forest, they are at school. Did the father and his children come here? The father and his children did not come here. Did Jane and her mother go to church (mass)? No, Jane and her mother went to Cavite. Who is at home? No one. Where did my uncle's buffalo go? Your uncle's buffalo went into the fields. Did his bird go into your father-in-law's house? No, it went into my son-in-law's. What is coin made of? Coin is made of gold, silver and copper. What is your name? My name is Anthony. Where have you my servant's broom? Your servant's broom is not here. Is your foot well? It is not well. Where are the teeth? The teeth are in the mouth. Has anybody gone to Iloilo? No one has gone there. How much bread has my sister? Any bread she may have, is little. For which man are those birds? For whichever man.

NINTH LESSON. YCASIYAM NA PAGARAL.

RELATIVE PRONOUNS.

True relative pronouns, as well as the copulative verb, do not exist in Tagalog. The mere arrangement of words may dispense with them; but most frequently the article and the nominal ligament render the English relative, somewhat after the manner of English, where it is understood in phrases like "the man you saw" or is included in the present participle, as when we say, "the boy writing the letter"..... etc.

The illustrations in this lesson will convey to the student further information on the subject.

Street, road.	Lansañgan, dáan.
Way, thoroughfare.	Dáan.
High, road.	Carsada (corr. from Sp. word calzada .)
Will, good-will, disposition, inward feeling.	{ Lóob, calooban.
Memory, recollection.	Alaala.
Gratitude, gratefulness, obligation.	{ Utang na lóob, (lit., debt from the heart).
Noble, precious, dear.	Mahal.
Rascal, impudent fellow, cruel.	Tampalasan.
Stone.	Batò.
Head.	Olò.
Cousin.	Pinsán.
Cook.	{ Tagapagsáing, cosinero , (corr. from Sp. word, cocinero).
Ox or cow.	Baca (corr. from Sp. word, vaca .)
But. (conjunction).	{ Cundí, datapóua, ñguní, subali, alintana.
Other.	Ibà, isà.
Another, one more.	Isà pa, ilà pa.
Foreigner.	Taga ibàng lupain.
Stranger.	Taga ibàng bayan.
Sea.	Dágat.
Seaman.	Tagarágat, magdadágat.
Pocket-book, portfolio.	{ Tagóan nang súlat (lit., hiding-place for papers); cartera , (Sp.).
Garden, orchard.	Halamanan.
Plant.	Halaman, pananim.
Corn, Grain.	Bútil.
Granary.	Tambóbong, camálig.
Principal, head, leader, lord.	Guinòd.

Quarry, place full of stones.	Batohán.
Bolster, upper end of a bed.	Olohán, olonán.
Plantation.	Halamanán.
Aristocracy.	Caguinoohan.

Substantive roots expressive of some kind of matter or of things not capable of being made abstract, are prefixed with ca and suffixed with an to denote place or assemblage, as already said.

Hair.	Buhoc.
Forehead.	Noò.
Lip.	Labi.
Neck.	Liig.
Shoulders.	Mañga balícat.
Orphan.	Olila.
Strong.	Malacás.
Feeble, weak.	Mahina.

That, which, who, whom. (relative pronouns).	{ Na, ng, g, (linking-particles).
What, that which, the one which.	Ang, ang na.
The man who is coming here is my father.	{ Ang tauòng napaparitò, i, ang aqing amá.
This woman whom you love is my sister.	{ Itóng babayeng sinisintá mo, i. capatid co.
The letter which you wrote to me.	Ang súlat na ysinúlat mo sa aquin.
What I have is my sister-in-law's umbrella.	Ang na sa aquin, ay ang páyong nang aquin hípag.
That (conjunction).	Na.
Tell John's son to go into the country.	{ Sabihin mo sa anac ni Juan na pasabúquid siyá.
Do not tell him that I am here.	{ Houag mong sabihin sa caniyá na acó, i, naritò.

In the preceding examples the English relative pronoun is expressed by the ligaments, which, in this case, cannot be suppressed.

Students must understand that the mere replacing of the verbal ligament by the nominal one or by ang with the objective case before a verb, is a sure indication of the existence of a relative pronoun, Attention should be paid to the difference of sense in the following phrases:

The man is coming here.	Ang tauò ay napaparitò.
The man that is coming here	Ang tauòng napaparitò
You love this woman.	Ytóng babayeng itò, i, sinisintá mo.
This woman whom you love.	Ytóng babayeng sinisintá mo.
You wrote the letter to me.	Sinulatan mo acó.
The letter that you wrote to me.	Ang súlat na ysinúlat mo sa aquin.
I have my sister-in-law's umbrella.	{ Na sa aquin ang páyong nang aqing hípag.
What I have is my sister-in-law's umbrella.	Ang na sa aquin ay ang páyong nang hípag co.

This one, this other.	Ytóng isá, itóng ibá.
That other, that over there.	Yyáng isá, iyáng ibá.

Ysà-itóng isá, circumscribes more the number of things among which the one pointed out is, than itóng ibá etc.

Is the stone for this house?	¿ Ang batò,i, ditò sa báhay na itò bagá?
No, it is for that other, that over there.	Hindí, diyán sa isá.
Is this bread for that child?	¿ Ytòng tin pay na itò, dóon sa batang yaón?
It is for that other.	Dóon sa isá.
Before (adv.), a while ago.	Cañgina, nóon unà.
Afterwards, by and by.	Mameá, mamayá-mayá.
Yesterday.	Cahapon.
The day before yesterday.	Camacalauà.
Some days ago.	Camacailán.
Just this morning, before in the morning.	¿ Cañginang umaga.
When?	¿ Cailán?

Camaca is a plural prefix which indicates as many past days, as are expressed by the root it is joined to.

Three days ago.	Camacatatlò.
Ten days ago.	Camacapóuo.

“To be”, not having a specific expression in Tagalog the relation of tense can only be conveyed by some adverb or term expressive of time if not otherwise inferred from the context.

We were yesterday at the country.	Cahapo,i, camí naróon sa búquid,
Were they here at our town some days ago?	¿ Camacailá,i, naritò bagá silá sa ating bayan?
When was your father-in-law's father at your son-in-law's?	¿ Cailán bagá ang amá nang iyòng bianáng lalaqui naróon sa báhay nang manúgang mong lalaqui?
He was there this morning.	Naróon siyá cañginang umaga.
Were you ever Mary's household servant?	¿ Alila ca bagá nóong unà niná María?
Yes, I was formerly their servant.	Oo, acó,i, alila nilá nóon unà.
Shall you be at church?	¿ Nariyán ca bagá sa simbahan mamaya-mayá?
I shall be there.	Acó,i, nariyán mameá.
He will soon be Mary's husband.	Siyá mameá ang cay Mariang asáua.

The preceding illustrations are merely illustrative, for any word is capable of being verbalized in Tagalog, and the same expressions will be better constructed by conjugating the nouns in a way which will not yet be understood at this stage.

NINTH EXERCISE

Whose are these trees? My father's. Whose do you say? My father's. Whose children are those? Mine. Which gun has he? He has his own. Was your wife on the street yesterday? She was there the day before yesterday. Was anybody on the road? Nobody was on the road. Has man a good disposition towards God? Yes, man has a good disposition towards God. What is memory? Memory is a power of our soul. Have we gratitude toward our parents? Yes, we have gratitude toward our parents. Are noblemen rascals? Noblemen are not rascals. What have you on your head? What I have on my head is a hat. Will my cousin soon be a cook? Your cousin will not be a cook but a tailor. Has my mother-in-law an ox? She has two oxen. Has the foreigner some of these plants in his garden? No, he has not any of these, but he has others. Is the sea large? The sea is large. Where are the seamen?

The seamen are at the garden of our neighbour. Have they any grain in their pocket-books? They have no grain. Where are your granaries? My granaries are at the rice-fields. Where are the aristocracy of this town? The aristocracy of this town are at church. How many plants have you in his garden? I have no plants in his garden. Was his hair black? His hair was black. Where are located the forehead, the lips and the neck? On the head. Are shoulders on the head? No, shoulders are not on the head. Is the orphan-boy strong or weak? He is weak. Is that man coming here your brother? My brother is the one going there. Are those letters for your father? The letters for my father are those on the table. Is that one the woman whom you love? The woman whom I love is my mother. What shall I say to my sister? Tell your sister not to go to Iloilo. Shall I tell them to go into the country? Don't say that. Which of these two books is for my cousin? The new book is for your cousin, this other is for your son. Is that bottle for this child? No, it is for that other. Did you go to the garden before? I did not go there. When did John come here? It is some days ago that John came here. Did your sister-in-law's mother go into town yesterday? She went there the day before yesterday.

TENTH LESSON.

YCAPOUONG PAGARAL.

ON INTENSIVES.

It is to be noted that besides other ways of intensification, there are quite a number of words in Tagalog, which may properly be called particles, intended to impart an intensive degree of sense to the preceding word; these corresponding closely in meaning to "certainly", "indeed", "most", "exceedingly" and similar English terms, though some of them may be considered as expletives and are sometimes untranslatable. Among them, rin or din, may be parsed as the Tagalog reflective pronoun, the English "self", as in siyá rin, "he himself"; etc. Sarili is also used somewhat as a reflective pronoun and means "own". As to the signification and place in the sentence of such intensives the attention of the student is called to further explanations in this lesson.

Moon, month.	Bouán.	} (Spanish).
January.	Enero.
February.	Febrero.
March.	Marzo.
April.	Abril.
May.	Mayo.
June.	Junio.
July.	Julio.
August.	Agosto.
September.	Septiembre.
October.	Octubre.
November.	Noviembre.
December.	Diciembre.
The month of March.	} Bouáng Marzo or bouán nang Marzo ang ngalan.
Year.	Taón.
Have you the letter which my brother had?	¿Na sa iyò bagá ang súlat nang aquing capatid? or, na na sa aquing capatir?
I have not the letter which your brother had.	Ualá sa aquin ang súlat nang capatid mo, or, na na sa iyòng capatid.
Which horse has he?	¿Alíng cabayo ang na sa caniyá.?
I have that which they had.	Ang canilá ang na sa aquin.
Monday.	Lunes.	} (Spanish).
Tuesday.	Martes.
Wednesday.	Miércoles.
Thursday.	Jueves.
Friday.	Viernes.
Saturday.	Sábado.
Sunday.	} Lingo. (corr. from Sp. word, Domingo).
The beginning.	Ang mulá.
The middle.	Ang pag-itan, paguitan.

The end.	Ang catapusán, ang hangán.
The trunk of a tree.	Ang pono.
Branch.	Sañgá.
Color.	Cúlay.
Dark.	Madilim.
Yellow.	Madiláo.
Red.	Mapulá.
What?, what then?. (in a tone of surprise).	¿Ay anò?.

When possession is meant, the English personal pronouns in clauses of relative or discriminative sentences may be rendered in Tagalog by the possessive ones, the verb "to have" remaining untranslated as seen above.

Intensive particles are always placed after the words which they are intended to intensify. The principal are:

How?, how now?.	¿Cayá?, ¿bagá?.
Yes, indeed; most certainly.	Ñga, nañga, din, mandín, ñgani.
Of course.	Ay anò, mangyari.
Ah!, oh!.	¡Abáa!
Then, therefore.	Palá.

Cayá, bagá, have an interrogative and somewhat a dubitative sense, as "perchance" in English.

Why?, is it you?	¿Ycáo bagá?
It is I myself.	Acó ñga.
How!, was it the women who stole?	¿Ang mañga babaye bagá ang nagná-caó?
Yes, the very women themselves.	Oo, ang mañga babaye din or ñga.
Even they themselves did.	Silá ñga, mandín.
It is you indeed, it is you yourselves.	Cayó ñga, cayó ñgani.
I myself.	Acó rin, acó din, acó ñga.
They themselves.	Silá rin, silá nañga.

Cayá may be used in the secondary clause or sentence as a coordinate causative conjunction. Except in this case, intensive particles are not used to start a sentence. They are to be put immediately after the monosyllabic pronouns and immediately before the polysyllabic ones, unless the latter begin the sentence in which case the particles should come after them.

He had to tell me something, that is the reason why he came.	May sasabihin siyá sa aquin, cayá n-paritò, or, napanitò siyá ay may sasabihin sa aquin.

Nañga is generally used as the plural of ñga. Abáa is an interjection very largely in use to express astonishment, surprise, etc.

Bagá, may be used in an affirmative sense as an alternative conjunction, serving as explanatory to the preceding word or sentence, as in:

Bliss, that is to say, the glory of God.	Ang caloualhatian, gloria bagá nang Dios.
--	---

Bagá may likewise be used in a conditional or dubitative sentence, it being then an expletive term rendering the expression round and euphonic.

If you, then, love your parents.	¿Cun cayó ñga, i, sungmisintá sa iyong mañga magúlang, or, cun cayó bagá...
----------------------------------	---

All these and many other emphatic particles are very largely used by natives and account for their innate tendency to exaggerate and to carry words to their utmost degree of intensity.

Man is a postpositive particle which circumscribes the sense of the word preceding in an oppositive sense.

Though I, even I.	Acó man.
Though Peter came here.	Naparitò man Si Pedro.
Although a man be virtuous.	Banal man ang tauò.
Is it, by chance, their father that man who is coming here?	¿Canilàng amá cayá yaóng tauòng napaparitò?
Yes, indeed, it is he himself.	¿Abáa!, siyá figa. (palá).
Was it he....?	¿Siyá bagá ang....?
How!, how now, are they, then, here in town?	¿Ay anò, naritò figa bagá silá sa bayan?
Most certainly.	Oo, ñgani; oo, figa.
Is that true?	¿Totoò cayá iyan?
Yes, indeed, it is absolutely true.	¿Totoòng totoò, totoò figa, totoò mandin.
Why!, is it you who say it?	¿Ay anò, cayó nafiga bagá ang nag-sasabi?
Of course, it is we.	Ay anò, camí ñga.
Is this your child?	¿Ytò palá ang anac mo?
It is.	Siyá ñga (palá).
Oh!, how tall!	¿Abáa!, malaqui ñga.
Is that the same woman you love?	¿Yyang babayeng iyan figa bagá ang sinisintá mo?
The very same.	Siyá rin. (ña).
Seven.	Pitò.
Twelve.	Labing dalauá.
Week, a week.	Ysáng lingo.

TENTH EXERCISE.

What tree is that? This tree is oak. (molauin). Are its leaves large and beautiful? Certainly. Whose sons are these children? They are my sons. And that one, whose son is he? He is my friend's. How many months are there in a year? There are twelve months in a year. Name them. January, etc.. How many days are there in a week? There are seven days in a week. Name them. Sunday, etc.. What month is this? The month of April. Are you here in the month of April? I am not here in the month of April, I am here in the month of July. When do you go to the farm? I go (will go) to the farm on Thursday. Are you not in town on Tuesday? I am in town on Sunday. When do you (will you) go to Manila? I go to Manila on Saturday. Is he going to church on Monday? He is going to church on Sunday. What day is this? (today). It is Friday. When do they go to the garden? They go to the garden at the commencement of the week. What is the last day in the month? The end of the month is Wednesday. What month is at the end of the year? The month at the end of the year is December. What color is the trunk of that tree? The color of the trunk of this tree is red. Is it not yellow? No, it is brown. Is the day dark? No, it is not dark. What day is at the middle of the week? Thursday is at the middle of the week. What then? Nothing at all. Why!, is it that there is no God here on Earth? Yes, indeed, there is one God here everywhere. Why!, is it the brother of Peter who went there? It was he himself who went there. What!, are you here? Of course, I am here. Then, is God great? Of course, He is great. Is it you then, who are there? Of course, it is I. Is it you yourself who Went to Manila in October? I myself went there. Who stole any books?

It was the women who stole some books. Are Europeans white? Oh!, they are. Where is God? Wherever you go there is God. Who says so.
Anybody says so. Is John at church? Although he may be in town he does not go church. Is that true? It is true.

ELEVENTH LESSON.

YCALABING ISANG PAGARAL.

NUMERAL ADJECTIVES.

CARDINAL AND ORDINAL NUMBERS.

The numerals in Tagalog are exceedingly simple. They always precede the noun.

Cardinal numbers from eleven to nineteen inclusive are formed from the digits by preceding the latter with the particle labì, "more"; used as a co-efficient. Multiples of ten up to ninety inclusive have the termination póuo, "ten"; (polo, the word for "ten" in "Bisayan" and "Bicol" dialects being also used in several places.). The intermediate numbers are formed simply by adding the units. Above "a hundred," isàng dáan; and "a thousand," isàng libó; the numbers proceed with equal regularity: 326, tatlóng dáan, dalauáng póuo,t, ánim; 2,641, dalauáng libó ánim na ráan, ápat na p.uo,t, isá.

Certain terms for high numbers have been borrowed from the Sanskrit language and misapplied to Tagalog, namely: lacsá. (Sansk. laksha, 100,000.) and yota, (Sansk. ayota, 10,000.) The numbers represented by these words in Tagalog are isàng lacsá-sang lacsá, "ten thousand;" isàng yota-sang yota, "a hundred thousand;" sangpóuog, yota "one million."

To express a quantity which approaches what in English is called a round number, it is sometimes convenient to state the latter qualified by the figure in which it is deficient, using the word cúlang-cólang, "less," "save;" as is done in the old-fashioned phrase forty stripes save one. Thus, instead of isàng dáan siyam na póuo,t, ualó "one hundred ninety eight;" the phrase cólang nang dalauá sá dalauáng dáan, may be used.

The ordinal numbers are formed from the cardinals by means of the prefix yca, as seen in this lesson.

The student will do well in trying to acquaint himself with Spanish numerals, for they are largely made use of by natives in counting.

One.	Is ^á .
Two.	Dalauá.
Three.	Tatlò.
Four.	Apat.
Five.	Limá.
Six.	Anim.
Seven.	Pitò.
Eight.	Ualò.
Nine.	Siyam.
Ten.	Sangpóuo.
Eleven.	Labing isá.
Twelve.	Labing dalauá.
Thirteen.	Labing tatlò.

Fourteen.	Labing ápat.
Fifteen.	Labing limà,
Sixteen.	Labing ánim.
Seventeen.	Labing pitò.
Eighteen.	Labing ualò.
Nineteen.	Labing siyam.
Twenty.	Dalauàng póuo.
Twenty-one.	Dalauàng póuo,t, isà.
Thirty.	Tatlóng póuo.
Thirty two.	Tatlóng póuo,t, dalauà.
Forty.	Apat na póuo.
Forty three.	Apat na póuo,t, tatlò.
Fifty.	Limàng póuo.
Fifty four.	Limàng póuo,t, ápat.
Sixty.	Anim na póuo.
Sixty five.	Anim na póuo,t, limà.
Seventy.	Pitòng póuo.
Seventy six.	Pitòng póuo,t, ánim.
Eighty.	Ualóng póuo.
Eighty seven.	Ualóng póuo,t, pitò.
Ninety.	Siyam na póuo.
Ninety eight.	Siyam na póuo,t, ualò.
One hundred.	Sang dáan, isàng dáan.
One hundred and nine.	Sang dáa,t, siyam.
One hundred and twenty.	Sang dáa,t, dalauàng póuo.
Two hundred.	Dalauàng dáan.
Two hundred and fifty.	Dalauàng dáa,t, limàng póuo.
Three hundred.	Tatlóng dáan.
Three hundred and sixty nine.	Tatlóng dáa,t, ánim na póuo,t, siyam.
Four hundred.	Apat na dáan, ápat na ráan.
Five hundred.	Limàng dáan.
Six hundred.	Anim na dáan.
Seven hundred.	Pitòng dáan.
Eight hundred.	Ualóng dáan.
Nine hundred.	Siyam na dáan.
One thousand.	Sang libò, isàng libò.
Eleven hundred.	Isàng libò,t, isàng dáan.
Two thousand.	Dalauàng libò.
Nine thousand.	Siyam na libò.
Ten thousand.	Sang lacsá, isàng lacsá.
Thirty thousand.	Tatlóng lacsá.
Seventy thousand.	Pitòng lacsá.
One hundred thousand.	Sang yota, is'ng yota.
Two hundred thousand.	Dalauàng yota.
One million.	Sang póuong yota, sang aṅgao-aṅgao.
How much? (asking for price).	¿Magcanò?
Price.	Halagá.
How much is the price of that?	¿Magcanò ang halagá niyán.?
Six dollars.	Anim na piso. (Sp. peso.).

Cardinal numerals may be preceded by the article in a determinate sense, as in English. Ang tatlóng pesos na ybinigáy co sa iyò, "the three dollars I gave you".

Labi, which precedes the digit numbers to form the first denary, means "more" and is linked to the number. In the same way the different parts which a number is composed of are linked to each other by means of the ligaments. At-t, comes before the last expression of the quantity, and not before the denaries as in English, except when the number is decimal.

Only, but.	Lámang.
Only one.	Ysá lámang. iisá.
Only two.	Dalauá lámang. dadalauá.
Ten only.	Sang púo lámang. sasangpúo.
A hundred only.	Sang dían lámang, sasangdían.

A number may be restricted in sense in the common way by the adverb lámang or by repeating the first syllable or the first two letters thereof if consisting of more than two. Lámang should be used postponed to the word it affects.

ORDINAL NUMERALS.

Ordinal numerals are formed from the cardinal ones, by prefixing to the latter the particle ya, the first four being somewhat irregular in formation. Cardinal numerals beginning with a drop it to form the ordinal. Ordinal numerals are generally preceded by the article as in English.

To precede, to go before.	Oná, pañgoná.
The first.	Ang naoná, ang uná.
The second.	Ang ycalauá.
.. third.	.. ycatlò.
.. fourth.	.. ycapat.
.. fifth.	.. ycalimá.
.. sixth.	.. ycanim.
.. seventh.	.. ycapitò.
.. eighth.	.. ycaualò.
.. ninth.	.. ycasiyam.
.. tenth.	.. ycasangpúo.
.. eleventh.	.. ycalabing isá.
.. twelfth.	.. ycalabing dalauá.
.. twentieth.	.. ycadalauang púo.
.. thirtieth.	.. ycatlóng púo.
.. fiftieth.	.. ycalimang púo.
.. eighty-ninth.	.. ycaualóng púo,t, siyam.
.. hundredth.	.. ycasangdían.
.. thousandth.	.. ycasanglibò.
.. ten thousandth.	.. ycasanglacsá.
.. 3.843 rd .	! .. ycatlóng libò. ualóng dían, ápat ! na púo,t, tatlò.

In complex numbers only the first and most embracing one is ordinalized in Tagalog, contrary to the English practice.

The very first.	Ang caonaonahan.
The last.	Ang huli.
The very last.	Ang cahulihulihan.
The very first man was Adam.	Ang caunaunahang tauò ay Si Adán.
Oh! my God! I, the very last among sinners.	! Ayá! ; Dios co!, acó. ang cahulihulihan ! nang mañga macasalanán.

The extreme ordinal numerals may be superlativized in Tagalog by the prefix ca, the repetition of the root and by using the suffix an.

Much (num. adj.), many.	Marami. (from dami).
Very much, a great deal, a great many.	Maraming marami.
The majority, the most.	Ang caramihan.
All.	Lahat, ang lahat.
Enough. (adv.).	! Sivá na, husto (corr. from Sp. word, ! justo)

More than (a cardinal number following).	} Labis sa, higit sa.
More than eight.	} Labis sa ualò, higit sa ualò.
More (comparative).	} Lalo, lalo pa.
More (adv.), still, even.	} Pa. (always postponed).
All men are not virtuous.	} Ang lahat na tauò ay hindi mañga banal.
You say enough.	} Siyá na ang sabi mo.
Are you taller than his brother?	} ¿Lalo ca pang mataás sa caniyà ng kapatid na lalaqui?
I am taller than he.	} Lalo acóng mataás sa caniyà.
Has their father any more chickens?	} ¿Ang caniláng amá, mayróon pang sísiu?
He has still more.	} Siyá, i, mayróon pa.
Now. (at present).	} Ngayón.
Some, few.	} Ylán.
Only a few.	} Ylán lámang, iilán.

Ylán, may likewise be made ordinal by prefixing yca, as quantième in French.

What day of the month is to-day?	¿Ycailáng árao ngayón ñg bouán?
To-day is the thirteenth.	Ycalabing tatlo ngayón.
What place (in order) have they?	¿Ycailán bagá silá?

Mañga, preceding a cardinal numeral imparts a sense of indetermination.

How many bags have they?	¿Yláng bayong ang na sa canilá?
Some twenty of them, about twenty.	Mañga dalauang póuo.

Mañga, alone, and not ang mañga, comes before nouns in the plural when they are used indefinitely or in a partitive sense.

Houses.	Mañga bahay.
Men, people.	Mañga tauò.

ELEVENTH EXERCISE.

63. — 128. — 215. — 519. — 631. — 911. — 1.342. — 3.000. — 7.894. — 10.614. — 25. 813. — 37.018. — 70.800. — 100.526. — 362.214. — 836.565. — 1.232.036. — 3.434.608. What is the price of that cheese? Three dollars. How many houses has your father? He has none. Has your sister many looking-glasses? She has twenty. Have your parents all the rings? They have not all. How many children has the brother of Anthony? He has seven. Are all of them pretty? Three are pretty, the others ugly. How many brothers has your uncle? My uncle has five brothers. How many of them are male? (1). Three of them are male, the others are female. Has my aunt many trees? She has some. Where are the two brothers-in-law? They are at Cebú. How many women were there yesterday? A great many. Are there no books at home? We have many at home. Are there many dogs over there? There are only a few. How many cats has my cousin? He has only one. Are there twenty birds at your house? There are more than twenty. Where are they? They are on the branches of trees. Who told you there are many churches in Manila? My friends told me so. How many souls have we? We have only one. How many fingers are there in your hand? There are only four. Where, then, is the other? Well, then, the other is hidden. How many trees (trunks) are there in this garden? There are a great many. How many of them have branches and how many have none? Those not having branches are only a few. Who was the first man? The first man was Adam. And the first woman? Eve. What place in order has your sister at school? She is the fifth in order. What number have you? I have the 63rd. Are you noble? I am the last of men. Are all men bad (wicked)? No, only some of them are wicked. Are all women judicious? The majority are judicious. Have you more than three pens? I have more than sixty. Is your friend older than his brother? He is taller, but he is not older. Have you still more sons? I have two more. What day of the week is to-day? To-day is Tuesday. And what day of the month was yesterday? Yesterday was the 25th. How many dollars have you? I have some thirty dollars.

(1) In Tagalog, as heretofore explained, kapatid includes both brothers and sisters.

TWELFTH LESSON.

YCALABING DALAUANG PAGARAL.

NUMERAL ADJECTIVES (continued).

ADVERBIAL, PARTITIVE AND DISTRIBUTIVE NUMERALS.

The adverbial numerals are formed by prefixing maca to the cardinals, the first being altogether, and the second and third somewhat, irregular.

Once.	Minsán.
Twice.	Macalauá.
Thrice, three times.	Macaitlò, macatlò.
Four times.	Macaápat.
Five "	Macalimá.
Six "	Macaánim.
Seven "	Macapitò.
Eight "	Macauald.
Nine "	Macasiyam.
Ten "	Macasangpóuo.
Eleven "	Macalabing isá.
Nineteen "	Macalabing siyam.
A hundred "	Macasangdán.
A thousand "	Macasanglibò.
How many times?, how often?	¿Macailán?

The restriction in sense may be made by repeating the first two letters for minsán and the first syllable of the particle for the others, besides the common way of using lámang or both lámang and the repetition.

Once only, only once.	Miminsán.
Twice only, " twice.	Mamacalauá.
Ten times only.	Mamacasangpóuo.
A hundred times only.	Mamacasangdán.

These same adverbial numerals are used in Tagalog in some districts, to denote multiplication, in the same way as the suffix "fold" in English; macalará lalong malaquí, "two-fold (doubly) greater or large".

¿Nacailán?, is used by some people for ¿macailán?. Properly speaking, ¿nacailán?, expresses past time and ¿macailán?, present or future: ¿Nacailán nang nacasalá?, "how many times did you commit sin"?; ¿macailán nang paparóon?, "how often will you go there". Beses, (corrupt Spanish word for veces) (times) is sometimes used. ¿Yláng beses?, "how many times?", "how often?".

DISTRIBUTIVE ABSTRACT NUMERALS.

These are formed by repeating the cardinal numeral or the two first syllables thereof, if consisting of more than two, without any ligament.

One by one.	Ysá-ísá.
Two by two, two at a time.	Daladalauá
Three by three, three at a time.	Tatlò tatlo.
Four " four, four " " "	Apat ápat.
Five " five, five " " "	Limá limá.
Ten " ten, ten " " "	Sangpóuo sangpóuo.
Dozen " dozen, a dozen" " "	Labi labing dalauá.
How many at a time?	¿Ylán ylán?
Thousand by thousand.	Sangli sanglibò.
Hundred by hundred.	Sangdá sangdán.
Every day, daily.	Arao árao.
Every hour, hourly.	Oras oras.
Every month, monthly.	Bouán bouán.
Every year, yearly.	Taón taón.
Every week, weekly.	Lingo lingo.
Every Sunday.	Do. do.
Every Tuesday.	Touing Martes.
Every Saturday.	" Sábado

PARTITIVE NUMERALS.

"The half" is expressed either by ang calahati, or ang ycalauang bahagui, the former being far more in use. The other partitive numerals in the singular are expressed by the ordinals with the article, the word bahagui, "share," "portion"; being optionally used at the end. For the plural, the cardinals are used; the partitive, in the nominative case, and that indicative of the parts into which the unity is considered divided, in the possessive, with bahagui following:

The half.	Ang calahati, ang ycalatáng bahagui.
The third.	Ang ycatlong (bahagui).
The tenth.	Ang ycasangpouong bahagui.
Three fourths.	Tatlò nang ápat na bahagui
The seven eighths.	Ang pitò nang ualóng bahagui.

How many times did you come here yesterday?	¿Nacailán-macailán naparitò ca caha-pon?
Twice.	Macalauá.
How often does your sister go to mass?	¿Macailán bagáng magsimbá ang capatid mong babaye?
Every Sunday.	Lingo lingo.

DISTRIBUTIVE DETERMINATE NUMERALS.

These are formed by prefixing tig to the cardinals and by repeating the first syllable from five upwards.

One to each one, one each.	Tig-ísá.
Two to every one.	Tigalauá.
Three " " "	Tigatlò.
Four " " "	Tigápat.

Five to every one.	Tigilim.
Six " " "	Tigaániu.
Seven " " "	Tigpipitò.
Eight " " "	Tig-uualò.
Nine " " "	Tigsisiyam.
Ten " " "	Tigsasangpóuo.
Eleven " " "	Tiglalabing isà.
Twelve " " "	Tiglalabing dalauà.
A dozen " " "	Tig-isang dosena (corr. from Sp. docena)
How many to every one, at how many every one?	} ¿Tig-iilán?
How?, in what manner?	} ¿Paanò?
How is; are?	} ¿Maanò?

Tig, may also come before cardinal plural numerals indicative of the fixed or stamped value of a thing, without any repetition of syllable. Thus, "five dollars coined piece" may be expressed, salapíng tiglimang piso; "fifteen cents' stamp", seyong tiglabing limang séntimos; although na is more in use. In southern provinces tig serves to express the season anything occurs or is proper to be made: tighapon, "to do something in the afternoon."

The distributives for unities of price, measure, etc. are formed by prefixing man to the root-word of the standard unity, the first letter of the root undergoing changes as follows: If it is a vowel or c, the last letter of the particle and the first of the root change into ng. If it is t, s or d, both are dropped. If it is p, this and the last letter of the particle change into m.

Bushell.	Cabán.

There are rats and birds. Has your son any lice in his head? He has none, but in his clothes there are crablice, Have you many swine? I have only a boar and a sow.

THIRTEENTH LESSON. YCALABING TATLONG PAGARAL.

DEGREES OF COMPARISON.

COMPARATIVE OF EQUALITY.

There are several ways of forming the comparative of equality in Tagalog, according to its being of quantity, quality or thing. This lesson treats of the most usual manners of forming the comparative of equality, but the student should try first to become acquainted with the following words used for the purpose.

So..... as.	{	Para, sing, casing, macasing, ga, ganga, pares, capares.
As..... as.		Para....ni, parang; sing or casing, magcasing. (prefixed to the root).
So..... as.	{	Ga, (prefixed to the root of the thing and ca, prefixed to the root of the quality).
As much..... as.		Capara, caparis, capantáy, magcasing.
As many..... as.	{	Capara, capares, capantáy, parapara, magcapares.
As I.		Para co.
As my brother.		Para nang aqing capatid.
As he.		Para niyá.
As Alfred.		Para ni Alfredo.
As my cousin.		Para nang aqing pinsán.
As stone.		Para nang batò, parang batò.
As this.		Ganitò, gaitò, para nitò.
..... as this.		Ganitò ca..., gaitò ca..., para nitò ca...
As that.	{	Ganiyán, ganóon, para niyán, para niyón.
..... as that.		Ganiyán ca..., ganóon ca..., para niyán ca..., para niyón ca...
As these.		Ganga nitò, para nitóng mafiga itò.
..... as these,		Ganga nitò ca...
As those.		Ganga niyán, ganga nóon.
..... as those.		Ganga niyáng ca..., ganga nóon ca...
As much bread as wine.	{	Tinápáy na casingdami nang álac.
		Tinápáy na caparis nang alac ang dami.
As many knives as pens.	{	Ang mafiga itac casingdami nang mafiga panúlat, or, magcapara singdami.
		Ang mafiga itac at ang mafiga panúlat ay magcasingdami.

The comparative of equality may be formed in several ways in Tagalog. The comparison of quality is formed either by prefixing sing or casing to the root expressive of the quality or by placing para after the adjective in full, with the possessive case of the thing or person serving as standard, at the end.

Peter is as wise as John.	{ Si Pedro,i, singdúnong (or casingdúnong) ni Juan.
	{ Si Pedro,i, marúnong na para ni Juan.
This wood is as hard as stone.	{ Ytòng cáhoy na itò,i, singtigás (or casingtigás) nang batò.
	{ Ytòng cahoy na itò,i, matigás para nang batò.

If an idea of assemblage is to be expressed, casing with the prefix mag may be used. The same sense is expressed by sing and the repetition of the first syllable of the root.

Richard and his father are equally wise.	Ang magamá ni Ricardo,i, magcasingdúnong.
Richard is as wise as his father.	{ Singdudúnong ang magamá ni Ricardo.

Pares, capares, magcapares, may be used before the adjective when both objects compared have been previously expressed, the prefix ca imparting a sense of companionship or likeness.

My uncle's children are as tall as my cousins'.	{ Ang mañga bata nang amain co at ang sa mañga aqing pinsán,i, magcaca-paris nang táas.
---	---

Ga is prefixed to the nominative of the common noun with which anything is compared, the quality root following prefixed with ca.

It is as white as paper.	Gapapel caputí.
--------------------------	-----------------

Ga is also prefixed to the possessive case of the demonstrative pronouns, thus forming adverbs or adverbial expressions; and if the comparison is made with an adjective, the latter takes ca.

So, in this manner; so, as this.	Ganitò, gaitò.
So, in that manner, as that.	Ganiyán, ganóon.
As large as this.	Ganitò calaqui.
As old as that.	Ganiyán catandá.

Ga is also prefixed to the interrogative pronouns in the nominative when the extent of a quality is in question.

To what degree is she virtuous.?	¿Gaanò siyá cabanal?
To which (what) degree is it beautiful?	¿Gaalín cariquit?
It is pretty like that.	Ganiyán cariquit.

When ga is prefixed to a verb it imparts a sense of mockery or fictitious imitation of the action.

As if you were selling, you pretend you are selling.	{ Ganagbibili ca.
As if he were weeping hard.	{ Ganagtatañgís siyá.
Feigning he was weeping a great deal.	{

Ganga may be employed as plural.

As these.	Ganga nitò.
As those.	Ganga niyán, ganga nóon.

..... as these. Ganga nitò ca..... as those. Ganga niyán ca..., ganga nóon ca....

The comparison of quantity may be made by expressing the two objects compared in the nominative case with magcapares, magcapantáy and the root of quantity prefixed with ca at the end, the translation being literally "such a thing and such a thing are equal in quantity". The possessive case of a proper noun may be used for the possessive pronoun.

My brother has not so many books as these. Ang aquing capatid ay ualáng ganitò caraming libro.

My uncle has as much ink as my father. } Ang tinta nang aquing amain at ang nang aquin amá magcaparis carami.

Capara may govern the possessive case or the nominative of a common noun. Para-para is generally used to denote plurality.

Jewel, jewelry.	Hiyas, alhaja (Sp.).
Comb.	Sucláy.
Ear.	Taiñga.
Work.	Gauá, pag-gauá.
Eyelash.	Pilicmatá.
Wrist.	Galang-galañgan.
Flower.	Bulac-lac.
Ankle.	Bocò nang paá, bóol.
Armpit.	Quiliquili.
Rich, wealthy.	Mayaman.
Riches, wealth.	Cayamanan.
State, condition.	Lagáy.
Is he well?	¿Mabuti bagá ang lagáy niyá?.

THIRTEENTH EXERCISE.

You and your son, are well? We are well. Has your male-cousin any flowers in his garden? Yes, Sir, he has many flowers. Has he any other plants? Yes, Sir, he has other plants. Who have some houses? The wealthy have houses. Are there any good houses in your town? Yes, Sir, there are some good houses. What more have you? We have some oxen. Have you much more money? My baker has a great deal more. Has he more paper? He has more. Has the sailor as much coffee as tea? He has as much tea as coffee. Has this man as many friends as enemies? He has as many of the former as of the latter. Have they as many shoes as stockings? They have no stockings. Is my brother's hat as pretty as mine? Your brother's is as pretty as yours. Are you as wise as my uncle? I am not so wise as he. Is John as virtuous as my sister? They both are equally virtuous. Is that crystal as hard as stone? Stone is not so hard as this crystal. Is iron as white as silver? Iron is not as white as silver. Is ink as black as this? My ink is as black as that. Is my father's steel as good as our uncle's? Both of them are equally good. Are these dogs as beautiful as those? These are not so beautiful. Is bread thus made? Yes, in that manner. To what degree is my father old? Your father is as old as mine. To which degree is my aunt's servant wicked? He is as wicked as a thief. How pretty is my bird? It is pretty as a flower. Is Anthony as judicious as I? Both of you are judicious. What does he wish? He wishes to feign as if he were weeping hard. Are they as red as those? They are as red as these.

Is your jewelry as precious as my sister's? My jewelry is not so precious as your sister's. How many combs have you? I have two. Is your ear as black as my nose? It is as black as your wrist. Where have you your ankles and armpits? My ankles are at my feet, my armpits (at) under my shoulders. Are Cruz's family rich? They are rich. To what degree are they wealthy? They are wealthy as a king. Is your brother-in-law well? He is well.

FOURTEENTH LESSON.

YCALABING APAT NA PAGARAL.

DEGREES OF COMPARISON (continued).

SUPERIORITY, INFERIORITY AND SUPERLATIVE.

The simplest way of forming the comparative of superiority in Tagalog is to put the object with which the comparison is made in the ablative case (local ablative) by the use of the prepositions sa or cay. "Virtue is more precious than riches", ang cabanala,i, mahal sa cayamanan; "Peter is richer than John", Si Pedro,i, mayaman cay Juan; "my brother is taller than I", ang kapatir co,i, malaquí sa aquin; but it is both more idiomatic and more emphatic to insert the adverbs lalo, "more"; pa, "still"; or lalo pa, "more still"; between the things compared, with the same construction. Thus, ang cabanala,i, lalong mahal sa cayamanan; Si Pedro,i, mayaman pa cay Juan and ang kapatid co lalo pang malaquí sa aquin, express better the comparative of superiority. Labis and labis pa may likewise be used instead of lalo. Pa is used only in comparing a quality.

More (and a substantive)... than.	} Lalo... (the substantive) sa. } Lalo pa (the substantive) sa.
More (and an adj.)....than.	} Lalo (the adj.).....sa. } Lalo pa (the adj.).....sa.
	Lalo.....sa.
	Lalo pa.....sa.
-Er, -r.....than.	Pa.....sa.
	Labis sa.
	Labis pa.....sa.
More gold than silver.	Lalong guintó sa pílac.
More water than wine.	Lalo pang túbig sa álac.
The countrymen have more oxen than the villagers.	Ang mañga magsasacà,i, mayróon lalong baca sa mañga taga bayan.
My father has more bread than butter.	Ang amá co,i, mayróon lalo pang tinápáy sa mantiquiya.
You have more money than I.	Ycáo,i, mayróon lalo pang pílac sa aquin.
But the Judge has more than either of us.	Nguní,t, ang Hocom, ay mayróon pa sa ating lahat.
Virtue is more precious than wealth.	Lalong mahal ang cabanalan sa cayamanan.
Jane is younger than I.	Si Juana,i, lalo pang bata sa aquin, or, Si Juana,i, bata pa sa aquin.
My sisters are poorer than they.	Ang mañga kapatid cong babaye,i, duchá pa sa canilá.

I am shorter than my cousin.	Maliit pa acó sa aking pinsán.
She is browner than her brother.	{ Siyá,i, lalo pang cayomangui sa caniyang capatid na lalaqui.
Men are stronger than women.	{ Ang mañga lalaqui malacás pa sa mañga babaye.
Women are more beautiful than men.	{ Lalo pang magandá ang mañga babaye sa mañga lalaqui.

The comparative of inferiority, both for quantity and quality, is generally formed by reversing the terms. The adverbs cólang "less"; and alañján, "insufficient"; may also be used in this respect, as seen in the following comparative sentences.

It should be noticed, however, that if the negative adverbs di, hindi are not used, cólang has the force of a direct negative, as: cólang bait, "unjudicious", "not judicious"; cúlang pilac, "penniless".

Natives are less industrious than Americans.	{ Ang mañga americano,i, lalong masipag sa Tagalog, or, ang mañga Tagalog ay cúlang nang sípag sa mañga americano.
Natives' wealth is less than Americans'.	{ Ang cayamanan nang mañga Tagalog ay alañján sa cayamanan nang mañga americano.
Men are fewer than women.	{ Lalong marami ang mañga babaye sa mañga lalaqui, or, ang mañga lalaqui cúlang nang dami sa mañga babaye.

Relation, kinsman.	Hinlog, camagánac.
Kindred, relationship.	Camaganacan, cahinlogan.
Consanguineous relation.	Cadugó.
Relation by affinity.	Cabalaye.
The skies, Heaven.	Láñgit.
Coal.	Carbón (Sp.); uling na batò (Tag.).
Charcoal.	Oling.
Star.	Bituín.
Custom, habit, temper.	Asal, ugali.
Sick.	Maysaquit.
Apple.	{ Mansanas . (corr. from Sp. word manzana .)
Painter.	Pintor (Sp.); manhihibo, (Tag.).
Picture, painting, image.	Laráuan.
The roof.	Ang bubong.
The roof of the house.	Ang sa báhay na bubong.
The thatching straw.	Ang páuid.
The thatching straw plant.	Ang nipa, ang sasà.
Nipa-plantation.	Sasahán.
Cruel, bad-tempered.	Mabagsic.
Prayer.	Dasal.

THE SUPERLATIVE

The superlative relative degree is formed in the same way as the comparative of superiority, the word lahat or any other completive term closing the sentence.

Who are the richest?	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ◦ Sino sino ang lalong mayaman? ◦ Sino sino ang mayaman sa lahat?
Which of us is the wisest?	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ◦ Alin ang lalo pang marúnong sa atin? ◦ (Lit. the wiser of us.)
Which of them is the most industrious?	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ◦ Alin sa canilâ ang masipag sa lahat? ◦ (Lit. the industrious over all.)
My son is the most.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ◦ Ang anac co. ang lalo sa canilâ. ◦ (Lit. the more of them.)

Absolute superlatives are formed in several ways. The simplest is by using some of the following adverbs:

Very, much, exceedingly.	Lubhá, masáquit, labis, totoó.
Extremely.	Di sapala, di hámac, di palac.

Of these, those that are simple in structure may come before or after the word they qualify; the compound ones, after it.

Lub-há and labis have a sense of excess somewhat as the English "too" or "too much"; masáquit, a sense of plenty as when "hard" is used in English adverbially. Totoó is a term of assurance; the others are adverbial expressions, meaning "not paltry", "not calculable".

She is extremely virtuous.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Banal siyá Siyá di ba- nal na 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ◦ di hámac. ◦ di sapala. ◦ di palac. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ◦ lub-há. ◦ totoó. ◦ labis. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ◦ siyáng banal.
		<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ◦ Ang Dios ay totoóng marúnong. ◦ Lub-hang may-sáquit Si Pedro.
God is extremely wise.
Peter is very ill.
Their daughter is very beautiful.
His master is very cruel.
Heaven is exceedingly high.
The king's crown is very precious.
Honesty is much esteemed.

Another way to form the absolute superlative is by repeating the adjective in full and inserting the proper ligament between.

Very red.	Mapuñang mapuñang.
Extremely black.	Maitim na maitim.

The plural number is formed by employing the pluralizing particle for simple adjectives; and either by using the particle or by repeating the first syllable of the root, for those prefixed by ma-.

Most industrious maids!	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ◦ Mañga masipag na masipag na dalaga! ◦ Masipag na masipag na dalaga!
Very ugly dogs.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ◦ Mañga asong pañgit na pañgit. ◦ Ang mañga mabuting mabuting mansanas.
The extremely good apples	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ◦ Ang mabubuting mabubuting mansanas.

The adjectives may also be superlativized by repeating the root (or the two first syllables thereof) ca- being prefixed, and na or han suffixed.

Deep, profound.	Malalim.
Very deep, deepest, most profound	Calalimialimar.

Sweet.	Matamis.
Very sweet, sweetest.	Catamistamisan.
Wholesome.	Maguinbauà.
Very wholesome.	Caguinbaguinbauahan; or, maguinbauàng maguinbauà.

Superlatives or superlative expressions may be formed in a less formal way, as by using a negative word and any comparative term denoting equality, contention or fellowship before the possessive case of the adjective, the literal translation being "matchless", "unrivalled".

Matchless.	} in.	Di, ualáng	} nang.	Capara.
Unrivalled.				Capares.
Imcomparable.				Catulad.
				Cauaŋgis.
				Cahambing.
				Cahalimbáua
				Capantáy.
This flower is matchless in beauty.				Itòng bulac-lac na itò,i, ualáng caparis nang gandà.
King Richard was unrivalled in bravery.				Si Haring Ricardo,i, ualáng naging capantáy nang tápang nang unang panahón.

Verbs may also be superlativized in Tagalog.

FOURTEENTH EXERCISE.

Has your servant a good broom? He has one. Have the husbandmen of these or of those bags? They have neither of these nor of those. Who has a good trunk? My brother has one. Has he a leather or a wooden trunk? He has a wooden one. Has the carpenter many iron nails? He has many. Who has some guns? The Americans have some. Have you the wooden hammer of the Frenchman or that of the Englishman? I have neither. What is more precious than wealth? Virtue. Who is the greatest of all? God. Who are younger than my brothers? Is coal different from charcoal? Yes, coal is different from charcoal. Are there many stars in the sky by night-time? Yes, there are a great many. Is your male cousin good-tempered? No, he is cruel. Is your mother sick? No, she is well, but the painter is sick. How much is the dozen of those apples? Twenty cents. Has your aunt many pictures in her house? She has three pictures at her house. Of what material is the roof of your neighbor's house? The roof of the neighbor's house is of thatching straw. What is the plant of thatching straw. Nipa. Are there any nipa fields in your province? Yes, there are some. Where is your master? He is at church. Is he cruel? No, he is not cruel, he is kind. What prayer is that? Our Father. (The Lord's prayer.) How many persons are there? There are three; John, Alfred and Richard. Which is the wisest? The wisest is John. Which the eldest? The eldest is Alfred. Which is the whitest? The whitest is Richard. Which of your sisters is the most beautiful? Jane is beautiful. Mary is more beautiful; but Clara is the most beautiful of the three. oh! Clara is very beautiful. Are Americans very industrious? They are extremely industrious. Is honey very sweet? Yes, honey is very sweet. Are buffalos ugly? Yes, indeed, they are exceedingly ugly. What animal is very swift? The horse is very swift. Are birds swifter than horses? Yes, birds are swifter than horses. Are natives very swarthy? No, they are not very swarthy. Are your eyelashes very black? They are very black. Is the sea deep? The sea is very deep. Are apples wholesome? They are very wholesome. The bird is matchless in swiftness. Is your father virtuous? My father is matchless for virtue.

FIFTEENTH LESSON.
YCALABING LIMANG PAGARAL.

DIMINUTIVES.

It has been said in the preceding lesson that the repeating of an adjective in full and the inserting of the proper ligament between, forms a kind of superlative. Well, then, the repeating of the root of a compound adjective without any ligament makes the diminutive.

Idle, lazy.	Matamad.
A little idle, somewhat lazy.	Matamadtamad.
Savory, tasteful.	Masarap.
A little savory.	Masarapsarap.
Sour.	Maasim.
Sourish.	Maasimasim.
Salt, salted.	Maalat.
Saltish, brackish.	Maalatálat.
Rapid, fleet.	Matulin.
Moderately speedy.	Matulintulin.
Rough, uneven.	Magaspang.
Rather rough.	Magaspangaspang.
Is the Del Rosario family's servant industrious?	{ ¿Masipag bagá ang alila nina del Ro- sario?
No, he is rather lazy.	Hindí, siyá,i, matamartamar.
What is sourish?	{ ¿Anò bagá ang maasimasim.?
These oranges are sourish.	{ Itòng mañga dalandán ay maasi- masim.
Do you wish to have a little water?	{ ¿Ybig mo bagá nang caunting túbig.?
I do not wish to have any, because it is saltish.	{ Ayáo acó nang túbig, sa pagca,t, ma- alatálat.

The preceding is the inflective form to lessen the meaning of an adjective, but muntí, cauntí, "small", "little"; before or after the word, may likewise be used. Cauntí is more used as an adverb.

A little cotton.	Caunting búlac.
A small book.	{ Isàng munting libro, isàng librong muntí.
This milk is pretty good.	Itòng gatas na itò,i, mabutibuti.

Common nouns may be made diminutive by repeating the root and using the affix an or han. The term thus resulting is not only a diminutive noun, but it is moreover applicable to any graphic representation of the thing, and, in many cases, the sense imparted is one of contempt or derision of the original meaning.

Little bird or painted figure of a bird.	Ibonibonan.
Little person, abject fellow, or painted representation thereof, manikin.	{ Tauotauhan.

Petty king, ringleader, one who in play personates a king.	Hariharian.
Physician, person who cures.	Mangagamot. (Tag.); médico . (Sp.).
Quack, medicaster.	Medimedicohan. (1).
Who has Mary's little prayer book?	¿Na sa canino bugá ang cay Ma- riang librong muntí na dasalan?
I have it.	Na sa aquin.

Colloquial pretty names of persons are largely in use among natives, and although, in some cases, the original name has been so distorted, as not to preserve a single letter of the simple, the commonest way is however to pronounce the last two syllables and to change the last vowel to ay for male and to áy for female persons.

Francis.	Frank.	Francisco.	Yseo.	Quicóy
Frederic.	Fred.	Pederico.		Icóy.
Mary.	Mag.	María.		Biangué.
Margaret.	Madge.	Margarita.		Titáy.

Monosyllabic and dys-syllabic personal names are not generally made diminutives.

There are other suppletory ways of lessening the meaning of substantives, one of which, especially for the abstract ones, is to precede may and postpone din.

He is pretty well off.	Siyá.i. may cayamanan din.
My mother is slightly recovering her strength.	Ang ina co.i. may calacasan din.

Verbs are very frequently diminutivized in Tagalog as will be seen in subsequent lessons.

But (adv.), only.	Lámang, bocor.
But (prep.).	Bocor, tañgi, liban.
I have but one friend.	Mayroón acóng isáng caibigan lámang.
All of them came here but me.	Naparitò siláng lahat tañgi sa aquin.
Too much, too many.	Labís, lubháng marami.
You have too much wine.	Cayó.i. mayroón álac na labis.
They have too many books.	Silá.i. may lub-háng maraming libro.
Pepper.	Lara. puminta . (corr. from Sp. word pimienta).
Vinegar.	Suca.
Vein or root.	Ugat.
Throat.	Lalamunan (root-word, lamon , "to swallow).
Brains, marrow, pith.	Utac.
Nerves.	Mañga litid.
Cocoa-nut oil.	Lañgis.
Tinaja , large earthen jar about 20 gal- lons in capacity.	Tapayan.
Well, any hole dug in the ground to get at fresh water.	Bal-on.
Shirt.	Baro.
Beast, an animal whatever.	Háyop.

(1) Be it, once for all, taken into account that in repeating a syllable or a word the repetition does not pass beyond, respectively, the second letter or second syllable thereof.

Dead.	Patáy, namatáy.
Deceased people.	Nañgamatáy.
Priest, curate, parson.	{ Cura (Sp.); pare (corr. from Sp. word

FIFTEENTH EXERCISE

How many shoes has your wife? She has only two. Who is lazy? The female servant is a little lazy. What is the most savory fruit in The Philippines? The pine-apple; but the banana is somewhat tasteful, Are oranges sour? Oranges are only sourish. Is this water salt water? No, it is only saltish. Are chickens fleetier than hens? Chickens, while they are still small, are only a little fleet. Is that apple tasteful? It is rather insipid. Will you have some bread? I wish to have some. Do you not wish to go to school? I wish to go to church, but my friend Frank does not. Have you a good deal of money? I have only a little. How is that milk? This milk is sourish. What is that picture? That picture is that of a bird. Are there many figures in that picture? This picture has (bears) twenty figures. Is his brother a physician? He is only a quack. What is that painted in that picture? It is a house. Is your baker well? He is sick. To what degree is he sick? He is pretty nearly recovered. Did all of you go to church this morning? They all went there but me. How many Gods are there? There is only one. How much money has the priest? The priest has too much. What is that you have in that bag? It is paper. Does he wish to have some vinegar? He does not wish to have any, for he has a sore throat. Where are roots and veins? Roots of trees are in the earth, veins are throughout the body of animals. What are brains? Brains are the roots of nerves. Is there any cocoa-nut oil in that tinaja? There is none, this tinaja is empty. Where is there any water? There is water in the well. Is your father dead? Yes, my father is dead. Where are now the souls of dead persons? Those of virtuous people are in Heaven, those of the wicked are in Hell. What is a priest? A priest is a minister of God. What is impudent? There are many actions that are impudent. Is it proper for a man to make shirts? No, it is proper for women. Are beasts and men alike? No, beasts and persons are different, beasts bear towards earth, men bear towards God

SIXTEENTH LESSON.

YCALABING ANIM NA PAGARAL.

THE VERB.

Verbs in Tagalog are either primitive or derivative; the former are those which in their original signification are verbs; the latter are formed from primitive verbs, substantives, adjectives or any other parts of speech by the addition of prefixes, suffixes or both; or by the insertion of particles. The derivative verbs may be subdivided into primary or secondary according to whether the root is combined with one or several particles.

Primitive verbs are generally dyssyllabic in structure.

Primitive verbs may be either transitive as caín, "to eat"; or intransitive as talóg, "to sleep"; but a transitive sense may be given to an intransitive verb and vice-versa by the application of particles.

Though the examples of primitive verbs given above are translated for the sake of convenience by the English infinitive, their signification is not necessarily rendered by that mood. The fact is, that the meaning of the radical or primitive is indefinite and depends for its precise signification on its position (with respect to other words) in the sentence or on the particles which may be prefixed, inserted or suffixed to it. Thus, the verb in its simple form is best considered as being in the imperative mood, second person, that being the part of the verb which can, in the majority of cases, be expressed without the use of a particle.

It is not proposed, in a work like the present, to go deeply into a scientific arrangement which, however well suited to the European languages, is adapted with less propriety to uncultivated ones like Tagalog. It is believed that paradigms showing the most common changes of which the verbal root is susceptible and an exhaustive consideration of the particles will be sufficient for the student to grasp the matter; but we can hardly dispense with impressing on him the importance of these particles, a right understanding of which will give him the mastery of the language.

The particle to, expressive of the English infinitive; the prefixes and suffixes a, ab, ant, di, er, ee, en, or, etc., and the terminations ing, ed which accompany verbs and verbal nouns in English, however sense-imparting they may be, fall far short of the significance of the Tagalog particles.

That the student may have an idea of the modifying power of these particles, we subjoin a paradigm showing the manifold meanings they impart to the verbal root áral, (idea of knowledge, teaching) which has been selected for the purpose.

ROOT-ARAL.

SENSE.	PARTICLE.	DERIVATIVE.	MEANING.

Verbal nouns expressive of every shade of meaning, mood or tense of which the verb is susceptible, are also formed by applying the particles and should be added to the preceding verbs in the same way as above, with the article.

PARTICLES.	TAGALOG COMPOUNDS.	SIGNIFICATION.
Pag. (prefixed).	Ang pagáral.	The lesson. (looked upon as to the teacher).
Do. (") and the repetition of the first syllable of the root.	Ang pagaáral.	Do do. (looked upon as to the pupil).
An. (suffixed).	Ang aralán.	The person to whom instruction is given.
Y. (pref.).	Ang yáral.	What is taught.
Ungm. (pref.).	Ang ungmaáral	The teacher.
Pag. (prefixed and repetition of the first syll.)	Ang pagaáral.	The learning, the studying.
Mag. (pref.).	Ang magáral.	What learned.
Pag. (prefixed and an suffixed).	Ang pagaralán.	The person or book from whom or which learning is derived.
Man. (and the first syllable repeated).	Ang mañgaáral.	The master, the professor.
Ypinañg. (prefixed and repetition of the first syllable),	Ang ypinañgaáral.	What is preached, the subject of a sermon.
Pinañg, repetition and an suffixed.	Ang pinañgañgaralán.	The pulpit or the person to whom something is preached, the audience.
Man. (prefixed to the particle of the habitual sense).	Ang mañgañgáral.	The preacher.

We might continue thus to exhaust the derivatives of which the objective, subjective, etc., actions are capable, but what has already been given will be enough to convey to the student a fair idea of the importance of these particles and to make clear for him that his being acquainted with but few roots will enable him to express many thoughts if he knows these particles and employs them understandingly.

Among many other verbalizing particles, the following three, deemed to be essential, should be first considered.

Um, for verbalizing transitively or intransitively, when the action is looked upon as being in progress or the act of the subject without special reference as to the object.

Mag, for verbalizing, generally transitively, when the action looks forward to a definite object, or when reflectiveness or reciprocalness, and, in the case of intransitive verbs, intensiveness is meant.

Ma, for verbalizing in an intransitive or involuntary sense.

CONJUGATION.

The fact should not be lost sight of, that in primitive verbs, in their primary sense, or when a special modification of the action is not to be denoted, the radical alone may stand for every tense, if the latter can be gathered from the context or is otherwise implied by some expression of time. In the case of a derivative verb or when, for a primitive one, a definitely stated tense is to be expressed, the following general rules are laid down as to the conjugation.

FIRST. In every case in which the verbalizing particle begins with m, m is changed into n for the present and past tenses.

SECOND. In almost every case, either the first syllable of the root or the second of the particle, if the latter consists of more than one, is repeated for the present and future tenses.

There not being true auxiliary verbs in Tagalog, the tenses are all simple in structure. Some grammarians, however, in a desire to assimilate the Tagalog conjugation to that of the western languages, have adopted the particle maca, itself a true verbalizing one, with the optionally used complete postpositive particle na, to express the past complete and future complete tenses, maca changing into naca for the past perfect, according to the general rule, as above-stated. This particle is here retained for purposes of expediency, but the student is already instructed with regard to its meaning.

UM PARTICLE.

When a root is to be conjugated by um, this particle should be prefixed to the root if the latter begins with a vowel, and inserted between the first consonant (or consonants) and the vowel if the root begins with a consonant. Thus, the definite infinitive and imperative of the verb are formed. To form the present tense, um, but better ungm, is prefixed or inserted in the manner above stated and the first syllable of the root is repeated.

The past tense (present perfect and past indefinite) in this conjugation, is formed by simply prefixing um (better ungm) without repeating the first syllable of the root.

The pluperfect is formed in the suppletory way already explained of prefixing naca to the root (in other conjugations to the root prefixed with the passive particle), na being optionally used at the end.

The simple future (future indefinite tense) in this conjugation, is formed by merely repeating the first syllable of the root without the particle.

The compound future (future perfect tense) is formed by prefixing maca to the root, what has been said as to the pluperfect being also applicable to this tense.

It is hardly necessary to say again here, that if the first syllable of a root consists of more than two letters, only the first two should be taken for repetition. If it consists of a vowel and a consonant only the vowel is repeated in the present and future tenses. For instance: acyat "to go up"; ungmaac-yat siyá, and not, ungmacac-yat siyá, "he goes up."

U if inserted between g and e or i to soften the sound of g is not reckoned as a letter for the effects of repetition, as in: guinhauá, "growing well"; acó,i, gungmiguinhauá, instead of, gungmuiguinhauá, "I am getting well". This applies also to the liquid consonants in the few cases in which they are met with combined with another consonant and a vowel in the first syllable of verbs: trabajo, for instance, makes nagtatrabajo, and not nagtratabajo, although both ways are in use.

There is in Tagalog, as in English, no specific form to express the French or Spanish imperfect tense of the indicative, that which represents a past action as going on or simultaneous with some other past action. This tense, which is rendered in English by the past tense of the verb "to be" and the present participle of the principal verb, as: "I was writing when he came," is made in Tagalog by using the verb in the present coupled with some adverb of time as illustrated to indicate the same tense with mayroón.

Two roots, áral and sílat, are hereafter conjugated by um to fully illustrate the explanations given above.

ROOT.

ARAL. (idea of instruction.)

(1). The student is recommended to write ungmaáral in the present and ungmáral etc. in the past tenses, instead of umáral, umáral as many do. By so doing distinction is made between those tenses and the imperative and infinitive of the verb.

Write (thou).	Sumúlat ca.
Let him. her. it. write.	.. siyá.
Let us	{ Tayo. } { Camí. }
Write (ye).	.. cayó.
Let them write.	.. silá.

The imperative lacks the first person singular and it requires the pronouns to be put after it.

Verbal nouns are formed (in roots verbalized with um) by prefixing pag to the root. Thus.

The teaching.	Ang pagáral.
The writing.	Ang pagsúlat.

The subjunctive mood is in Tagalog, as in English, merely a syntactical one, the conjunction or any other special particle, and not an inflection, expressing the mood. The following two postpositive particles are, among others, the fittest to express the conditional (future consequent tense) and the past tenses.

Should, would. (signs of the conditional tense).	{ Sana, disín.
I should like to teach, but I have no opportunity.	{ Ybig co sana, i, umáral, ñguní, t, ualá acóng capanahonan.
If he would write, I should go there.	{ Cun siyá, i, susúlat disín ay paroróon (sana) acó.

The following are likewise conditional particles and expressions used in connection with the subjunctive mood.

If, whether.	Cun.
Were it not for.	Dañgan, cundañgan.
As if it were.	Cun sana sa.
Provided.	Lámang.
Provided not, unless.	Houag lámang.

The following have an optative sense.

Would to God.	{ Nauá, siyá nauá, cahimanauari, ma-
It would be better.	{ anong.
	Di ñga salámat, maháñgay-mahañga.

The following particles have a dubitative sense.

It may be, may be, may hap.	Sacali, bagá sacali, cun bagá sacali.
Perhaps.	Maráhil.
Lest.	Macá, bacá.

The following have an adversative unconditional sense.

Though, although.	{ Man, bagamán, cahit, cahima,t, bistá,
In spite of, despite.	{ bistat.
Happen what may.	Man, matáy man.
In spite of, for all that.	Sucdán.
Although not.	Matáy, matáy man.
	Di man.

The student should conjugate by um the following roots.

To drink.	Ynom, inum, uminum.
To ask for.	Hiñgí, humiñgí.
To read.	Basá, bumasa.
To go in, to enter.	Pásoc, pumásoc.
Running, to run.	Tacò, tumacò.
Outside, to go out, to come out.	Labás, lumabás.
Purchase, to buy.	Bili, bumili.
Eating, to eat.	Cáin, cumáin.
Step, pace, to walk.	Lácad, lumácad.
Arrival, to arrive.	Dating, dumating.
Departure, to leave, to go away.	Alís, umalís.

SIXTEENTH EXERCISE.

Do you teach Tagalog? Yes, Sir, I teach Tagalog. What was it he was teaching yesterday? What he was teaching yesterday was English. Did we write any letters last Sunday? We wrote many. When have they written any prayers? They have written some these past days. When will their father write? He will write the day after to-morrow. Had you read any letter when my sister arrived? When your sister arrived I had already read a letter. What did they say to their children? They said to them, ~~read~~. Would he drink some water had he any? He would not drink any, had he some wine. Has the tailor asked his mother for anything? He asked her for some bread. Had I some books, would you wish to read? Had you some books, it may be I should read some. If he should go into town, would he enter his aunt's house? If he should go into town, he would perhaps enter his aunt's house. Shall I run? Do not run in such a manner, lest your father come here. Would you go out if the weather were fine? Were not the weather bad, I should perhaps go out. Would you buy any pens even if your master come? Yes, I should buy some pens though my master come. Will you eat much boiled rice next Sunday?

Though I may have a great deal I shall not eat much. Which is better, to run or to walk? To walk is better than to run. When will the bishop arrive? The bishop's arrival is only once a year. Shall you go away? In spite of bad weather, I shall go away. Shall I already have read when my son arrives? Though he does not come, I shall read, whatever may happen.

SEVENTEENTH LESSON. YCALABING PITONG PAGARAL.

VERBALIZING PARTICLE MAG-PAG.

The second important verbalizing particle is mag for the active, pag for the passive voice of the verb.

The frame of the conjugation is for this particle nearly the same as for the preceding, um. The m is changed into n for present and past tenses, the first syllable of the root being repeated in the present and the future according to the general rule. A verbalizing particle has a corresponding one, generally beginning with p, for the passive voice, with which it will be always coupled in this grammar; um and pa conjugations are excepted.

We have admitted, for method's sake, of naca and maca expressing the pluperfect and future perfect tenses. Maca, being also an independent verbalizing particle, and it being the rule that if two different particles join in composition with the same root, that which imparts the primary sense should be expressed in the passive form, naca, maca, then, are not to be prefixed to mag, but to pag in this and the following conjugations, thus making nacapag, macapag for those tenses. In this, and in the simple future tense retaining the particle before the repetition of the first syllable of the root, this and all the other conjugations differ from that of um.

A paradigm and two roots conjugated by mag are subjoined for illustration:

(1) The student is already instructed that the subject, be it a noun or a pronoun, may come before the verb, the verbal ligament being inserted between: acó, nagáral acó, nagbibili. Not to fill up too much space we only use the form in the illustration, which is, on the other hand, both the commonest and the most idiomatic.

Verbal nouns.

The verbal noun for this second particle is formed by prefixing pag to the root, and repeating the first syllable of the latter.

The learning, selling. Ang pagaáral, pagbibili.

Students should be careful to distinguish um verbal nouns from those of mag, as the same difference extends itself to many other particles which may be combined with these two. Thus, ang pagáral, "the teaching"; ang pagaáral, "the learning"; ang pagpaáral, "the ordering to teach"; ang pagpapagaáral, "the ordering to study"; and so forth for other particles.

The following roots should be conjugated with mag by the student.

Account, consideration; to think.	Ysip, mag-ísip.

SEVENTEENTH EXERCISE.

Does your baker buy or sell bread? He sells bread, but he buys wood. Does your master do anything in Manila? He is learning English and teaching Tagalog. Do you think (intend) to give something to the poor? I give them no money, because I have very little; but I desire to have a great deal and then I will give them bread and clothes. Why do our daughter-in-law's brothers desire to go out? They wish to go out, because they are going to their father to take out some plates. When do the Docot family think (intend) to leave? They all will leave to-morrow in the afternoon, for they wish to take away some husk-rice from their mother's farm. Where do you carry any money? I bring some here, because I intend to buy some masonry houses. How much of it does Peter take there? He does not bring any now, he has brought a thousand dollars some days ago. Does your neighbour take something to his children? He takes to them some rice. Why do you order John to go to mass every Sunday? Because I remember that to go to mass is a commandment of God. Where did they put my dish? They put it in the garden. What do you say? Do that immediately and then (afterwards) go into the garden and bring (fetch) some grass. What is Moll saying about John's household? She is saying, as the parents, so the children are. Do you still desire to go to sea to bring some sailors? I desire to go there to take some money to my friends. Have you still many friends? No, Sir, I have very few, because the majority of them are dead. What is that you have in your hand? It is a pair of scissors. Have you another pair? No, I have only a penknife.

EIGHTEENTH LESSON.

YCALABING UALONG PAGARAL.

VERBALIZING PARTICLE MA—^{CA}_{MA}

The particle ma, (ca and ma in the passive) is the mark of a verb which expresses a state or condition of being and is therefore mainly used to form intransitive verbs. In many cases, however, ma expresses, not merely a state or condition, but has even a possessive force as in mabúhay, "living", "having life"; and hence many derivatives with ma are true adjectives as, marúnung, "having, possessing wisdom"; but it should be carefully taken into account that such state or condition of being as expressed by ma must be intrinsic, and not one to be arrived at by any conscious deliberate endeavour of an agent. On the other hand, transitive actions which are conjugated with other particles when deliberate or conscious acts of the agent are to be expressed, may be conjugated by ma if they result from chance, fortuity, or by unconsciousness on the part of the agent. •

The conjugation is similar to that of mag, but naca and maca in the past perfect and future perfect tenses are replaced by the completive adverb na after the respective simple tenses, a way to denote completeness and, at the same time, to avoid any misconception arising from the use of those particles, on account of ma being one of the passive particles for maca.

EIGHTEENTH EXERCISE.

How is your friend? It seems as if he were sleeping, but I think he is dying. Had you slept this morning when my sister arrived? No, I had not yet slept. What does a person profoundly asleep look like? A person who is profoundly asleep looks like a cadaver. Who among you are hungry? Not even one among us is hungry, but everybody is thirsty. Why are your female neighbours afraid? They are afraid, because their father is very sick and they fear that he may die. What did you do then, that you are so ashamed? Sir, I am ashamed, because it is one month since I went to mass. Is Jane, the tailor's sister, cold? She is not cold, she seems to be cold, but, on the contrary, she is warm. Why are their children glad? They are glad, because their father tries to conduct them all to Manila. Is your curate sad? He is sad, because very few people go to mass on Sundays. Whose are the houses that burn away? The houses that are burning belong to your friend, Jane's uncle. Who tore away your shirt? Nobody tore away my shirt, it seems as if it were torn; but it is only cut. Will his aunt break into pieces all the plates, glasses, bottles and tinajas? No, Sir, she only wishes to break the tinajas, but she did not think to break all the other things. Why does not the servant bring here the cane I gave him yesterday (last) night? He is afraid and ashamed to come here, because he broke the cane into splints. Who parted this string? John's servant's aunt parted that and many other strings. Are you mending something there? I am mending shirts and shoes. Why does not your son take up the needles? He does not wish either to pick up the needles or the mangoes. Does a virtuous man try to seek something? A virtuous man tries to seek the path (the way) to Heaven. Is the water in the sea warm or cool? The water in the sea is somewhat warm. How old is already your first-born sister? She passes already thirty six years. What price is rice sold at at present? It is sold at five dollars the bushel. What do you say to me? I say to you good morning, because it is morning now; when noon is past I shall bid you good afternoon, and then when night enters I shall say good evening until mid-night. Which do you consider as the best of all fruits? I consider the banana the best fruit; but some people say the mango is the best of all. What is the rice plant? Rice is a plant that has an ear. What has every man? Every man has his own clothes; for the very reason they have clothes, they fear to tear those of other people. Will man die? All mankind will die, all plants will be burnt (faded, dried) and all the stars will be extinguished.

NINETEENTH LESSON. YCALABING SIYAM NA PAGARAL.

THE PASSIVE VOICE.

The forms of conjugation given in foregoing lessons are not the most usual in Tagalog. They are the vague expression of an action abstract in notion and somewhat indeterminate as to object, manner, place or purpose. When the action bears upon a determinate object or special purpose, Tagalog verbs generally assume other forms of conjugation called passives. Among them, that which is formed with the particle in-hin is prominent and should be considered as the true passive voice. In may be prefixed, inserted or suffixed; hin is always suffixed.

To form the passive voice in roots conjugated actively with the particle um, in is prefixed to the first vowel of the root or inserted between the consonant and the first vowel, for the simple present and past tenses. In or hin, as the case may be, is suffixed to the root in the simple future and imperative, hin being only for roots ending in a sharply accented vowel. The first syllable of the root should be repeated for simple present and future tenses as already stated. The pluperfect and future perfect may be formed in two different ways: either by adding the completive particle na after the respective simple tenses or by prefixing na to the root in the pluperfect, and ma in the future perfect if this construction is preferred, ma, na being the passive particles for maca-naca.

It has already been stated that a passive sentence in Tagalog requires the agent to be put in the possessive case. Now, if the subject is a pronoun either form of the possessive case may be used; the prepositive, of course, before (without the verbal ligament), or the postpositive, after, (also without the verbal ligament) as seen in the examples following. The latter construction is, however, more idiomatic and far more in use. If the subject is a noun or a sentence, it should be put after the verb, for, cay Pedrong inibig si Juana, although not ungrammatical is little in fashion; as inibig ni Pedro Si Juana, "Jane is loved by Peter"; is far more in use.

As an illustration, two examples serving of a standard as to how verbs with um in the active should be conjugated in the in-hin passive, are given hereafter.

To wish, to want, to love.	Umibig.
Wishing.	Pag-ibig.
To be loved, to love some thing.	Ybig-in or ibiguin.
To reward.	Gumanti.
Rewarding.	Pag-ganti.
To be rewarded, to reward somebody.	Gantihin.

I am calling for my servant, who is never at home.	{ Tinatáuag eo ang aking alila, na pa- rating ualá sa bahay.
Nephew, niece.	Pamangqing lalaqui, babaye.

NINETEENTH EXERCISE.

Is your nephew ascending the mountain? He is ascending the mountain, because he wishes to sight the sea. What is your father's godchild's name? My father's godchild's name is Frank. Whom do you love the most? It is my father whom I love the most. Had you not a father, whom would you love the most? Had I not a father, I should love my husband, wife (spouse) the most. Why did his niece wish to accompany this man to church? Because she is his godchild. Who is her godmother? Her godmother is that woman who was looking at the trees yesterday afternoon. Why did Jesus Christ ascend to Heaven? He ascended to Heaven to receive there all the souls of virtuous people here on Earth. Will my sister-in-law's male godchild listen to the good doctrine which Father Santos will preach to him? He would perhaps listen to it if somebody would lead him to church. Do you like to give a relish to that mango there at your sister's table? I scented it just a while and although it appears a tasteful it is not, so then, I will not taste it. Where is the cat which I bought the day before yesterday? She went out because scented that mouse that got into that hole when we were in the garden and the cat concealed herself in the tinaja, How many times did the maid-servant go up into the mirador to look for my sister's spectacles? She went up there three times. Why do you not touch me? Because it is a bad custom to touch persons. What is the servant you called for before, doing? He is always running about the streets and when I call for him he never comes or listens, and although he be asked he never replies at all. Why, then, did you receive him? He seemed to be judicious and honest; but he is, on the contrary, naughty and a thief. What books are those your sister is reading? My sister read your books and she is now reading mine. What other books will she read to-morrow? To-morrow she will go out to buy the birds you told her and she will not arrive here in time. What bread has John's brother eaten? He ate the bread his sister gave him.

TWENTIETH LESSON.
YCADALAUANG POUONG PAGARAL.

PASSIVE VOICE (continued).

Pag, is the proper passive particle for mag. Pag, is however dropped in most verbs conjugated actively by mag, the um passive form of conjugation generally being common to both um and mag active particles.

When pag is retained, in cases and for purposes to be explained in subsequent lessons, in is inserted between p and a, thus forming pinag for present and past tenses, and affixed to the root for the imperative and simple future. The first syllable of the root should be repeated in the regular way for present and future tenses.

Two verbs of mag conjugation are subjoined as an illustration of both forms of the passive.

ROOT.

Part, share. Bahagui,

To distribute. Magbahagui.

Infinitive.

To be distributed, (some thing). Bahaguinin. (1).

My wish is to go presently to Peter's to take to him the money of my purchase of timber. What are you thinking? Nothing. What does the curate send to your son at Manila? He sends him these books.

TWENTY FIRST LESSON.
YCADALAUANG POUO,T, ISANG PAGARAL.

VERBAL INSTRUMENTAL CASE.

The pasive voice may assume in the majority of cases a verbal instrumental form by prefixing to the root in the um conjugation, and to the verbal particle in the others, the particle i or y in all tenses, the first syllable of the root being repeated in the common way for the present and future tenses. The pluperfect and future perfect tenses may be formed by adding to the respective simple ones the completive adverb na or some other importing time; but the suppletory way of respectively prefixing na or ma is to be preferred. In this latter case i or y should be inserted between the said particles and the simple or compound root.

With a certain group of verbs, comprising those which require two complements, (such as: to give, to tell, to lend, etc.), and those expressing any expulsive or scattering action (such as, to throw away, to sow, etc.) y pasive is used to form a passive nearly analogous to that of English. When used with verbs not included in this group, the y pasive forms a voice peculiar to Tagalog, grammatically, but not logically, a passive. In these cases y points out the instrument with which, the determinate time in which or the reason or cause by which the action is performed, such instrument, time or reason becoming the grammatical subject of the sentence and is put in the nominative, especially when the sentence includes, besides a direct complement, another indirect expressive of any such instrument etc.

The student should conjugate the following roots in the verbal instrumental form of passive.

Vomition; to cast up, to vomite.	Sucà, sumucà
To cast up, (some thing), to be cast up or the matter thrown out from the body.	Ysuca.
To sow, to scatter seed.	Sumábog, magsábog.
(Some thing) to be sown.	Ysábog.
To spread about, to propagate.	Cumálat.
(Some thing) to be spread.	Ycálat.
To cause to be spread, to cause propagation.	Magcálat.
(Some thing) to be made spread or propagated.	Ypagcálat.
Incandescent wood.	Gátong.
To throw fuel into the fire, (some thing) to be made burnt.	Gumátong, ygátong.
To stir up the fire.	Mag-gáton.
(Some thing) ordered or made to brisk fire.	Ypag-gátong.
Fishing-hook.	Binuit.
(Some thing) to be got by the hook.	Ybinuit.

OBSERVATION.

What has been hitherto explained shows that all forms of Tagalog conjugation are inflective, as no separate sign or auxiliary verb is required. Now, with regard to the y and an Tagalog passive voices, it would be well if the student should consider them as simple purpose-determining verbal forms and that they would always be translated into English by the active voice. By so doing the important matter of Tagalog construction, which is about to follow, will be better understood.

Every passive sentence in Tagalog requires an element (not always expressed) in the nominative, and another in the possessive case, the latter being always the agent of the verb. The element in the nominative may be the direct object or any of the various divisions of the indirect one. In sentences containing a verb in the y passive voice the direct complement should be put in the nominative if the action expressed by such verb is of a kind to require this form of passive. (Verbs requiring two complements, verbs of expulsion, etc.)

I will sow this paddy, this paddy will be sown by me.	Ysasábog co itòng pálay; itòng pálay na itò,i, ysasábog co.
I give this money to the poor, this money is given by me to the poor.	Ybinibigáy co itòng salapí sa mañga duc-há, itòng salapí, ay ibinibigáy co sa mañga duc-há.
I threw away your book, your book was thrown away by me.	Ytinapon co ang iyòng libro, ang li-bro mo, ay ytinapon co.

The second forms of the above sentences are somewhat emphatic. It may be laid down as a rule that any word which is intended to render emphatic in Tagalog should be put at the beginning of the sentence and in the nominative case, somewhat as to say in English, "money!, I have none", by which arrangement, the word "money" is made more prominent than by saying, "I have no money."

TWENTY FIRST EXERCISE.

What did you cut out that shirt with? I have cut it out with scissors. How does the carpenter make tables? He makes them with a hammer. Have you cut that stuff with scissors? Yes, Sir, it is with scissors that I have cut it. What has your sister thrown away before in the morning? She has thrown away her pen. Why has she thrown it away? Because it was already worn out. Would they throw away their money, had they any? No, if they had any money they would not throw it away. What shall I do with this fish? Cast it away. What is the news here in town? They say the Judge will arrive to-day. Who reported that to you? Everybody says so. When will your father-in-law report to his children the death of his servant? He will report it next Sunday. Why do you not wish me to drink wine? I do not wish you to drink wine, because you will perhaps vomit. What did you vomit yesterday? I vomited what I had eaten. What would your father sow in his farm, were the weather fine? If the weather were fine, he would sow rice. What is propagated in a large measure by wicked people? Wicked people spread about vice. What did you do with the wood which your farmer sent you? I cast it into the fire. What are you doing there? I am stirring up the fire.

TWENTY SECOND LESSON.

YCADALAUANG POUO,T, DALAUANG PAGARAL.

THE VERBAL LOCAL CASE.

The passive voice may likewise assume a verbal local case which sometimes corresponds to the dative and sometimes to the local ablative of nouns. This kind of passive, it will be seen, also stands sometimes for the direct object of nouns.

The conjugation is made by suffixing an or han, as the case may be, to the root or compound in all the tenses. In, the true passive particle, is preserved throughout, except where it is a suffix, that is to say, in the infinitive, imperative, and simple future, where in or hin is dropped and replaced respectively, by an or han.

Sentences with a verb in the local case are generally constructed by putting the person or place, the English indirect object, in the nominative. In cases where an passive stands for the direct complement, the latter should be put in the nominative too.

TWENTY SECOND EXERCISE

From whom does the merchant borrow his goods. He does not borrow any goods from anybody, he buys them from other merchants, but he borrowed some money from one of his countrymen some days ago. Who is he whom the baker will borrow money from? He will borrow some from his uncle's carpenters. Had you already borrowed anything from Peter when I arrived here? No, when you arrived here, I had not yet borrowed anything from Peter. Whom shall I borrow from? Borrow from your aunt. Where did Jesus Christ endure many hardships? It was at Mount Calvary where Our Lord endured many hardships. Shall you have put up with many grievances when you are old? Yes, I shall have stood many grievances when I am old. Whom have you stolen this book from? I stole this book from nobody, it was given to me by my sister. How often did you steal anything from your parents? Three times. How much at a time? Twice, twenty five cents and once one dollar. What is my sister-in-law watching over? She is watching over her plants. And the soldiers, what do they watch over? They watch over towns and roads. What place is the beat (covers) of John? John's beat is the large bridge. What do you wish me to note? I wish you to note this I am teaching (showing) to you. What is it? That happiness here on Earth soon passes away. What did you wound him with? I wounded him with a knife. Where did you wound him? I wounded him in the arm. Who will sing to-night? Alfred's daughter will sing to-night. In whose honor will she sing? She will sing in honor of her father. What does she say? (what is her saying?) She says, oh mother!. To whom did my female cousin say that? She said that to her aunt. Where did you throw the rotten wood? The sea was the place where I threw the rotten wood. Where did the servant put that cheese? The table was the place where he put it. To whom did their brother write? It was his children to whom he wrote. To which house do you wish to go up? It is to your house that I will go up. What is your father's father? My father's father is my grandfather. And your grandfather's son's son? He is his grandson. And your father's grandson? He is his great-grandson. And your father's great-grandson? He is his great-great-grandson. Is your female-cousin still married? No, she is already a widow.

TWENTY THIRD LESSON.

YCADALAUANG POUO,T, TATLONG PAGARAL.

USE OF THE PARTICLE UM.

Um is the chief verbal particle to express the unreciprocated act of the agent, either towards himself or others when the action is not modified in number, manner or time, or otherwise carried away from its simplest sense. In many cases it is difficult to decide upon the choice between um and mag for conjugating a root, many of the latter admitting of both without any appreciable difference of sense. The fact is, however, that um looks forward more to the subject; while mag, on the contrary, refers more to the object. The student may however derive useful information from the following remarks:

Roots denoting qualities capable of being assimilated by the agent through a slow process, may be conjugated by um to indicate the conversion when still in progress.

The shirt is becoming white. (whitens)	Pungmuputí an baro.
The flower became red. (reddened).	Pungmulá ang bulac-lac.
The water will become cold.	Lalamig ang túbig.
The broth had become hot.	{ Nacainit ang sabáo; (better) ungminit na.
Peter will have grown tall.	{ Lalaqui na Si Pedro. (better) naca-
The patient is slowly recovering.	{ laqui na.
My niece is becoming lazy.	Gungmagaling ang maysaquit.
Natives are becoming industrious.	{ Ang pamangquin cong babaye tung-
Priests are growing cowards.	{ matamad or naguiguing tamad.
The women will become wise.	Ang mañga Tagalog ay sungmisípag.
This string is becoming long.	Ang mañga pare,i, dungmodóuag.
Americans will grow richer.	Dudúnóng ang mañga babaye.
	Ytóng lúbid na itò,i, hungmahaba.
	Yayaman pa ang mañga Americano.

Some adverbs may be likewise conjugated in this sense.

Mary's virtue is surpassing Jane's.	{ Lungmalalo ang cabanalan ni Maria
	{ sa cay Juana.

Actions through which the agent gains control of something.

To buy.	Bumili.
To overtake, to come at.	Umábut, umabot.
To take.	Cumuha.
To receive, to accept of.	Tumangap.
To borrow.	Umótang.
To come across.	Sumompong.
To go out to meet, to meet some body,	{ Sumalóbong.
to welcome.	{
To catch, to plunder.	Humuli.

To seize.	Dumaquip.
To filch, to purloin.	Umomit.

Voluntary acts of motion.

To run, to hasten.	Tumachò.
To leap.	Tumalón.
To jump.	Lumocsò.
To flee.	Tumanan.
To walk.	Lumácad.
To swim.	Lumañgoy.
To stop.	Tumahan.
To cease.	Humimpáy.

Purposely performed acts of posture.

To stand up, to spring to one's feet.	Tumindig.
To lie down.	Humiga.
To lean on.	Humilig.
To crouch, to be with buttocks upwards	Tumouar.
To place one's self face downwards.	Dumapa, tumaob.
To place one's self on one's back.	Tumihaya.
To place one's self with one's face ahead, to place one's self in front of.	} Tumapat.
To place one's self on one's side.

The steady progress in self-producing, up-growing processes, if represented as continuous and not intermitent or recurring, when their full development has not yet been accomplished.

To put forth shoots.	Sumibol.
To be growing up. (plants).	Tumubò.
To bud.	Umusbong.
To sprout.	Sumupling.

Atmospheric occurrences, provided the root word does not begin in b.

To be windy, to be blowing.	Humañgin.
To rain, to be raining.	Umulán.
To thunder, to be thundering.	Cumolog.
To lighten, to be lightening.	Cumidlat. (1).
To strike (lightening).	Lumintic.

Astronomical transitions when not otherwise expressed and the change is represented as going on, provided the root does not begin with b.

To be growing light, to be sunny.	Umárao.
To be growing late. (to take an after- noon luncheon).	} Humapon.
To be growing dark.
To rise (the sun or any other lum- inous body).	} Sumicat, sumílang.
To set, to be setting (any luminous heavenly bodies), to launch into, to dive.
To set, to be setting, to get (some one) drowned.	} Lumonod.
To be growing dark.
To eclipse.	Lumimlim, lumaho.

(1). The student will easily understand that the root-word for all these verbs is that part which remains after taking away the particle um, and that Q is changed into C before a, o, u. Thus the root for cumidlat is quidlat.

Destructive intentional actions. (1).

To kill, to extinguish.	Pumatáy.
To destroy.	Sumira.
To set fire to, to commit arson.	Sumónog.
To lay waste, to exterminate.	Lumípol.
To wound.	Sumígat.
To pinch.	Cumorot.
To cudgel.	Pumalo.
To cause to break into pieces.	Bumásag.
To split, to cause to break into splints.	Bumali.

Controllable or uncontrollable, but consciously performed acts of the organic functions, and life-supporting actions.

To make water.	Umihí.
To go to stool.	Tumáe.
To weep.	Tumañgis.
To sob.	Humibic.
To laugh.	Tumáua.
To sneeze.	Bumahín.
To blow one's nose.	Sumiñga.
To eat.	Cumáin.
To drink.	Uminom.
To spit.	Lumura.
To bite.	Cumagat.
To swallow, to glut.	Lumamon. lumagoc.

 TWENTY THIRD EXERCISE.

Who is growing rich? The merchant is growing rich. Is the niece of our neighbour growing poor? No, she is not growing poor, she is growing healthy; but her child has been aggravated in her sickness. Did the stuff of my pantaloons become shrunk? No, on the contrary, it has been stretched out. Who is growing old? My father is growing old. Is Anthony's son growing tall? No, he is not growing tall, but he is becoming stronger. Did Tagals become wiser? No, they have not yet become wiser. When will they become industrious? When they will become wealthier. Has your sister received already the letters? She has not yet received the letters. What are Americans buying? They are buying lands. What shall I do? Take some bread and go away. What did your cousin reach? He reached some wine. Who has borrowed money? This man borrowed money. What shall we try to attain? We shall try to obtain riches. What did you find? I found some cheese. Whom are you going to meet? I am going to meet my uncle. Did you catch any mouse? I caught one. Whom do sentries seize? They seize thieves. Why do you purloin money? I do not steal, it is the servant who purloins. Why is your daughter running? She is running because she wishes to catch a bird. What is their brother doing? He is leaping into the sea. Why are the children jumping? They are not jumping, they are only walking? Does the sailor know how to swim? He knows how to swim. Where is the stopping place of your father? My father stops here. Why do you not cease sleeping? Because it is early and I went to bed yesterday at mid-night. What did he say? He said, rise first and then place yourself face downwards. Is it not better that I should place myself on my back? No, face me and then lie on your side. How are already the plants in your garden? They shoot and the trees at the bank of the river are blooming. How was the weather yesterday? Yesterday, it rained, thundered, lightened and flashed, and the sun did not shine. Where are you going at present? I am going home, because it is growing dark and the moon will not shine before mid-night. Why does your brother kill birds, waste the plants, wound swine, break plates and split canes? Because he is cruel, although he is cudged by my father. Why is the child crying? He wishes to make water and loose his body, just a moment he was laughing when eating and drinking and swallowing fruits. What is to be done? Let him spit and see that the dog does not bite him.

TWENTY FOURTH LESSON.
YCADALUANG POUO,T, APAT NA PAGARAL.

THE USE OF UM (continued).

In actions implying mutuality, the acts of the agent upon others when such action is not reflected back by the latter, are conjugated by um.

To accompany, to lead, to conduct persons.	}	Sumamá.
To chide.		Umáuy.
To speak to, (but not to converse), to bring up a law-suit.		Umósap.
To withdraw, to separate one person from another.		Humiualáy, yhiualáy.
To unite, to associate.		Pumisan.

The acts of our senses, if they are consciously executed by the agent, provided the first letter of the root be not B.

To hear.	Dumiñgig.
To look for, to see.	Cumita.
To look at.	Tumiñgin.
To feel.	Humipo.
To smell.	Umamóy.
To taste.	Lumasap.

Bodily actions when performed upon another person and not upon the subject.

To cure others.	Gumamot.
To shave ..	Umáhit.
To whip ..	Humampás.
To comb ..	Sumucláy.
To cut another's hair.	Gumupit.
To wash another's face.	Humilamos.
To scratch others.	Cumámot.

Roots denoting weapons, tools or instruments if conjugated by um, express the handling or playing therewith.

To drum.	Gumimbal.
To shear.	Gumunting.
To spear, to dart.	Sumibat.
To stab.	Umíua.
To handle the adze.	Dumarás.
To plane.	Cumatam.

Finally, by um are verbalized the acting of the agent upon others, his own motion in actions which, although intransitive, are consciously or voluntarily executed, and those by which the agent draws something towards himself. So, gumamot, means "to cure others"; while mag-gamot is "to cure one's self"; lumabás from labás, "outside"; is "to go out", but maglabás is "the drawing out" of something. Though "to go out" is an action intransitive in character, it admits, however of volition and is therefore verbalized by um; matisor, "to stumble"; is an act importing motion and of an intransitive kind; but is not a voluntary one and cannot, on this account, be verbalized by um. Umabot expresses the reaching of something by the agent for himself; magabot is his reaching for others.

Sa, "in", "at", or, better to say, an ablative of place, may be conjugated by um to denote permanent, but not transitory stay at a place.

God is everywhere or on everything.	Ang Dios ay sungmasaláñgit.
Jesus Christ is in Heaven.	Si Jesucristo, i, sungmasaláñgit.
Americans settle down in the Phi- lippines.	{ Ang mañga Americano, i, sungmasa Pilipinas.

For the sake of euphony, roots beginning with um or any consonant interchangeable with m (l) are not conjugated by um in the manner hitherto explained.

The passive of um is common to most verbs conjugated by mag, since the agent becomes patient in the grammatical sense and the transcendent action cannot go beyond. Only when mag intensifies the meaning of the action verbalized by um in the way to be explained hereafter, or causative or purposely defined acts are to be expressed, pag, pinag should be used. It also serves for some verbs conjugated by maca, as, tacotín mo siyá, "frighten him".

Bring out some food. (generally boil- ed rice).	{ Magalís or maglabás ca nang canin.
Take out this nail.	{ Alisin mo itòng paco.
Order those pictures to be taken out.	{ Pagalisín (or, better, ypaalís) mo iyáng mañga laráuan (or cuadro , Sp.).

Passional circumstances of the subject expressed by ma in the active voice of the verb may be conjugated by the passive of um to express the correlative active action.

Jane is afraid.	{ Natatácot Si Juana, si Juana, i, nata- tácot.
Frighten her.	{ Tacotín mo siyá.
The horse is hungry.	{ Nagogotom ang cabayo, ang cabayo, i, nagogotom.
Starve it, make it feel hungry.	{ Gotomín mo siyá.
Why did your sister allow the poultry to perish from thirst?	{ Báquit bagá inóhao nang iyóng capa- tid na babaye ang mañga manoc?

TWENTY FOURTH EXERCISE.

Who accompanies you? Nobody accompanies me now, just a moment I accompanied John who was speaking to his sister, she joined Peter, who was scolding his friend and I took him aside. Does the Frenchman hear something? He hears nothing, but I see birds singing on the branches of trees. Who touches women? Only naughty boys touch women. Is your female-cousin doing something? She smells flowers and tastes fruits. What do physicians do? They cure others, but they neither shave, nor cut (other people's) hair. Whom is your father whipping? He is whipping his servant, because he did not wash his master's face. Is the servant of Peter doing something? He is combing and scratching his mistress. Who will beat the drum? My son will beat the drum, while his friend shears horses. What will you do with that spear? I will spear boars. Who stabbed Magellan? Natives of Cebú stabbed him. Are the carpenters doing something? Some of them are adzing, some others are planing. Where is Our Lord God? God is everywhere and His precious Son is in Heaven at His right. Why did not your servant take out any seats? He is taking some out, but he has already taken out these tables. Do you want anything else? Yes, order him to take out all the plates that were before on the table. What shall I do to the dogs? Frighten them, for the cats fear them and are hungry. Why does my master chide me? He chides you, because you cause the dogs to suffer thirst and the cats to starve.

(l) The consonants interchangeable with m. in conjugation are b. and sometimes p.

TWENTY FIFTH LESSON.
YCADALUANG POUO,T, LIMANG PAGARAL.

IRREGULARITIES IN THE UM CONJUGATION.

Owing to a lack of fixedness throughout in Tagalog, some verbs are conjugated in the active voice either by using ungm, in the present tense or by prefixing na to the root. Outside Manila it is not uncommon to hear natives say: nabili, nabasà, nasúlat, nacáin. instead of bungmibili, bungma. ba ã, sungmusúlat, cungmacáin; but the regular conjugation is also in use.

In the present, past and imperative tenses of the active, most dyssyllabic verbs admit of an irregularity analogous to that above-mentioned, if they begin in a vowel or in b, c, p, or t. In such cases a n is prefixed to the vowel; b, c, p, t, change into n for the present and past tenses: m, is prefixed to the vowel, and the afore-said consonants change into m for the imperative, as seen in the following tables. but the regular form is likewise in use.

The student should conjugate the following verbs in the preceding irregular form which they all admit.

To captivate.	Mihag, bumihag.
To retreat, to go backwards, to fall back.	Múrong, umúrong.
To go for water.	Miguib, umiguib.
To sting, to peck.	Mucá, tumucá.
To gather flowers.	Mitás, pumitás; cumitil nang bulac-lac
To take the lead, to overrun.	Muná, umuná.

Some trisyllabic and polysyllabic verbs having initial letters as above, are conjugated by the particle man and they will be treated of in the proper place.

Verbal roots consisting of more than two syllables and prefixed by the particle pa are conjugated in a special manner; um disappears completely, pa is dropped in all the simple tenses; and replaced by ma in the future and imperative, and by na in the present and past tenses. Here the second and not the first syllable is repeated in the proper tenses, as shown in the subjoined conjugation:

Infinitive.

To sigh, to lament.	Panaghóy.
To envy, to bear an envious feeling.	Panaghili.
To offer, to offer the primices.	Panagano.
To hurry on, to incite, to provoke.	Pamongcahi.
To wave (a dog its tail).	Pamaypóy.
To pray, to crave.	Pamanhic, pamamanhic.
To live in a house.	Pamáhay.
To swell.	Pamagá.
To bathe, to take baths.	Paligo.
To rise early.	Paaga.

Roots beginning with h, if conjugated in the instrumental passive may, for euphony's sake, admit the following irregularity. The particle in is inverted or it changes into na for present and past tenses, as hereafter.

Infinitive.

To dash it (some thing) to the ground. Yhólog.

Present indefinite tense.

I, thou, he etc. we, you, they dash } Ynihohólog or ynahohólog co, mo,
etc. it to the ground. } niyá, natin, namin, ninyò, nilá.

Past tenses.

I, thou, he etc. we, you, they dashed } Ynihólog or ynahólog co, mo, niyá, etc., have etc. dashed, it to the } natin, namin, ninyò, nilá.
ground.

This irregularity applies also to roots beginning with l or with a vowel, especially to those beginning with ua, ui, uo, tho they may also follow the regular conjugation. Thus, it may be said with equal propriety ynilagáy, ynalagáy, or ylinagáy, "I put it;" yiniualá, and yinualá, "was lost"; yiniuica and yinuica, "pronounced"; and so forth for the present, thus avoiding the harsh sound produced by the concurrence of two i's.

TWENTY FIFTH EXERCISE.

When will you return to town? I wish to return there to-morrow. Whom did you call for? I called for the physician. Can you part this string? I can part strings, but I cannot part this. Why did your friend tempt Jane? Because she hurt him. Did the Americans make many Tagals, prisoners? Yes, the Tagals fell back and the Americans laid hold of many. Where is your servant going for water? He goes for water to that well where birds peck husked rice and your sister gathers flowers. Where is the child? The child is ahead, running to take the lead of Frank. Who beat the Spaniards? The Americans beat the Spaniards. What does Peter do? Peter listens to the priest and is going to receive Holy Communion. Who serves the man lodging at your father's? Your sister's servant serves him, but now he is beholding the procession. Who led the Tagals in their war against the Americans? The Tagals were led by Aguinaldo whom they trusted. Where is the child making water? He is making water in the garden. What does the oldman think of? He thinks of leaning on a staff, as he cannot kneel down. Whom is the American talking with? He is talking with some of his countrymen. Who takes the lead of Alfred? Frank took the lead of him. Do you gain much by your trade? I gain nothing by it, I, on the contrary, lose money. Is the servant shivering with cold? No, he is trembling for fear. Who is becoming drowsy? Nobody is getting drowsy, but your friend's friend is jealous and feels a pain in his teeth. What do priests say. They say to every body to keep holidays, and to take great care of not becoming disdainful to God. Why is your wife shuddering? Because it is thundering. Why is Jane's husband jealous? Because she is being courted by her neighbour. Do you become humble before God? Yes, and every man should become humble before Him. What did your cousin dream last night? He dreamt that he was hurting his sister, and that she was seeing herself in the looking-glass. Why does your sister dread? She fears because she is going to lie in. Is she going to lie in for the first time? No, it is the second time she brings forth. Why does his father bury his face in his hands, and use to stand with his arms folded? He got tired and became weak. Do you dare promise to abide by virtue? I persist in doing that. Why does she not go downstairs and sit there with her legs crossed? She mourns over the death of her husband. Do you trust in the Holy Virgin? Yes, I put my confidence in Her. Why is your sister sighing? Because her friend Mary bears her envy and incites her to take a bath. Do you fear that dog? I don't fear him, because he his waving his tail. Do you live in a house? No, I live in the forests. What do you pray me? I pray you to rise early and to bathe in the sea. What have you on your face? It is swollen. Why did your son throw that dog into the sea? Because it bit him. Why do you not give him a good education? Because I did not put him in a college. Why does not your brother speak English better? Because he does not pronounce well. Did you cause the horse to disappear? It was the servant who made it return to the woods. (who is to be blamed for the loosing of).

TWENTY SIXTH LESSON.
YCADALAUANG POUO,T, ANIM NA PAGARAL.

THE USE OF MAG.

Mag, may be used with roots beginning with m, which should be conjugated by um according to their signification, thus avoiding harshness.

To insult, to dishonor others.	Magmurà.
To start, to commence.	Magmolá.
To experience, to perceive.	Magmasid.
To inherit.	Magmaná.
To perceive.	Magmalas.
To enhance.	Magmahal.

Actions by which the subject loses control of something.

To sell.	Magbili.
To lend.	Magótang. (better) magpaótang.
To take along with, to convey one's self to.	Maghatir.
To give, to deliver.	Magbigáy.
To grant.	Magcalóob.
To present with, to make a gift.	Magbiyaya.
To give back, to restore.	Magsaolí.

Moral or material acts moving from the subject, those meaning scattering included.

To say.	Magsabi.
To give notice.	Magbalita.
To explain.	Magsaysáy, magsalaysáy.
To narrate.	Magsalítá.
To permit, to allow.	Magtúlot.
To grant leave.	Magpahintólot.
To show, to make shown.	Magpaquita.
To throw away.	Magtapon.
To forbid.	Magbáual.
To launch a ship.	Magbonsor.
To throw missiles, to pelt.	Maghaguis.
To fell, to cause to fall to the ground.	Maghólog.
To sow grain, to put seeds into a hole.	Maghasic.
To scatter, to waste.	Magbulagsac.
To diffuse, to spread out.	Magsambúlat.
To sow grain by scattering it about.	Magsábog.

Verbs of remotion in the active sense, that is to say, when the moving affects some outward thing.

To draw something nearer.	Maglápít.
To put in, to put into.	Magsilíd.

To lift up, to raise, to heave, to elevate.	Magtáas.
To set up.	Magtayó.
To take down, to lower.	Magpanáog.
To fell. (trees).	Magboual.
To remove to a distance.	Maglayo.
To take away.	Magalís.
To place something upright.	Magtindig.

Bodily actions if performed by the subject upon himself.

To cure one's self.	Mag-gamot.
To shave " "	Magáhit.
To whip " "	Maghampás.
To comb " "	Magsucláy.
To cut one's hair	Mag-gupit.
To wash one's face.	Maghilamos.
To scratch one's self.	Mageamot.
To wound one's self, to become ulcerated.	Magsúgat.
To wet one's self.	Magbasá.
To clean one's self.	Maghugas.

Words, either pure or corrupted, taken from Spanish or other alien languages are generally verbalized by mag. Roots of offices may take mag to express the discharge of official duties.

Mass, to officiate.	Misa , (Sp.), magmisa.
To gamble.	Jugar , (Sp.), magsugal, (Tag.).
Tobacco, to smoke, to sell tobacco.	Tabaco , (Sp.), magtabaco.
Chocolate, to take, to elaborate, to sell chocolate.	Chocolate , (Sp.), magsicolate.
To play base-ball.	Magbesbol.
Mayor, to be a mayor, to act as mayor	Capitán , (Sp.), magcapitan, magpresidente.
Father, priest; to be a priest.	Padre , (Sp.), magpare.

Roots denoting any piece of wearing apparel, may be verbalized with mag to express the wearing thereof.

Trousers, to wear trousers.	Salaual, magsalaual.
Shoes, " " shoes.	Sapín, magsapín.
Spectacles, " " spectacles.	Salamín, magsalamín.
Hat, " " a hat.	Sambalelo, magsambalelo.
Apron, " " an apron.	Tapís, magtapís.

Mag verbalizes all those personal actions which are dual or collective in character, both sides being meant, as:

To fight, to quarrel.	Magáuay.
To join with, to be associated with.	Magtipon.
To converse.	Magúsap.
To assemble.	Magpólong.
To admit the company of others, to join others in company.	Magsamá.
To dispute, to contend.	Magtalo.

Reciprocal verbs when the action is of such a kind as to admit of rivalry or competition, if no special stress is laid on the contention.

To see each other.	Magquita.
To write to each other.	Magsúlat, (better) magsulatán.
To mix with each other.	Maghálo.
To reconcile to each other, to greet each other.	Magbati.

Voluntary reciprocal actions, especially those of an affective kind, are likewise conjugated by mag; but the root should be affixed with an.

To love	each other.	Magsintahan, mag-ibigan.
To aid	Magtoloñgan.
To bear, to suffer	Magpatawaran.
To curse	Magsumpáan.
To cudgel	Magpaloán.
To obey	Magsunuran.
To bite	Magcagatan.
To laugh at	Magtauanán.
To kick	Magtadyacan, magsicarán.
To mock at	Magbiroán.
To use abusive language, to insult each other.		Magtuñgayauán.

TWENTY SIXTH EXERCISE.

Does your brother insult Peter? He does not insult him, he only reminds him of his duty. What shall I do to make myself respected? If you sell anything, grant reasonable prices, and if the goods are not satisfactory, give back the money. Will your father lend any money to his friend? He did not lend him money, he gave and sent him a present. Have your servants reported the tale to their friends? No, they only explained to them that the children had thrown stones on their roof. Why does your father allow you to go out in the night time? He granted me leave to see the launching of the ship. Where did you throw the rotten fish? I dashed it to the ground. Would you fell many trees if you had an axe? No, I wish to sow grain and to scatter some to the poultry. Did you notice the smell diffused by the flowers? Yes, and I plucked one to put it into the pot. What do you intend to lift? I do not intend to lift anything, but I intend to set up a house and to take down these two pictures. Are you going to take the nails away? No, I am going to place the images upright and to remove them far away. Do physicians cure other people? Yes, but they do not cure themselves. Does your friend shave, comb and whip himself? No, but he cuts his own hair and washes himself? Did Anthony wound himself? Yes, yesterday he wet himself to clean his body and on scratching himself, he wounded his skin. What is the priest doing? He is now gambling but he officiated before. Does your son smoke? He does not smoke, but he takes chocolate every evening. Do priests wear trowsers? No, but they wear shoes, hat and spectacles. Do women in your Province wear aprons? They do not. Did Peter and Mary join? They joined, converted and quarreled. Why did the principal citizens of the town assemble yesterday? They only kept company to each other and they contended together. Do Jane and Frank see each other? They do not see each other, but they write to each other. Do milkmen mix milk with water? They do. What did you do to the brothers Rosario? I reconciled them to each other. Ought married persons to curse and cudgel each other? No, on the contrary, they ought to love, to help, to bear and to pardon one another. Do the Ruiz couple obey each other? No, they bite, laugh and kick at each other.

TWENTY SEVENTH LESSON.
YCADALUANG POUO,T, PITONG PAGARAL.

USE OF MAG (continued).

In using mag to verbalize actions admitting of reciprocity, care should be taken in regard to their nature and to the intension and purpose with which executed; for here, as elsewhere in Tagalog, a great laxity prevails. Properly speaking, mag, alone, looks more toward plurality than reciprocity. As mag, likewise, intensifies or pluralizes sometimes, and sometimes modifies actions verbalized with um, a gradation of methods is established to express reciprocity. Thus, tumíngin, means "to look at", in the positive or simplest degree; but magtíngin, signifies, either the "looking at by many", or "to look at" in some intensive manner. Here, mag alone, cannot express true reciprocity, for it makes the superlative degree of um. So, magtínginan is necessary to make up the reciprocal sense of looking at each other. Reciprocal verbs must be transitive in so far as they require an object that returns the action. If then, the prefix mag and the suffix, an combine with a root which has not an active sense, but which admits of competition, the action expressed is one of rivalry. Lumocsi, for instance, expresses the simple action of jumping, and maglocso, therefore, the action performed by many or in an intense degree; but maglocsohan expresses the action of jumping performed by many in competition as to who will excel or surpass the others. If the action is transitive and this latter sense of rivalry is to be expressed, the single suffix an is not sufficient and should be repeated, as in the following illustration.

To push somebody out of his place. (This action is active and may be made reciprocal).	}	Tumolac.
To push hard, to push by many.	}	Magtólac.
To push each other.	}	Magtolacán.
The pushing by many of one another in rivalry as to who will push the most.	}	Magtolacanan.

Sometimes the discrimination between the pluralizing and reciprocal sense is made by changing the accent, as, for instance, in:

To approach (intransitive.)	}	Lumápit.
To draw near.	}	Maglápít.
To approach each other.	}	Maglapít.
To see many things, or to look at intensively.	}	Magquitá.
To see each other.	}	Magquita. (1)

(1). In this as in everything else, we endeavour to convey to the student's mind some idea of the various modifications of sense which a root may undergo if conjugated by mag; but they are so manifold that it would be impossible to exhaust them. Practice alone can be recommended on this point.

Actions conjugated by um and which admit of intension may be conjugated by mag to denote such intension, or plurality, if the action is not otherwise modified in meaning, as:

To run. (simple action).	Tumacbò.
To run by many, or to run a great deal.	Magtacbò.
To write (simple action).	Sumúlat.
To write a great deal.	Magsulat (The word is made acute).
To drink hard, to drink by many.	Mag-inum.
To eat much, to eat by many.	Magcáin.
To read. (many or a great deal).	Magbasà.
To walk. (simple action).	Lumácad.
To walk quickly.	Maglacad. (1).
To weep. (simple action).	Tumañgis.
To weep. (by many or beyond measure)	Magtañgis.

This manner of intensifying the action or pluralizing the agents is not exclusive and may be considered as of a first degree of intension. Mag and the repeating of the first syllable of the root intensifies more, and the repeating of the whole root, even more.

To sell in a wholesale manner.	Magbibili.
The following by many in a rapid order of succession.	Magsonodsonod.
To think deeply.	Mag-isisip.
To meditate profoundly.	Magnilaynflay.

This latter composition with some verbs of motion denotes sometimes to do what the root means and the contrary.

To pass on and to pass back again and again.	Magdaandáan.
He goes out and in, he goes about going in an coming out.	Naglalabaslabasan siyá.

Verbs denoting an unsteady motion may be formed in the same way.

To oscillate.	Magquilingquiling.
To wobble.	Magquindingquinding.
To stagger.	Magsúraysúray.
To change continuously the posture.	Magbilingbiling.
To walk with wavering pace.	Magocorócor.
To flutter.	Magbalingbaling.
To place one's self face downward and then on one's back again.	Magbalibaligtad. (2)

Nag, with these and similar verbs may be dropped in the present, the first syllable being repeated.

He walks on tiptoe.	Titiartiar siyá.
He loafs, wanders about; he walks about purposeless.	Susulingsúling.

(1). Here, as in many verbs of motion which are grave in accent, the acceleration is expressed, both by mag and by making the word acute. The same is the case for other actions which are intensified as seen above.

(2). The orthography of Tagalog words is yet hardly fixed by any rule. The student may perhaps find these words written mabaling báling etc. We write them as in the text, this seeming more in accordance with the inflective character of the language.

If an adjective of ma composition is conjugated by mag, the sense resulting is one of boasting, swaggering, if the action admits of boasting; but the word is made acute.

To boast wisdom.	Magmarunong.
To swagger.	Magmatapang.
To boast beauty.	Magmariquit.
To boast prudence.	Magmabait.

If the action does not admit of bragging and the adjective is of double composition, the sense is one of assimilation, growing, becoming.

To become, to grow forgetful.	Magmalimotín.
To grow infirm.	Magmasactín, magmasasactín.

If mag conjugates an abstract noun formed with the prefix ca and the suffix an, the sense resulting is one of putting into practice the corresponding quality; but such words are only used in the infinitive.

To do justice.	Magcatouiran.
To practice virtue.	Magcabanalan.
To act chastely.	Magcalinisan.
To behave one's self obscenely.	Magcahalayan.

The diminutive sense of verbs is formed in the um conjugation by repeating the root, (or the first two syllables thereof if consisting of more than two), as:

To run.	Tumachò.
To rove, to ramble.	Tumachò-tachò.
Peter is gadding.	Tumatachò-tachò Si Pedro.
To drizzle.	Umulán-olán.

The same diminutive sense in the mag conjugation is likewise generally made by repeating the root and affixing an or han.

To write.	Magsúlat.
To scribe.	Magsúlatsulatan.

This manner is common to actions admitting of feigning, gesture, imitation or mockery.

To be a hypocrite, to affect virtue.	Magbanalbanalan, magpapaimbabáo.
To nibble or to feign eating.	Magcaincainan.
To snivel, to make crying grimaces.	Mag-iyac-ivacan.
To affect to be deaf.	Magbiñgi-biñgihan.
To " " " sick.	Magsaquit-saquitán.
To " " " mad.	Maglolololan.
The playing of children at making little houses.	Magbahaybahayan.

But attention should be paid to the action, as this same composition forms intensive reciprocal verbs which can only be distinguished by the context.

To embrace each other warmly.	Magyacapyacapan.
To look at each other closely or cross-way.	Magtiñgintinginan.
To reach many things or to pass them from hand to hand.	Magabot-abotan.

Roots denoting things susceptible of being sold or made, if conjugated by mag, express the selling or making thereof.

To sell rice.	Magbigás.
„ „ fish.	Mag-isdá.
„ „ pickled fish or to prepare it.	Magbagóong.
„ „ eggs.	Mag-ítlog.
„ make houses.	Magbáhay.

If nouns denoting correlation or relationship serving as complement to a verb or an adjective are prefixed by mag, the action referring to the prefixed noun falls back to its correlative party.

To behave well as a son, to know how to be a son.	} Marúnong magamá.
To behave well as a father.
It is difficult to put up with a mother-in-law.	} Mahírap ang magbianán.
It is a sorrowful thing to have sons who do not repay our cares.
	} Masamá ang maganac na hindí dápat.

Some verbs of the um conjugation may admit of the two particles to denote a sense of enterprise, endeavour, earnestness.

To endeavour.	Magpumílit.
To make for, to make the utmost exertions for.	} Magsumáquit.
To dispatch one's self, to make haste.
	Magdumalí.

A second degree of plurality, besides those hitherto explained, may be made by inserting ñga, in the active conjugation of mag, the g of the particle being transferred to the end, thus, mañgag for imperative and future, nañgag, for the present tense.

To converse. (two or more persons).	Magósap.
To converse (a multitude)	Mañgagósag.
and so forth for other verbs.

TWENTY SEVENTH EXERCISE.

Why do the boys run and push my old horse in competition with each other? Because they ate and drank much. Did they write and read a good deal? No, but they walked quickly and wept beyond measure; but let them meditate about their passing to and fro. How do persons walk? Drunkards stagger and oscillate, young girls, wobble; fools, flutter; oldmen, waver; sick persons change posture and children walk on tiptoe. What do persons affect to be? Fools, feign to be wise; cowards, to be gallant; women, to be beautiful; rascals, to be prudent, and hypocrites, to be virtuous. What do other persons become? Love-sick persons become forgetful, and old men, sickly. Does the Judge practice virtue? No, but he does justice. What girls act wisely? The judicious act chastely, but the injudicious act obscenely. Did the children rove in the garden? They did, but they could not go on because it is drizzling. Does the son know already how to write? No, he only scribbles a little. Is Alfred's child judicious? No, he, on the contrary, affects to be virtuous, is always nibbling and sniveling and sometimes he feigns to be mad. Why does my servant affect to be deaf and sick when I call out to him? Because he is naughty and is always playing at making little houses with other boys. What did the father and the son do? They at first looked at each other closely and then embraced each other effusively. What are those men doing? They are handing over sacks to each other. Do you sell rice and fish? I sell pickled fish and eggs and also make houses. Is your brother a good son and a good father? He is not a good father, but he is a good son. Is he also a good son-in-law? He is, although it is very difficult to be a good son-in-law. What does he say to his son? He says to him, endeavour to learn, make every exertion to be happy and dispatch yourself. What were that multitude doing there? They were conversing.

TWENTY EIGHTH LESSON.
YCADALAUANG POUO,T, UALONG PAGARAL.

THE PASSIVE OF MAG

As has been said in lesson twenty fourth, the passive of um is common to the mag conjugation. Thus, pag, the passive particle for mag, in the imperative or simple future; pinag, in the present or past; and napag, mapag, in the past perfect and future perfect tenses, should not be used, unless they are required to impart some special sense.

To take away.	Magalis.
Take that away.	Alisín mo iyán.
To give back.	Magsaolí.
Give the money back.	Ysaolí mo ang pílac.
I had already given back the pantalons, when he arrived.	Naysaolí co na ang salaual, nang siyá,i, dungmating.
Where has he thrown his shirt?	¿Saán ytinapon niyá ang caniyáng baro?
It was the garden where I threw it.	Ang halamanan, ang tinaponan co.
To attain.	Magcamit.
It is easy to say it, and difficult to attain it.	Maralíng sabihin, maliuag camtán.

Pag should be used in the passive if mag is used in the active to intensify the action expressed by the verb or to denote plurality.

To destroy many things	Magsirá.
The swine destroyed these many plants.	Pinagsirá nang mañga bábuy itóng mañga halaman.
There are many plants destroyed.	Maraming halaman ang pinagsisirá.
To count many things.	Magbilang.
Did Peter count much money?	¿Bungmílang bagá Si Pedro nang maraming salapí?
Oh!, he counted more than ten thousand dollars.!	¡Abáa! mahiguit sa sanglacsáng pisos ang pinagbilang niyá.

When, both actions being transitive, mag in the active converts the sense of the root from the subjective, as conjugated with um, to the objective sense, pag should be used in the passive to make this change of meaning clear.

I borrowed that money I gave him yesterday.	Ynótang co iyáng salapí ybinigáy co sa caniyá cahapon.
I will borrow a hundred dollars from John.	Ootafigan co Si Juan nang sangdaang piso.
I lend this money.	Pinagoótang or pinaoótang co itóng salapí, or ypinagpapaótang or ypina-papaótang co itóng salapí.

I bought this hat.	Binil co itòng sambalilo.
This hat is what I bought, this hat is my purchase.	Ytòng sambalilo ang binili co.
I sell these houses.	Ypinagbibili co itòng mañga báhay.
It is to my neighbour that I have sold this rice.	Ang aquing caapirbáhay, ang pinagbilhan co nitòng bigás.

Reciprocal verbs require pag in the passive if the motive or place of the action is expressed.

Those condemned to eternal punishment in Hell curse each other and help one another in doing evil.	Ang mañga napacasamá sa inferno nagsusumpaang silá at pinagtotoñoang nilá ang pagauí nang masamá.
They abused each other at the market.	Ang tianguí, ang pinagmorahan nilá.

The same is the case with actions of a dual or collective character.

Gambling was the reason for them to quarrel.	Ang pagsusugal ay and ypinagáuay nilá.
They are assembled in the house of your mother.	Ang báhay nang iná mo,i, ang pinagcatiponan nilá.

Verbs of fiction require likewise pag.

Menial servants feign to be sick, (so as) not to be whipped.	Ang pinagsaquitsaquitan nang mañga alila,i, ang hindi silá paloin.
Fools affect to be wise that they may be praised.	Ang ypinagmamarúnong nang mañga bañgal, ay ang silá,i, purihin.

Active verbs of mag conjugation require pag if the place where the action is executed is expressed in the sentence, especially when the verb requires the passive of an for the direct object.

I paid my personal tax in Manila when I was still there.	Sa Maynila pinagbayaran co ang aquing bouis, nang doróon pa acó.
Take care of the horses at the enclosure.	Ang bacoran pagalagaan mo nang mañga cabayo.
Your brother put the plate on this table.	Ytòng lamesang itò,i, pinaglag-ian nang iyòng capatid nang pingán.

Transitive actions of the kind of those which are executed for the benefit of others, require the instrumental conjugation with pag if the person for whom performed is expressed, the latter to be put in the nominative case.

For whom are you cooking that fish?	Sino ang ypinagluluto mo niyang isdá?
I cook this fish for my children.	{ Ang mañga anac co,i, ang ypinagluluto co nitòng isdá.
For whom did Mary sew the apron?	{ ¿Sino ang ypinagtahi ni Biangui nang tapis?
For Jane.	Si Juana.
Make an omelet for this gentleman.	{ Ypaggauá mo itòng maguinoò nang isáng tortila. (corr. from Sp. word tortilla)
I would wash your linen, but I have no soap.	Ypaghohogás sana quitá nang iyòng damit, ñguní,t, ualá acóng sabón.

TWENTY EIGHTH EXERCISE.

Did you do what I told you? No, because I don't know what you ordered me to do. What shall I do? Take away that nail and give back the letter to my brother-in-law. Shall I explain to him the death of the bird? No, don't say to him anything about that. What shall I ask him? Ask him when he will come to visit me. Did you not see each other the other day? Yes, we saw each other on the street. Do you wish me to throw away this pin? No, but throw the wood into the garden. What did you report to your barber? I reported to him the sermon of the priest this morning at church. Where did they launch the ship? The ship was launched at Cebú. Have you sown anything at your farm? Yes, I sowed rice. Where did you sow it? I sowed it at the farm, at the beach. What are you putting into that jar? I am putting some bread into it. Where do you intend to build your house? I intend to build it on that ground bearing trees. Where did they quarrel? They quarreled in the room. Where were the Americans conversing yesterday? They were talking to each other on the Escolta, then they fought each other at the large bridge. Why did you help each other? We helped each other, because we were willing to attain a reward. Why did the countrymen fell so many trees? They felled so many trees, because they wanted wood for their houses. Count them if you did not count them. I have counted already more than three hundred. Whom did you buy these needles from? I bought them from the merchant, but I intend to sell them again to tailors. From whom will you borrow the money you want? I will borrow it from my friends. Did your sister-in-law lend you anything? No, on the contrary, she borrowed from me six reals. Why did you cudgel each other at the wood? Because he insulted me first. And did many people assemble there? Oh! yes, many people gathered on the spot of our quarrelling. Why does your servant feign to be deaf? He feigns to be deaf to avoid coming here. Where did your son put my spectacles? He put them on your bed. For whom are you making that chair? For my mother. Is it not for your grandfather that you are sewing those pantaloons? No, it is for the priest. Why does not the carpenter wish to make a table for me? It is because he is a lazy fellow.

TWENTY NINTH LESSON.
YCADALAUANG POUO,T, SIYAM NA PAGARAL.

THE USE OF MA.

Students should not lose sight of the fact that no intentional or voluntary act, no state suffered voluntarily by the subject or in any way under his control, nor anything occurring through his consent admits of ma conjugation, and that, on the contrary, any action, however transitive in character, may be conjugated by ma if it takes place accidentally or beyond the subject's control. Thus, verbs as "to run", "to leap", "to go in", "to go out", etc., though intransitive, are not conjugated by ma on account of being voluntary acts. Apparent departures from this rule are found sometimes, but these often arise from a difficulty in classifying a particular verb in Tagalog.

To slip, to slide.	Marulás.
To stumble.	Matisor.
To go astray, to lose one's way.	Malihís, maligáo.
To fall down, to fall to the ground, } to lose one's standing.	Mahólog.
To die, to die away.	Mamatáy.
To lose, to miss.	Maualá.

But, to make to disappear, to get rid of somebody or of something, and to flee, which are conscious acts, are expressed by magalá.

In the same way acts of the mind which, if consciously or purposely executed, are conjugated by um or mag, are conjugated by ma if unconscious or uncontrollable.

To omit doing something purposely.	Lumisan.
To forget, not to have remembered } to do something.	Malisan.
To neglect, to try to forget; not to } be willing to recollect, to cast into } oblivion.	Lumímot.
To forget. (unconscious atc).	Malímot.

Acts of corporal position may be conjugated by ma, if they are involuntary or if status and not the action is meant.

To go to bed. (to place one's self } in a lying posture).	Humigá.
To be in bed.	Mahigá, nahigá, nahihigá.
To kneel down (consciously), to bend } one's knees.	Lumohod.
To make others kneel down, to kneel } down with some thing hanging down.	Maglohod.
To kneel down (unconsciously). to be } in a kneeling position.	Malohod, nalolohod.

To stand, to be in an upright position.	Matindig natindig, natitindig.
To be a prisoner, to be with one's feet in stocks or bilboes.	} Nabibilango, napapafigao.
To be seated.
To lie with one's face downwards.	Nataob, natataob.

Sometimes the agent's rationality or irrationality determines whether the action is to be conjugated by ma or other verbalizing particles, as shown in the subjoined illustration.

The pupil stands before his master.	} Ang nagaáral tungmatayó sa harap nang caniyáng maestro . (Sp).
The pillars of my house are upright.
Place those images upright.	Ytayò mo iyáng mañiga laráuan.

Uncontrollable passional states of the subject are generally conjugated by ma.

To be sad.	Malumbáy.
„ „ glad.	Malogod, matouá.
„ „ angry.	Magalit.
„ „ ashamed.	Mahiyá.
„ „ afraid.	Matácot.
„ „ astonished.	Magúlat.
„ „ terrified.	Magulangtang.
„ „ hungry.	Magótom.
„ „ thirsty.	Maóhao.
„ „ sleepy, to be asleep.	Matólog.

As regards other intransitive actions of the subject which are more or less controllable, as to laugh, to weep, etc., their being consciously or unconsciously performed should be taken into account in applying the proper conjugating particle.

Actions of a destructive character when they are fortuitous or accidental, and not caused by the deliberate act of a conscious agent, or when reference is made to an actual state of destruction, take ma.

To become destroyed, to be destroyed.	Masira.
To grow dry, faded; to be dried up out of decay.	} Matuyó.
To break off, to be broken.
To be cleft.	Mabali.
To be parted, to be divided, to be cut off.	} Malagot, mapatir.
To rot, to become rotten, to be putrid.

Here, too, the nature of the destroying agent may determine which conjugating particle ought to be employed. For instance: sónog, "burning"; if what causes burning is a person, sumónog; if it is some inanimate thing, masónog.

Mañga, nañga, may likewise be introduced in this conjugation to express multitude.

Many persons are dying or dead.	Marami ang nafiganamamatáy.
All of them (a multitude) will be sad.	Siláng lahat ay nafigalulumbáy.

If stress is laid upon the involuntariness of some transition of state going on, the slow process of assimilation by a subject may be expressed by ma, na.

Your sister is growing mad.	Naulol ang capatid mong babaye.
She will become a stutterer.	Magagaril siyá.

Also for the sake of briefness, roots denoting some state of destruction may be used alone, and, generally, any actual state which may be gathered from the context, or from the root, or which is manifest, can be expressed in the same way.

The fish is putrid already.	Boloc na ang isdá.
The dog is dead.	Patáy ang aso.
The work is finished.	Tapus na ang gauá.
The letter is ready.	Yari na ang súlat.

Maca and naca are sometimes used for ma and na, to which particles they are respectively analogous in many respects.

He forgot.	Nacalímot siyá.
He is upright. (standing)	Nacatayó siyá.
He sat.	Nacaupo.

Of course, acts verbalized by ma do not admit of passive form, but they may be conjugated in the instrumental or local verbal cases, since any occurrence, however intransitive it may be, can have a reason, an instrument, a time or a place by which or where it takes place. Ca is the particle used for those forms of conjugation, what has been said in the eighteenth lesson about the pluperfect and future perfect tenses in the active voice, holding good for these other forms.

INSTRUMENTAL PASSIVE.

ROOT.

Dying, to die.	Matáy, mamatáy.
----------------	-----------------

Infinitive.

To die from, with, of, or at some specific time.	} Ycamatáy.

The student should conjugate in the instrumental passive the following intransitive verbs.

To be ruined.	Maduc-ha, malugui. (by trade).
To be lame.	Mapiláy.
To be blind.	Mabúlag.
To be deaf.	Mabiñgí.

LOCAL PASSIVE.

ROOT.

Drowning.	Lonor.
-----------	--------

Infinitive.

To be drowned at.	Calonoran. (1).
-------------------	-----------------

Present indefinite tense.

I, thou, he etc. we, you, they, is etc. are Quinalonoran co, mo, niyà. natin, drowned at. namin, ninyò, nilà.

Present perfect and past indefinite tenses.

I, thou, he etc. we, you, they was etc. Quinalonoran co, mo, niyà, natin, na-were; have etc. been drowned at. min, ninyò, nilà.

Future indefinite tense.

I, thou, he etc. we, you, they shall etc. Calonoran co, mo, niyà, natin, na will etc. be drowned at. min, ninyò, nilà.

(1). This word also means, "the occident", "the west", for natives say: "the Sun is drowned", instead of saying, "the Sun sets".

Future perfect tense.

I, thou, he etc. we, you, they shall etc. Calolonoran co, mo na; na niyà, na-will etc. have been drowned at. tin, namin, ninyò, nilà.

Imperative.

Be drowned (thou), let him etc. us, Calonoran mo, niyà, natin, namin, them be drowned at. ninyò, nilà.

The student should conjugate in the local passive the following verbs:

To be with one's feet in stocks.	Mapañgao.
To faint, to swoon.	Mahilo.
To be tired out.	Mapágod.
To be included in.	Masac-láo.
To fall down out of decay, to drop off.	Malaglag.
To be extinguished.	Maotás.

The prefix ca is dropped in the local passive of these verbs when no place or deliberate act, but the person affected by the event or chance is meant, as shown in the following instances.

Let him die in the hospital.	Camatayán niyà ang hospital. (Sp.).
Let his mother die, let him be de- prived of his mother by death, let death deprive him of his mother.	Mamatayán siyá nang inà.
In this house I missed my ring.	Quinaualaan co itòng búhay na itò nang aqing singsing.
The ring was lost (missed) to me.	Naualaan acó nang singsing.

Sometimes ma combines with mag in the local passive to denote the source from which something comes.

The ruin of towns comes from war.	{ Ang pinagcacasiráan nang maña baya,i, ang pagbabacà, or, ang yqui- nasisirá etc.
-----------------------------------	--

TWENTY NINTH EXERCISE.

Where did your servant slip and stumble? He, not only slipped and stumbled, but fell down in the forest where he went astray. What have you missed, as you are so sad? Death has deprived me of my son. Where did she die? She died in Manila. Why did your sister omit to confess that sin? Because she forgot to confess it. Why was your mother terrified last night? She was in bed when it was thundering, she became terrified and sprang unconsciously to her feet and we found her knelt down. Did you see the thief? Yes, he was face downwards and with his feet in stocks. Is our neighbour hungry or thirsty? He is neither hungry nor thirsty, he is angry. Who is ashamed? Nobody is ashamed, but Peter is astonished. What is the destruction caused by war? Destruction by war extends itself to many things; buildings, are destroyed; trees, are faded; their branches, cleft, and the wires of the telegraph cut off. Why do they not eat that fish? Because it is already putrid. What did my grandmother die from? She died from age. Where did she die? She died in church. Why is that man staggering? Because he is lame and blind, and he is sad because he is ruined. Why does he feign to be deaf? He does not feign to be deaf, he is certainly deaf. Where did the fugitive fail to be drowned? He failed to be drowned in the river. How is your female-cousin? She is tired out and fainted away. Why did this fruit fall down? Because life in the three is being extinguished.

THIRTIETH LESSON.
YCATLONG POUONG PAGARAL.

THE PARTICIPLE.

True auxiliary verbs not existing in Tagalog, the participle, either present or past, cannot assume an invariable form as in English, where it is complementary to the tense and mood of the auxiliary verb with which it is associated. Admitting however, the existence of such a part of speech in Tagalog, it may be said that there are as many participles as there are tenses of the verb (the imperative excepted) in all its forms of conjugation, and that it suffices to make ang or some demonstrative pronoun precede any tense of a verb, to form the proper participle corresponding to such verb and tense, or a participial noun or adjective expressive of the same action and tense. Hence, adjectival or subordinate English clauses containing a relative pronoun may be expressed in Tagalog by these participial or adjectival forms of the verb. The tenses of the active voice serve to form the active or present participles, and those of the passive voice, the passive or past participles in all the forms.

She has very good milk and her nursing is very good. What news from abroad? Peace has not yet been made. Who reported that to you? The papers say so. Do you trust what papers say? What the papers say is not always true. What will you tell your grandson? I will tell him nothing. To whom did the blacksmith report that news? He reported it to my brother's countrymen. What is the woman wrapping in that paper. It is some stuff she is wrapping up. What thing is to be used by her to wrap the stuff up? She uses paper to wrap it up. What do you say? Do not kill mice with a gun, kill them all with poison. How many wild boars will the native kill? He will kill many, for he is clever. What does he kill them with? He kills them with a spear. Where did he kill those seven he brought the other day? He killed them in the forest. What shall you do with that sword? I shall kill my enemy with it.

THIRTY FIRST LESSON.
YCATLONG POUO,T, ISANG PAGARAL.

THE PASSIVE PARTICIPLE.

The studying of the passive particle in all its forms and the special meaning imparted to it by the particle with which it is composed is of great importance in order to understand the most difficult thing in the Tagalog language, that of determining which of the various passive forms of the verb should be used, and for what purpose.

The participles, as has been previously said, taking, by the article which precedes them, the character of verbal nouns expressive of all the tenses of the verb, it follows that there must be a passive participle or participial noun indeterminate in time corresponding to the infinitive in the passive. Now, in primitive verbs, the root without any particle is sometimes used to express tense, when the latter is otherwise determined by some adverb of time or can be easily gathered from the context.

What do you say?	¿Anò ang sabi mo?.
What is being said by you?	{ ¿Anò ang sinasabi mo?. ¿anò ang sab mo ngayón?.
What did he say yesterday?	¿Anò ang sabi niyà cahapon?.
What will they say to-morrow?	{ ¿Anò ang sabi nilà bucas?. (better) sasabihin.

The same may be said with regard the passive participle; it is better however to use it in the proper tense, if not otherwise determined, or, if stress is laid on the time.

What is the child doing?	¿Anò ang guinagauá nang bata?
What did he do?, what is the work done by him?	{ ¿Anò ang guinauá niyá?.
What will they do?	¿Anò ang gagaoín nilá?
This is what I did.	Ytò ang guinauá co.

If the action is one of acquisition or assimilation on the part of the agent, the in passive participle generally denotes the acquisition; that in y, the instrument, if the action admits of one, or the reason for the execution; and that in an, the person from whom something is got, or the place.

To seek, to look for.	Humánap, cumita.
The thing to be sought, the thing which has been sought.	{ Ang hanapin, ang hinánap.
The instrument for some thing to be sought.	{ Ang yhanap.
Do do with which has been sought.	Ang yhinánap.
The place of seeking.	Ang paghanapan.
To take, to obtain, to get.	Cumoha.

Thing to be taken, thing which has been got.	}	Ang cumin (contraction), ang quinoha.
The instrument.		Ang ycoha, ang iquinoha.
The person from whom or the place wherefrom.	}	Ang conan (contraction).
To eat.		Cumáin.
Eating, the food which has been eaten.	}	Ang canin (contraction). ang quináin.
The place, dining-room.		Ang can-án, cacarán, (contractions).
To drink.		Uminom.
The drink, what has been drunk.		Ang inomín, ang ininóm.
The vessel, the tumbler.		Ang inoman.
To buy.		Bumili.
The purchase, the thing which has been bought.	}	Ang bilhin (contraction), ang binili.
The money with which to buy some thing.		Ang ybili.
The money with which some thing has been bought or the person for whom.	}	Ang ybinili.
The person from whom.		Ang bilhán, ang binilhán (contractions)
To reach for the subject.		Umabot. } Note the difference in ac-
To overrun, to overtake.		Umábot. } centuation.
Thing to be reached, and which has been reached.	}	Ang abutin, ang inabot.
The person overtaken.		Ang abotan.
To grasp.		Cumimquim.
Thing grasped, that which was grasped		Ang quimquimin, ang quinimquim.
To ask for.		Humiñgi.
What asked for, what was asked for.		Ang hiñgín (contraction), ang hiniñgí.
The person from whom.		Ang hiñgán. ,,
To snatch, to pray on.		Cumamcam.
Snatched, been snatched.		Ang camcamín, ang quinamcam.
Person from whom.		Ang camcamán.
With what.		Ang ycamcam, ang yquinamcam.

In verbs which govern two objects as those of giving, saying, etc., in is generally replaced by y, the latter expressing the direct complement or accusative: an, the indirect or dative.

		WHAT IS OR WAS DONE.	PERSON TO WHOM.
To give.	Magbigáy.	Ang ybinigáy.	{ Ang { big-ían.
			,, { biniguián.
To advise.	Maghátol.	Ang yhinátol.	,, { hatolan.
			,, { hinatolan.
To say,	Magsabi.	{ ,, { ysinabí.	}
		{ ,, { ypinagsabi.
To tell.	Magsalítá.	{ ,, { ysinalítá.	}
		{ ,, { ypinagsalítá.
To give back.	Magsaolí.	,, ysinaolí.	,, sinaolían.
To present with, to make a gift.	{ Magbiyaya	,, ypinagbiyaya	,, pinagbiyayaán.
To report, to announce.		{ Magbalita.	,, ypinagbalita.
To teach.	Umáral.	{ yáral.	}
		{ yniáral.
To sell.	Magbili.	,, ypinagbili.	,, pinagbilhan.
To show, to point out.	{ Magtoro.	,, ytinoro.	,, tinoroan.
To recommend.		Magbilin.	,, ypinagbilin.

In actions which may be considered as performed for the benefit of others, the passive participle with y, in the passive voice of um, may likewise be made to express the direct complement, although the one in in is also admissible; an, generally, denotes the place, and y, in the passive of mag, the person in benefit of whom something is done.

To cook.	Magloto.
Thing cooked.	{ Ang ylinoto, yniloto, ynaloto, lotoin niloto.
The cooking-pan.	Ang lotoán.
The person for whom something has been cooked.	{ Ang ypinagloto.
Place.	Ang paglotoán.
To fry, to roast.	Mag-íhao.
Fried, roasted. (present)	Ang ynifhao.
Frying-pan.	Ang ihaoan.
The person for whom.	Ang ypinag-íhao.
To cook in water, to boil.	Maglaga.
The thing cooked, boiled.	Ang ynilaga.
The boiling-pot.	Ang lagaán.
The person for whom.	Ang ypinaglaga.
To reach for others, to pass over, to hand over.	{ Magabot.

Sometimes the thing got at as the result of an intransitive action is expressed by the in passive participle, if this is not otherwise expressed.

To run.	Tumacbdò.
The thing run for.	Ang tacbohin.
To alight.	Lumósong.
The thing alighted for.	Ang losonguin.
To jump, thing jumped for.	Lumocsò, locsohin.
To go out.	Lumabás.
What to be sought in going out.	Ang lalabasin.
To go upstairs.	Pumanhic.
The person found upstairs.	Ang panhiquin.
The staircase, the ladder. (considered as to the action of going up).	{ Ang panhican.
To go, to come downstairs.	Panáog, manáog.
What is being sought in going or coming downstairs.	{ Ang pananaoguin.
The staircase (considered as to the action of coming down).	{ Ang panaogán.

Involuntary intransitive actions do not, of course, admit of in passive participle, unless they are made active by their being recombined with some other verbal particle imparting an active sense.

To be afraid.	Matácot.
Being afraid.	Ang natatácot.
Been afraid.	Ang natácot.
The person feared.	Ang catacotan.
To frighten.	Tumácot.
The person that is being or has been frightened.	{ Ang tacotín, tinácot.

In fortuitous occurrences by which somebody is affected, the passive participle indicative of the person affected by the event is made, with an suffixed; the place, with ca prefixed and an suffixed: yca indicates the cause or time.

To die.	Mamatáy.
The person affected by the event.	Ang matayán, ang namatayán.
The place.	Ang camatayán.
The cause of death or the time.	Ang ycamatáy, ang yquinamatáy.

But if the action is not fortuitous, ca should be used.

To be glad.	Matóua.
The person or thing over whom or which one is glad.	Ang catouaan, ang quinatouaan.
The reason.	Ang ycatóua, ang yquinatóua.

Forwards and towards verbs of motion, take y, yca for the reason, and an for the person.

To come. (here).	Paritò.
The person object of the visit.	Ang paritohan, ang pinaritohan.
The reason or time.	Ang ypinaritò.
To go there. (distant place)	Paróon.
The person whom to see or the place.	Ang paroonan.
The reason.	Ang yquinarparóon, ang ypinaparóon.

Y or yca with intransitive verbs also indicates time.

To repent.	Magsisi.
The time or the reason.	Ang ypinagsisi.
To sleep.	Matólog.
The time or cause.	Ang iquinatólog.

THIRTY FIRST EXERCISE.

Where shall I look for the shirt? Look for it in the room. With what is it to be sought? Seek it with this light. What have you taken? I took the book from John. Why does the child refuse to eat and drink? He has nothing to eat or drink and besides he has no plate or tumbler. What has he bought? He has bought a flower from Jane. Have you the where withal to buy a house? No, I have not the wherewithal to buy it. Why do you not ask from your uncle? I cannot, I snatched from him this money. What is the advice given by you to your son? I advised him (to-him) to give back the money to his uncle. What did your father present you with? He presented me with a watch. What has been announced by you to your friend? I reported to him the death of his sister. What is pointed out by that boy? He points out that tree. To whom has he recommended the commission of his servant? He has recommended it to the priest. What are you cooking? It is some fish that is being cooked by me. For whom do you cook it? I cook it for my brother. Will you also fry some bananas for her? I have no time, for she is washing my linen. What does that sailor intend to reach running so much? He intends to reach that dog. Why does Peter jump so much? He jumps to reach some fruit. For whom did you go upstairs? It was my brother for whom I went upstairs. By which staircase did you come down? By that which leads to the front door. Whom are your sisters afraid of? They fear the dead. Let them fear God and let them not allow themselves to be frightened by ghosts. Whom has the neighbour been deprived of by death? His mother has died (to him) (He mourns the death of his mother). When did she die? She died the first day of March. What did she die from? She was drowned. Over whom do you rejoice? I rejoice over my children. Whom will your relation come for? He will come for my sister to behold the procession. Why did my cousin come here? He came here to pay his debts. Whom are you going to visit? I am going to visit the priest.

THIRTY SECOND LESSON.
YCATLONG POUO,T, DALAUANG PAGARAL.

THE MEANING AND USE OF THE VARIOUS KINDS OF PASSIVE

IN PASSIVE.

The meaning and the proper use of the different passive forms of the verb is of the greatest importance in order to master and thoroughly understand the language.

In, is the true passive, to be used with most active verbs when the direct object or necessary complement is specifically expressed in the sentence, and no indirect object or circumstance of place, instrument, reason or time as to the action is added.

As there are some active verbs which, for various reasons, do not admit of in passive and, on the other hand, some intransitive ones which admit of it, the following general rules are given as to this important matter.

In passive is used in verbs denoting acts of appropriation, either moral or material, on the part of the subject.

VERBS.	PASSIVE PARTICIPLES
To carry away by birds of prey.	Dumáguit. Daguitin, dináguit.
To despoil, to pillage.	Sumamsan. Samsamin, sinamsam.
To choose, to select.	Pumili, mamili. Piliin, pinili.
To scoop, to take out something from a hole.	Dumócot. Docotin, dinócot.
To borrow some thing. (not money).	Humiram. Hiramín, hirmín, (cont.). hiniram.
To pray for, to crave.	Dumalañgin. Dinalañgin.
To implore.	Dumaying. Dinaying.
To swallow, to devour.	Lumamon. Lamonin, linamon.
To suck.	Pumang-ós. Pinang-ós.
To absorb.	Humithit. Hithitin, hinithit.
To sip.	Humígop. Hinígop, higopin.
To call for.	Tumáuag. Tauaguin, tináuag.
To nod for.	Cumauáy. Cauayín.
To go for, to send for somebody.	Sumongdó. Songdoin, sinongdó.
To look after, to search for, to search about.	Humalfhao. Haliháoin, hinalfhao.
To look about for.	Sumalicsic. Salicsiquin, sinalicsic.
To grope for.	Umapóhap. Ynapóhap.
To receive, to accept of.	Tumangap. Tangapin, tinangap.
To go forth to meet somebody.	Sumalóbong. Salobofgin, sinalóbong.

The different manners of getting at something, or the instrument or tool serving to take hold of something, generally admit of in passive to indicate the thing got at thereby.

Meshed trap to catch boars or wild beasts.	}	Bating.
What has been caught by a snare of this kind.		Ang binating.
To hawk.	}	Pañgatí.
The fowl hawked.		Ang pinañgatí, nacatí.
To hunt by a dog.	}	Pañgaso, mañgaso.
The game taken.		Ang inaso, pinañgaso.
Fishing-rod.	}	Siic.
What has been caught thereby.		Ang siniic.
Fishing-net.	}	Lambat.
Fished with a net.		Linambat.
Fishing-hook.	}	Binuit.
Fish that has been hooked.		Ang bininuit.
Broom.	}	Ualís, pañgualís.
Sweepings.		Ang iniualís, niualís.

The acts of the five senses in the general or modified sense admit of in passive to express the definite result of such acts. Only tumiñgin, "to see", "to look at" in a general sense; tintim, "to taste a liquor"; are, on account of euphony, conjugated in the an passive for the direct object.

VERBS.		WHAT HAS BEEN DONE.
To sight, to see from afar.	Tumanáo.	Ang tinanáo.
To look askew.	Sumuliap.	" sinuliap.
To behold.	Panóor.	" pinanóor.
To look backwards.	Lumiñgon.	" liniñgón.
To hear.	Dumiñgig.	" diniñgig.
To listen.	Matyag.	" minatyag.
To relish.	Lumásap.	" linásap.
To savor.	Numamnán.	" ninamnán.
To feel, to touch.	Humipo.	" hinipo.
To smell.	Umamóy.	" inamóy.
To scent.	Sumanhor.	" Sinanhor.

Acts of the mind or will, also admit of in passive.

To think of.	Mag-ísip.	Ang inísip.
To remember of.	Mag-alaala.	" inaalaala.
To wish.	Umibig.	" inibig.
To verify.	Umolotsiha.	" inolotsiha.
To explain.	Magsalaysáy.	" sinalaysáy.
To consider, to calculate.	Magbúlay.	" pinagbúlay.
To love.	Sumintá.	" sinintá.
To esteem.	Lumíyag.	" liníyag.
To caress.	Umírog.	" inírog.

In verbs the action of which necessarily falls upon a person, the in passive generally denotes the person.

VERBS.		PERSON WHO IS OR HAS BEEN.
To invite.	Umáquit.	Ang ináquit.
To wait for.	Humintáy.	" hintín (contraction).
To ask.	Magtanong.	" tanoñgin. (to whom)
To prevail on.	Magarogá.	" inarogá.
To reprimand.	Sumalá.	" salahin.
To succor, to carry an infant in arms.	Sumaclólò.	" sinaclólò.

Verbs of destruction and those implying change or transformation in the object, generally admit of the in passive to indicate the result of such change, if no reference as to the instrument or cause is meant.

VERBS.	THING, EFFECT OF THE ACTION.
To do away with.	Gumibá.	Ang guinibá.
To kill.	Pumatáy.	„ pinatáy.
To set fire to.	Sumónog.	„ sinónog.
To unseam.	Tumastás.	„ tastasín.
To change, to exchange.	Pumalit.	„ pinalit.
To blacken.	Umitim.	„ initim.
To set in order, to disentangle.	Humúsay.	„ hinúsay.

The effect of some destructive animate agent is expressed by putting the root indicative of such agent, in the passive of in.

Locustus, destroyed by locustus.	Bálang, binálang.
Rat, „ „ rats.	Dagá, dinagá.
Crow, „ „ crows.	Ouac, inouac.
Ant, „ „ ants.	Langam, linamgam.
Kite, eagle; preyed on „ kites.	Bánoy, binánoy.

In the same manner, verbs of carrying, cutting, weighing, measuring or moving take the in passive for what is the result of any such actions, when considered on the agent's side or terminated therein. Thus, "brought," dinalà: "sent, ypinadala."

VERBS.	WHAT DONE.
To carry on one's shoulders.	Pumasán, masán, mag-pas-án	} Ang pasanin, ang pinas-án.
To drag along.	Humilà
To carry along with, to carry along some thing hanging down.	Magtagláy.	„ hilahin, „ hinila.
To carry along below the armpit.	Magquflie.	„ taglayin „ tinag-láy.
To carry in one's arms.	Magcalón.	„ quiliquin, „ quinílic.
To cut. (generic).	Magpotol, mamótol, pag-pótol.	„ caloñgin, „ quinálon.
To tear.	Gumisi.	„ potlín, (cont.) pinótol
To cut out.	Tumabas.	„ guisiquin, „ guinisi
To hew.	Tumagá.	„ tinabas.
To fell, to cut down.	Sumapol, magsapol.	„ Tag-ín, (cont.) tinagá.
To weigh. (generic).	Tumimbang	„ sapolín, ang sinapol.
To measure grain or liquids.	Tumácal.	„ tinimbang.
To measure, to ascertain the quantity of a liquid by sounding it with a rod.	Tumárol, magtarol.	„ tinácal.
To move. (one's body)	Cumibo.	„ tinarol.
		„ quinibo.

The prepositive possessive pronouns are conjugated by this passive to assert the property of, or the holding out of something as appertaining to the persons expressed by the pronoun.

MEANING.	PRONOUNS	CONSTRUCTION.
I repute it to be mine.	Aquin.	Ynaaquin co.
I reputed it „ „ thine.	Yyò,	Yniyohin co.
Hold it as thine.	„	Yyohin mo.
I will hold it to be his or hers.	Caniyâ	Cacaniyahin co.
Let him hold it as ours.	Amin.	Aminin niyâ.
We repute it as ours.	Atin.	Ynaatin natin.
I will hold it as yours. (plur.)	Ynyò.	Yinyohin co.
Make it theirs.	Canilâ.	Canilahin mo.

Adjectives formed with ma and having an attributive sense may be construed in the same manner.

Just, fair, upright.	Marápat.
I hold it to be just.	Minamarápat co.
Bad.	Masamá.
He will repute that as bad.	Mamasamáin niyâ iyán.

The thing made or to be made, or into which is to be transformed some raw or preparatory material may be conjugated by in, the matter acted upon being put in the nominative case, if it is not circumscribed in meaning.

I will make shoes out of this leather.	Ytòng balat na itò,i, sasapinin co.
Make pants and aprons out of that stuff.	Yyáng cayong iyá,i, salaualín at tapisin mo.
What is your father going to make out of that lumber?	¿Anòng gagaoín nang amá mo niyáng cáhoy na iyán?
He is going to make a house out of it.	Ysàng báhay ang gagaoín niyâ niyáng cáhoy na iyán.
I made a walking-stick out of that log.	Yaóng cáhoy na yaó,i, tinongcor co.

If a noun expressing a condition capable of being assimilated by, or extended to, others, is conjugated in this kind of passive, the subject's design of acquiring such condition, is expressed.

Make him your friend.	Catotohin mo siyá.
I consider you as my father, you are my godfather. (stand as father to me).	Ynaamá quitá.
Consider me as a son, stand a godfather to me.	Anaquín mo acó.

Some intransitive actions which admit of a definite purpose for their performance may be conjugated passively to express the object toward which the action is directed.

To fly, the object of pursuit.	Lumipad, ang liparin.
To run, the thing run for.	Tumacbò, ang tachohin.
To swim, the thing taking hold of by swimming.	Lumañgóy, ang lañgoyin.
To dive, thing dived for.	Sumísid, ang sisirin,
To peep out, what or who was perceived in peeping out.	Dumoñgao, ang dinuñgao.

The sentences with this kind of passive are construed by putting the agent in the possessive case and the object in the nominative. If the sentence includes some indirect complement, the case of the latter remains unchanged and the proper preposition should be used, or the verb is put in the other corresponding passive required by the nature of the indirect complement with the latter in the nominative and the direct one in the accusative.

I bought this house.	{ Binili co itong báhay, aquing binili itong báhay.
Your (thy) brother eats the banana.	{ Quinacáin nang capatid mo ang sá- guing.
He killed him.	{ Pinatáy niyá siyá.
He killed him with the sword.	{ Pinatáy niyá siyá nang sandatá, ang sandatá ang ypinatáy, niyá sa caniyá.
I sought the chicken in the room.	{ Hinánap co ang sísiu sa silid, pinag- hanapan co ang silid nang sísiu,

THIRTY SECOND EXERCISE.

Why do you pillage the fruits, and the clothes which your father wore? These fruits have been selected by me in the garden, and as to the clothes I borrowed them. What is your sister scooping? She is taking out the needle from a hole. What did you crave of your mother? I craved of her to give me the money. What is that child sucking? He is sucking his brother's sugar-cane. Have you called the servant? I did not call him, I nodded for him. Whom are you going for? I am going for the barber. Did he search about for the hammer? He looked about for it. Have you received the letter? I received the letter and now I am going out to meet my friend. Have the Americans trapped these boars? These boars have been trapped by them. How did this man get at these birds and that fish? He hawked the birds and hooked the fish. Has the sailor sighted the ship? He did not sight the ship. At what is the girl looking askew? She is not looking askew at anything, she is beholding the procession. What did they taste? They tasted the wine. What shall we scent? We shall scent those flowers. Do you remember what your father told you? I remember it because I love him. Do you love too your mother? Yes, indeed, I love her. Did she caress her child? She did not. Whom do you invite? I invite my friend. For whom is she waiting? She is waiting for her husband. Whom do you ask? I ask the neighbour. Whom have you reprimanded the other day? I reprimanded my son, because he did not carry his brother in arms. Who has destroyed (done away with) this house? It was set fire to. Why did they not set their books in order? Because they were unseamed. Can you carry this log on your shoulders? No, but I can drag it along. Whose is that rosary you carry along hanging down? It is my mother's. What do you carry below your armpit? It is a prayer-book, for my child cannot walk and I carry him in my arms. Why did you cut the bread and tear my stuff already cut out? I did not do that, I did hew the log and I felled the trunks of banana-trees. Have you weighed the iron and measured the paddy? I only sounded the wine. Why! do you consider this book as mine? I hold it to be theirs. Do you believe it to be yours? No, I repute it to be ours. Do you hold as just what was done by your son? No, I repute it to be wrong. What is he going to do with that stone? He is going to make a church. Why does your friend consider Peter as his father? Because Peter considers him as his son. What is that kite flying for? It is flying for a chicken. Will you overtake your enemy? I shall overtake him in swimming. What does he dive for? He dives for a ring.

THIRTY THIRD LESSON.
YCATLONG POUO,T, TATLONG PAGARAL.

THE MEANING AND USE OF THE VARIOUS KINDS OF PASSIVE.

Y PASSIVE.

Generally, the employing of the verbal case passives is decided by the special modification imparted to the action by some indirect complement existing in the sentence. Y passive is, however, essential to those expulsive acts whereby the subject loses control of something by his own will, and to those acts importing throwing, sowing, scattering, spilling, commixing, adding and placing, which do not generally admit of the in passive. So, this is the true passive for the verbs which, on no other account than the nature of the action in its simple sense, are conjugated by mag, differently from those conjugated by um, which latter generally take the in passive.

		PASSIVE PARTICIPLES.
VERBS.		What to be (indef.)	What has been.
To sell.	Magbili.	Ang ypagbili.	Ang ypinag bili.
To give, to hand over.	Mag-gauar.	„ ygauar,	„ yguinauar.
To sell by retail, to do something little by little.	Magotáy.	„ ypagotáy.	„ ypinagotáy.
To throw away.	Magtapon.	„ ytapon.	„ ytinapon.
To sow.	Magsábog.	„ ysábog.	„ ysinábog.
To scatter.	Magbulagsac.	„ ybulagsac.	„ ybinulagsac.
To propagate, to spread about.	Magcálat.	„ ycálat.	„ yquinálat.
To emit, to send forth.	Magsambólat.	„ ysambólat.	„ ysinambólat.
To spill.	Magbohos.	„ ybohos.	„ ybinohos.
To mix, to add some different substance to.	Maghalo.	„ yhalo.	„ yhinalo.
To add.	Magdagdag.	„ ydagdag.	„ ydinagdag.
To unite.	Maglangcap.	„ ylangcap.	„ ylinangcap.
To place.	Maglagáy.	„ ylagáy.	„ ylinagáy.
To heap, to put things in layers.	Magpátong.	„ ypátong.	„ ypinátong.
To sun, to expose something to sunshine.	Magbilad.	„ ybilad.	„ ybinilar.

In actions capable of being executed for and against the subject or in a manual way, distinction should be drawn as to the performance by the subject or by others for him, and as to the manual act considered objectively, or the objective effect of such act upon other things. Thus:

To stretch out one's arm to reach some thing, is.	}	Gumauar.
Ang the thing which the subject reaches at or which is handed over to him by others, is.
To stretch out the arm to pass some thing to others, is.	}	Mag-gauar.
And the thing thus handed over.
To mix in the sense of shaking, is.	}	Humalo.
The thing shaken.
To mix, to add some thing by mixing it with.	}	Maghalo.
And the substance thus added to some other.
	}	Ang yhalo.

Y passive is generally used in sentences with verbs the action of which necessarily requires two complements, (although in is sometimes used with some of them), when the direct one is discriminately expressed.

VERBS.		Passive participles indicative of the thing done.
To give.	Magbigáy.	Ang ybinigáy.
To present with.	Magbiyaya.	„ ypinagbiyaya.
To tell.	Magsalitá.	„ ysinalitá.
To ask to.	Magtanong.	„ ytinanong.
To teach.	Umáral.	„ yniáral.
To show.	Magtoro.	„ ytinuro.

The ideas of conforming, adjusting a thing to, of transferring translating or copying into, admit of y passive to indicate the thing thus adjusted, etc.

VERBS.	The object of the action.
To conform, to render suitable.	Magbágay. Ang ybinágay.
To compare.	Maghalimbáua. Ang ypinaghalimbáua.
To equalize.	Magpará. Ang ypinará.
To translate, transfer, copy out.	Magsalin. Ang ysinalin.

Out of the foregoing cases in which the passive of y is used in reference to the especially determined direct object of a sentence, y, indicates the instrument or cause by which the action is executed, or the specific time in which executed. It is enough to name any such circumstance with the verb in the proper tense of this passive and the direct object (if there is any,) in the accusative, to make up an y passive sentence.

What has he made this ganta with?	¿Anòng yguinauá niyà nitòng salop?
He made it with the knife.	{ Ang itac, ang yguinauá niyà, yguinauá niyà ang itac.
Why do you bear those grievances?	¿Anò,t, ypinagbabatà mo iyáng mañga cahirapan?
I bear them for God's sake.	Dios ang ypinagbabatà co niyán.
At what time did they arrive?	¿Anòng oras ang ydinating nilà?
They arrived at day-break.	{ Ydinating nilà ang pagbubucang liuánag or liuayúáy.

Y, meaning the instrument.

If an action of those requiring the y passive admits of instrument and the latter is expressed in the sentence, this is generally done in the regular way through the proper preposition.

He threw away this sand with a hoe.	}	Ytinapon niyà itòng buhañgin nang panhóca'y.
I sow my rice with the hand.	}	Ysinasábog co ang aquing pálay nang camáy.

If the root denotes an instrument and is conjugable, the root alone in the proper tense of this passive may stand for the whole indirect object if no direct object represented by a noun is stated in the sentence.

What did they kill it with?	}	¿Anò ang ypinatáy nilà?
They killed it with a gun.		Ybinaril nilà or binaril nilà, pinatáy nilà nang baril.

What is required to accomplish some action and the means of accomplishing it may likewise be considered as an instrument for the using of y.

The priest does not officiate to-day, because he has no garments to say mass.	}	Hindí nagmimisà ang pare figayón, sa pagca,t, ualá siyáng damit na ypagmimisà.
He has not the wherewithal to buy this farm.		Ualá siyáng ybili nitòng búquid.
I have the wherewithal to pay you.		Mayróon acóng ybabáyar sa iyò.

Y, meaning the cause.

Y, generally means the cause with intransitive actions.

The reason for my having wept, was my father's death.	}	Ang ytinañgís co,i, áng camatayan ni amá.
Thou art the cause of my remaining here, I stay here for your sake.		Icáo, ang ytinira co ditò.
I will go upstairs for his sake.		Siyá,i, ang ypapanhic co.
They follow me for my money's sake.		Ang ari co, ang ysinusonod (or yquinasusonod) nilà sa aquin.

The reason or cause for ma intransitive actions or in causative verbs, is made by yca, which also serves to indicate time with the same verbs.

The ruin of his estate came from gambling.	}	Ang yquinasira nang caniy.ñg ari, ay ang pagsusugal.
It is solitude which makes me sad.		Yquinahahapis co,i, ang pañgofgolila.

The difference between y and yca as to the cause of an action, is, that yca designates thoroughly perfected acts, in verbs the action of which admits of a slow development.

The weather is the cause of his improvement.	}	Ang panahó,i, ang yguinagaling niyà.
The taking of this medicine was what made his recovery complete.		Ang pag-inom nitòng gamot, ang yquinagaling niyà.

Y, expressive of time.

The sense of time with y differs from that of cause, only in that the causative thing is replaced by some word importing time, in the nominative, yca being used with the same verbs and for the same purposes as above explained. Y expresses time generally with intransitive verbs.

The day my wife will arrive. { Ang árao na ydarating nang aquing asáua.
The hour at which she died. Ang oras na yquinamatáy niyá.

If the expression of time is a determinate one, it may be put before or after the verb; if it is indeterminate, it should be put before.

On Lent-Fridays, meat should not be eaten. { Ang viernes nang cuaresma di yquinacáin nang carne, or, di yquinacáin nang carne ang viernes nang cuaresma.
The year in which I embarked for the Philippines. { Ang taóng ysinacáy co sa Pilipinas.

CONSTRUCTION.

Sentences which include a verb requiring this passive are construed by putting the agent in the possessive case and the direct object in the nominative.

I threw away the book. Ytinapon co ang libro.
He cast up (vomited) the milk. Ysinucá niyá ang gatas.
Peter gave this money. Ybinigáy ni Pedro itóng salapí.

Sentences in which y passive is used to express instrument, cause or time are construed by putting the word indicative of any such circumstance in the nominative, and the direct complement (if there is one), in the accusative, whith the agent always in the possessive case.

With this string you will fasten the prisoner's hands to his back. { Ytóng pantali ygagapós mo sa bilangoin; ygagapús mo sa bilangoin itóng-pantali.
It was on account of her that I came here. Siyá, ang yquinaparitò or ypinaritò co.
We went away yesterday. Cahapon, ang yniális natin.

The putting of the nominative before the verb and the using of the latter in the participial sense, makes the expression somewhat emphatic.

The indirect object of an action performed for the benefit of others, or the person for whom some act is executed, may be put in the nominative with the verb in the proper tense of the y passive.

Buy me (for me) this gun. Ybili mo acó nitóng baril.
Make chocolate for Father Charles. { Ypagloto mo si Pare Carlos nang sicolate.
Have a house made for me. Ypagbáhay mo acó.
Roaring, bustle, hum. Ugong.

THIRTY THIRD EXERCISE.

What did the merchant sell by retail? He sold my sister's needles and pins. What do you throw into the fire? I wish to throw my father's wood into the fire. Why does your cousin sow rice on his farm? Because it sends forth a good smell. What did the native mix (add to) with the wine? Water. What did the merchant add to the butter? He added my father's tallow to it. What did your cousin put on that table? He put there my sister's prayer-book. Why do you expose that linen to the sun? Because it was wet. What do you present your mother with? I presented her with a pair of spectacles yesterday. What did he say to your sister-in-law? He asked her about the state of her aunt. What hast thou taught this child? I taught him the doctrine. Which did they show your female-cousin? They showed her my fan. What does the pupil copy? He copies the verses. What have you cut my bread with? I cut it with your knife. What have you written his letter with? I wrote it with a pencil. What has he wounded our friend with? With a stick. Why do you not pay me? Because I have no money to pay with. With what money will Peter buy the bed? He will buy it with the money he received from me. Why does that woman weep so much? Because death deprived her of her child. Why had he remained here? He had remained here for Ann's sake. Why do soldiers obey their chiefs? They obey them through fear. What made him completely wealthy? The sale of hides rounded out his fortune. When would he arrive at the sea had he departed in time? He would have arrived there to-morrow by ten o'clock. Whom are you going to visit here? I came to visit you.

THIRTY FOURTH LESSON.

YCATLONG POUO,T, APAT NA PAGARAL.

THE MEANING AND USE OF THE VARIOUS KINDS OF PASSIVE. (continued.)

AN PASSIVE.

An passive is but rarely employed in reference to the direct object. There are, however, some verbs which, although requiring the in passive if looked upon in regard to the nature of the action, are, for the sake of euphony or the contractions they undergo, conjugated by an for the direct complement.

To see,	what seen.	Tumiñgin,	ang tingnán (cont.)
To experience,	„ experienced.	Magmasid,	„ pagmasdán. (cont.)
To salt,	„ salted.	Magasín,	„ asnán. („)
To pierce,	„ pierced.	Tumalab,	„ tablán. („)
To hold, to grasp;	„ held, etc.	{ Tumañgán. }	{ „ tañgán. („)
To taste,	„ tasted.	{ Magtañgan; }	{ „ „ („)
To pay for	„ paid for.	Tumiquim,	„ ticman. („)
		Magbayad	„ bayaran („)

Magáral, “to learn”; admits of pagaralan for what is learnt.

Verbs, the action of which properly requires a person as their direct complement, generally take an passive to indicate whom the action falls upon.

VERBS.	PERSON, OBJECT OF THE ACTION.
To threaten.	Magbala.	Ang pagbaláan.
To cohabit with.	Magapir.	„ apdán. (cont.) (the female party)
To frighten by suddenly } rushing out.	Bumalacá. }	„ balacaán.
To clothe.	Dumamit.	„ damtán. (cont.)
To deceive.	Magdaya.	„ pagdayáan.
To kiss.	Humalic.	„ haccán. (cont.)
To clean of lice.	Humiñgato.	„ hiñgotán. (cont.)

Sometimes an indicates the person, in, the thing.

To unfasten, to absolve.	Cumalag.
The person absolved.	Ang calgán. (cont.)
The thing unfastened.	Ang calguín. (cont.)
To hear.	Dumiñgig.
The person listened to.	Ang dingán. (cont.)
What heard.	Ang dinguín. (cont.)

If the action is such as to admit a place for its direct object, the latter is generally expressed by the an passive.

VERBS.	PLACE, THE DIRECT OBJECT OF THE VERB
To open, to lay open.	Magbucás.	Ang bucasan, bucsán. (cont.)
To sprinkle with water from the mouth.	Bumuga. Magbuga.	} „ Bughán. (cont.)
To plant.	Magtanim.	„ tamnán. (cont.)
To fill.	Mamonó, magpono.	„ ponan. (cont.)
To line.	Magsapin.	„ sapnán. (cont.)
To cover.	Tumaquip.	„ tacpán. (cont.)
Open the door.		Bucsán mo ang pinto.
John planted his farm.		Tinamnán ni Juan ang caniyang búquid.
Will they fill the vat?		¿Poponán bagá nilá ang tapayan?
He had already covered the table when I arrived.		Natacpán na niyá ang lamesa nang acó,i, dungmating.

But, most commonly, an stands for the local ablative and replaces the adverb of place or the proposition which otherwise should have been, and is to be employed, if the verb obtains in any other form of conjugation. Thus, if a sentence with a verb other than those of the class above-stated includes an indirect complement of place relating to the action, it is enough to name such place with the verb in this passive to express the relation of case which is in English made up by means of a preposition.

Jane is gathering flowers in the garden.	Ang halamana,i, ang lugar na pinipitasan ni Juana nang mañga bulac-lac.
In this house my father died.	{ Ytóng bahay na itò, ang quinamata-yán ni amá.

It may be said that an replaces sa, a preposition which governs the ablative and sometimes the accusative cases, but which is more adapted to the dative. Hence, if in a sentence, there enters in English a dative of person governed by the preposition "to", (1). the person may be named in the nominative with the verb in the passive of an.

He gave me this nail.	{ Biniguián niyá acó nitóng paco. Acó, ang binig-ián niyá nitóng paco.
Whom have they sold my shirt to?	{ ¿Sino bagá ang pinagbilhan nilá nang aquing baro.
They sold it to their friends.	{ Pinagbilhan nilá ang canilang mañga caibigan, or, ang mañga caibigan nilá ang pinagbilhan nilá.
Are you admonishing Alfred?	{ ¿Pinañguñgusapan bagá ninyò si Alpredo?.
It is not Alfred, but his sister that we are admonishing.	{ Hindí Si Alpredo, cundí ang caniyang capatid na babaye ang pinañguñgusapan namin.

An, also stands for the person from whom something comes, in actions by which the subject tries to draw something to himself.

(1). "To", governs the dative case when the action is of such a kind as to make the subject part with something. If it is of a mercenary or associative kind and performed for the benefit, or in behalf of others, or if the dative is of acquisition, "for" should then be used. We have seen that "for" in this case is translated by the y passive. "She sews these pantaloons for me". Ypinagtatahi niyá acó nitóng salawat.

VERBS.	PERSON FROM WHOM.
To buy.	Bumili.	Ang bilhan.
To take.	Cumuha, muha.	{ " conan. (cont. and inversion.)
To seek, to claim.	Humánap.	" hanapan.
To receive, to accept.	Tumangap.	" tangapán.
To ask for, to require of.	Humiñgi.	" hiñgán.
To entreat, to pray.	Dumaing.	" daiñgan.

Sometimes the discrimination between place and person is made by pag when the action admits of a place.

VERBS.	PLACE WHERE.
To seek.	Humánap.	Ang paghanapan.
To claim payment, to get one's self paid.	{ Sumiñgil.	" pagsiñgilán.

CONSTRUCTION.

When the verb is such as to require the an passive in reference to the direct object, the sentence is construed by putting the agent in the possessive case and the direct object in the nominative.

Hold this candle.	Tangnán mo itóng candila.
The son kisses his mother.	{ Hinahagcán nang anac ang caniyàng irá.
Prop the tree.	Tucoran mo ang cáhoy.

If the sentence includes, besides a direct complement, an indirect one of place, the latter is put in the nominative and the direct one in the accusative.

My grandfather plants a variety of trees in the garden.	Tinatamnán ni nono nang sarisaring cáhoy ang halamanan.
Have you looked for the servant in this road?	{ Pinaghanapan mo bagá sa alila itóng daáing itò?

If an stands for a place or a person in the ablative or dative cases, the place or person should be named (that is to say, put in the nominative) and the remainder as above; the agent, in the possessive, and the direct complement, in the accusative. The indirect complement may be put before or after the verb, unless an interrogative pronoun or adverb of place be used in its stead in interrogative sentences, in which case, the adverb or the pronoun precedes the verb. As a rule, the naming of the place or person before the verb is a means of rendering it prominent in the sentence.

I write on this paper.	Sinusulatan co itóng papel.
He wrote my verses.	Ysinúlat niyá ang aqing mañga tulá.
We shall write on that table.	{ Pagsusulatan namin iyáng lamesang iyán.
He put the book on the floor.	{ Ang sahig ang linaguián niyá nang libro.
I will give my money to Mr Such a one.	Bibiguián co nang aqing pílac Si Couán.
To whom have you sold this cake?	{ Sinong pinagbilhan mo nitóng matamis?
To my neighbour's son.	Aug anac nang caapirbáhay co.

Whom are you paying for this bed?	} ¿Sinong binabayaran mo nitòng hihigan?
I am paying the merchant for this bed.	{ Binabayaran co nitòng hihigan ang comerciante.
I will buy the high house from the owner.	{ Bibilhan co nang matáas na báhay ang may ari.

THIRTY FOURTH EXERCISE.

What do you see yonder on the top of that mountain? I see trees which bear large branches. Does he notice the roaring of the wind? He does not notice the roaring of the wind, for he is deaf. Has the servant salted the fish? He has not yet salted the fish. Has your brother pierced this buffalo with the spear? He has pierced this buffalo with a spear and tasted its blood. What do you hold in your hand? It is a spear that I hold in my hand. What did you learn? I learned the English language. Whom is the thief threatening? He is threatening that boy; he frightened him at first by rushing out and he is now deceiving him. Did you advise and clothe the child? I clothed him and advised him to kiss his sister. From whom did you hear what you told me about the unfastening of the prisoner? I heard it from a friend of mine. What is his grand-daughter opening? She is opening the garden gate. What are you doing there? I am filling and covering the vat. What will they buy from the American? They will buy my butter from him. From whom have you taken that cane? I received it from my uncle. Of whom have we asked this paper? We craved it of the priest. Where has the servant looked for the hen that disappeared? He searched for it in the garden. From whom have you received this money in payment? I received this money from my debtor. Why does he not give me his bird? Because he has already given it to his sister. Is it this house where they assembled? No, they met together at Mary's house. What did they assemble for? They assembled to speak about the tax. Where shall you go? I shall go nowhere. Have you anything to tell me? I have to tell you something. Where have you put my spectacles? I put them into the room. Whom do you cut down that tree for? I cut it down for my master. Did I not say to you not to cut down any trees? Well, I obey my master.

THIRTY FIFTH LESSON.

YCATLONG POUO,T, LIMANG PAGARAL.

THE PROPER USE OF ANY VOICE OF THE VERB.

The use of the passive is far more common in Tagalog than in Western languages; in fact it is the most common form in narration.

An English transitive verb has two voices which may be made use of in a complete sentence; but the change from the active to the passive is not marked by an inflexion and hence the active voice predominates throughout in English. In Tagalog, where the passive shortens the sentence and concretes the sense in a way requiring some completive words in other languages, the contrary takes place, and it may be said that the proper use of either voice and either kind of passive constitutes the greatest difficulty in the language.

Speaking generally, the active voice looks forward more to the subject which it makes prominent, and the passive, to the object. Thus, if the subject is made emphatic by whatever means of expression fit for the purpose, the active voice is generally employed in Tagalog, even, when looking to the determination of the object, the passive should have been employed; the verb taking the active participial form.

It is I who killed him.	Acó, ang pungmatáy sa caniyà.
It is you who shall say that.	Cayó, ang magsasabi niyán.
He himself did it.	Siyá rin, ang gungmauá.
It is they who stole my money.	Silá, ang nagnácao nang salapí co.

The active should likewise be used in incomplete sentences when no reference is made to an especially determined object either mentioned or understood.

I read, (pres.)	Bungmabasà acó.
Thou atest.	Cungmáin ca.
He sees.	Nacaquiquita siyá.
We write.	Sungmusúlat camí.
They will grant pardon.	Magpapatáuar silá.
You begged pardon, you asked for a reduction in price.	Tungmáuar cayó.

But, if we say: basahin mo, canin niyà, ysinusúlat namin, papatauarin nilà, it may be assumed that "read it, them"; "let him eat it, them"; "we write it, them, this" or "they will grant pardon to him, her, them", is meant, such English words as "some", "one", "it", "him", "her", "this", etc., being frequently understood and included in the passive particle.

The active is generally made use of in complete sentences when the object thereof is in the partitive or indeterminate sense, if no circumstance of instrument, place or time directly connected with the action is mentioned.

Bring in some cigars.	Magdalà ca ditò nang tabaco.
My brother ate fruit.	Ang kapatir co,i, cungmáin nang boñga.

The merchant sells pins.	Nagbibili nang aspiller ang comerciante
Call for a servant.	Tumáuag cayó nang isâng alila. (bata)
Don't drink any liquor.	Houag ca uminom nang álac.

The same is the case with sentences having an object determinate in quantity or kind, if a portion and not the whole of such determinate substance is meant.

Make use of this money.	Gumámit ca niyáng salapí.
I buy some of these bottles.	Bungmibili acó nitòng mañga bote.
He will send some of our furniture.	{ Magpapadalá siyá nang aming casang-{ capan.
He would take four of my trunks.	{ Cocoha disin siyá nang ápat sa aqing
	{ mañga cabán.

To say, gamitin mo iyáng salapí, binibili co itòng mañga bote, etc., would indicate the whole.

The active is used with intransitive actions, unless reference is made to instrument, cause, time, place or purpose.

They laugh.	Tungmatáua silá.
We die.	Namamatáy camí.
You walk.	Lungmalácad cayó.

In interrogative sentences when an agent and not an object is inquired after, the active is likewise used.

Who calls them?	¿Sinong tungmatáuag sa canilá?
Which of them loves you?	{ ¿Alín or sino sa canilá ang sungmi-
	{ sintá sa iyò?
What hurt me?	¿Anóng nagpasaquit sa aquin?

In complex sentences in which the subject is enlarged by an adjective clause.

The man who loves God, will attain Glory.	Ang tauòng sungmisintá sa Dios ay magcacamit nang caloualhatían.
The knavish boy who dissipates his fortune deserves to be chastised.	{ Ang hunghang na bagòng tauòng nag-
	{ aacsayá nang caniyáng ari ay dápat
	{ siyáng hampasín.

The passive should be used in sentences the object of which is individualized, or is circumscribed and fixed by some attribute or attributive word.

Call for Mary.	Tauaguin mo Si María.
He will bring my book.	Dadalhín niyá ritò ang aqing libro.
Don't whip that cat.	Houag mong hampasín iyáng pusa.
Bring in the shoes I ordinarily wear	{ Dalhín mo ritó ang mañga sapín na
	{ guinagámit cong madalás. (caraniuan).

In interrogative sentences when a determinate object is inquired after.

What do you want?	¿Anóng ibig mo?
Which dog did he kill?	¿Alíng aso ang pinatáy niyá?
Whom do you hate?	¿Sino ang quinapopootan mo?

When may, mayrón, ualá or any other verbs are used as determining ones, the verbs determined by them are used in the passive.

I have to say.	Mayrón acóng sasabihin.
You will not have to ask.	Ualá cayóng ytatanong.

Students should take care to distinguish circumstantial members connected with the action from adverbs or adverbial expressions, on using the passive forms.

He did this purposely.	Sadiyang guinauá niyá i'ò.
He assaulted him furiously (with great fury.)	Dinalohong niyá siyá nang bóong bagsic.

Attention should be paid to the following illustrations.

Bring me these books upstairs.	Panhián mo acó nitòng maña libro.
He took the child upstairs.	Ypinanhiic niyá ang bata sa báhay.
I will meet you upstairs.	Papanhiquiná quitá sa báhay.
Will he look for the book which was missed?	¿Hahanapin niyá ang librong naualá?
Overtake my brother.	Habulin mo ang aquing capatir
Run after him and deliver this letter to him.	Habulan mo siyá nitòng súlat.
Whom did you inquire after?	¿Sinong ytinanong mo?
Whom do you inquire from?	¿Sino ang tinatanong mo?
I asked him whether he was her brother.	Ytinanong co sa caniyá cung bagá siyá,i, capatid niyá, or, tinanong co siyá etc.
To discover, to detect.	Tumoclás.

THIRTY FIFTH EXERCISE.

Was it your nephew that cut off the branch? It was not he who cut it off. Is it they who said I was imprisoned? It was my niece who said it. Was it the Italians who discovered America? No, it was not the Italians, it was the Spaniards that discovered it. Who ordered the criminal to be put to death? It was the king that ordered it. Was it not the judge who ordered your cousin to be released? It was not the judge, it was the captain. What are you reading? I am reading the book my friend lent me. Whom do you ask for pardon? I ask pardon from my teacher. Why do you not wish to eat? I don't eat because I cannot. What do you bring? I bring some fruit. Where have you taken it? I took it in the forest. Does the priest take chocolate every morning? He takes chocolate every morning after mass. What will Mary buy? She will buy bread and wine. Would it not be better if she would buy needles and stuff? She has no longer the money you gave her the other day. Why! is it so? Yes, indeed, I thought she had not yet made use of it. Which water shall I drink of? Drink of this water, for it is cool and clear. May I take some of this money? Take only twenty three dollars out of it. Whom are the children laughing at? They are laughing at that drunkard. Why do they laugh? They laugh because he staggers. Why do you walk so much? Because we are in a great hurry. Why did your son wound this dog? He wounded him because he bit him. Who loves your sister? Peter loves her. Who did this? The man that came last Sunday did it. Who is running? The girl that tore your stocking is running. Shall I call for her? Yes, call for her. What has the merchant to tell me? He has to tell you to pay your debt. How much do I owe him? You owe him thirty-six dollars. Who else came to inquire after me? The Chinese tradesman came to claim payment for the shoes. What did you say to him? I told him you had no money to pay with. Why does he whip his servant? Because he stole a ring from him. Did he not reward him some days ago? Yes, he rewarded him for his honesty. Why does not your friend come for you at home? He fears the dog. Why are you not willing to receive this money? Because it is not good.

THIRTY SIXTH LESSON.
YCATLONG POUO,T, ANIM NA PAGARAL.

MODIFICATIVE VERBALIZING PARTICLES.

MAN=PAN.

The Tagalog language abounds in verbal prefixed particles modifying the original range of signification of the root as to the manner, intension and purpose of the action, in a way generally requiring long round-about forms of expression in other languages. These particles are sometimes essential to the verb, that is to say, express the primary action, but, most commonly, they stand for verb attributes, which should otherwise have been employed, thus imparting a wonderful conciseness to the speech.

Man, (active) pan, (passive) is one of the principal. It is generally applied to habitual actions and to those which, although may be indifferently or occasionally performed, have acquired a character of fixedness by habit, trade or exercise.

That this sense of habitude may be imparted, it is, however, necessary that the original signification of the verb with um or mag, be not changed by man. Thus, umasáua, means "to enter into marriage" (referring to the bridegroom); magasáua, "to marry" (both parties); but mañgasáua, "to pay addresses" in the simplest sense this can be done. The same may be said of actions not admitting of habit or instrument for their performance, and thus, mañganac, "to lie in," "to bring forth"; does not express frequency.

Verbal roots the first letter of which is b or p and which, according to their signification, should have been conjugated by um, are pluralized or intensified by man. Bumili, "to buy"; mamili, "to buy many things"; pumuti, "to whiten"; manuti, "to grow rapidly or very white".

The interchangeability of letters which in other conjugations is somewhat vague and sometimes optional, has in this of man more consistency. The n of man or pan is dropped before roots beginning with b, p, s, t; and replaced by ñg in those beginning with a vowel. In roots beginning by c-q, both the latter and the n of the particle are dropped and replaced by ñg. B and p are changed into m; s, t and sometimes d, into n.

The manner of conjugating roots with this particle does not deviate from the regular one in other respects.

The student should conjugate by man the following roots:

Share,	to distribute.	Bahagui,	mamahagui.
Care,	to care for.	Bahala,	mamahala.
House,	to live in a house.	Báhay,	mamáhay.
	(as opposed to live in the woods.)
Town.	to live in town.	Bayan,	mamayan.
Pale,	to grow pale.	Putlá.	mamutlá.

(1). The root, in this tense, inserts n for the sake of euphony.

Eel,	to fish eels.	Palós,	mamalós.
Frog,	to fish frogs.	Palacá,	mamalacá.
Cut,	to cut up.	Pútul,	mamótol.
Letter,	to write professionally.	Súlat,	manúlat.
Snare,	to lay snares for.	Silo,	manilo.
Destroyed,	to go about destroying.	Sira,	manira.
Claim for payment,	to collect money.	Sifngil,	manifngil.
Winning, conquering;	to win, to overpower.	Panalo,	manalo.
Blasphemy,	to blaspheme.	Tufngáyao,	manufngáyao.
Apron,	to wear an apron.	Tapis,	manapis.
Prayer,	to pray for.	Dalañgin,	manalañgin.
Teaching,	to preach.	Aral,	mañgáral.
Light,	to fish with a torch.	Ylao;	mañglao.
First, prior;	to precede, to go before.	Onà,	mañgonà.
Shunning,	to flee.	Ylag,	mañgilag.
Biting,	to go round biting.	Cagat,	mañgagat.
Clinging,	to cling to here and there.	Cápit,	mañgápit.
Eating,	to devour.	Cáin,	mañgáin.

Man is fit to express the seasonable production of plants.

To blossom, to bloom.	Mamulac-lac. (from bulac-lac).
To fructify, to bear fruit.	Mamuñga. (from boñga).
To put forth or gather in the shoots of bamboo-trees.	Manlabong.

It expresses habit, frequency of acts or multitude of agents in some actions, the first degree of which is expressed by um or mag.

To cut off with the hand.	Pumuti, cumitil.
To gather flowers.	Mamuti, mañgitil.
To spin.	Sumúlid.
To spin, to be spinner.	Manúlid.
To give, to lavish.	Magbigáy, mamigáy.

But the sense with those actions which may be mercenary is one of engagement or trade. Thus, for instance.

To sew.	Tumahí.
To sew a great deal.	Magtahí.
But, to engage in tailoring, to earn a living by sewing.	Manahí.
To write, (the action looked upon as to the agent.)	Sumúlat.
To write something.	Magsúlat.
But to earn one's livelihood by writing.	Manúlat.

Roots of instruments, tools or arms are conjugated by man to indicate that they are worn or made use of to some purpose.

Sword.	Sandatá.
To wear side-arms.	Manandatá.
Axe, to wear an axe.	Palacol, mamalacol.
Chopping knife, to wield it.	Tabac, manabac.
Dagger, to wear a dagger.	Yua, mañgíua.
Life, to live.	Búhay, mamúhay.

Common nouns of places are conjugated by man to indicate habitation or residence therein.

Mount, hill; to settle on a mountain.	Bondoc, mamondoc.
Town, to live in town.	Bayan, mamayan.
Sea, to lead a sea-faring life.	Dagat, manágat.

Roots of wearing garments if conjugated by man, indicate the wearing thereof. The difference in sense between the conjugating of the same by mag and man, is that the former expresses the occasional and the latter the customary wearing.

Shirt, to wear a shirt.	Baro, mamaro.
Apron, to wear an apron.	Tapis, manapis.
Hat, to wear a hat.	Sambalilo, manambalilo.

The extractive industry of forestry and fishing products being so widely spread throughout the Islands, roots indicative of any such products may be conjugated by man to denote the engaging in the working as a business.

Wood, to exercise the wood-monger's trade.	} Cáhoy, mañáhoy.
Rattan, to gather rattans.
Deer, to chase deer.	Ouáy, mañgouáy.
Fish, to be a fisherman.	Usá, mañgusá.
Oyster, to gather oysters.	Ysdá, mañgisdá.
Shell, mother of pearl shell; to pick up, to gather shells.	} Talabá, manalabá. Capis, mañgapis.

The instrument made use of in fishing, chasing or getting at such products may likewise be conjugated by man.

Fishing-rod, to be a rod fisherman.	Bíuas, mamíuas.
Hook, to use hooks in fishing.	Binuit, maminuit.
Net, to fish with a net.	Lambat, manlambat.
Gun, fowling-piece; to hunt with a gun.	Baril, mamaril.

But distinction should be drawn between these instruments conjugated by man, and the same conjugated by um. Um, looks forward to the action or use, man, to the work or effect. Thus, ilao, "light;" umilao, "to make use of a light;" that is, to say, "to light;" mañjilao, "to get a living by employing a light". (To fish, using a torch).

Man, conjugation is a very important one and the pupil is recommended to acquaint himself with it as thoroughly as possible. Into it, many a root of um and mag conjugations, if beginning with b, p, t, s, c, or a vowel, come to be resolved. Bigáy, mamiyáy; pásoc, mamásoc; tocop, manócop; sola, manola; calácal, mañaglálcal etc.

Does his friend hunt boars with a gun? No, he used to hunt boars with dogs.

THIRTY SEVENTH LESSON.
YCATLONG POUO,T, PITONG PAGARAL.

MODIFICATIVE VERBALIZING PARTICLES.

CA.
MACA—
MA.

On encountering dissyllabic and trisyllabic verbal particles, the student should be reminded of the general rule regarding the repeating of the second or third syllable of the particle instead of the first of the root, for the present and future tenses. In applying this rule to maca, we must say that here, as elsewhere, the rule is somewhat arbitrary, and that the custom prevails in some parts of the Islands of repeating ca, while the first syllable of the root is repeated in others. The latter form is to be preferred, especially in those roots which admit of ca in the passive.

Maca, applied to roots admitting of um or mag conjugations verbalizes in a potential sense, and in a causative one, if applied to those involuntary actions that are conjugated by ma, that is to say, according to maca being made use of for actions or affections. The pluperfect and perfect future tenses of maca have very little use and cannot, of course, be formed in the suppletory way of respectively prefixing naca and maca, without entailing confusion with the past indefinite tense and the imperative. Thus, these latter with the completive particle na after them are used to express the respective perfect tenses.

THE PASSIVE.

The poteneial sense of maca, admits of the three passives; the causative sense only admits of y passive. The passive particle correspond-

(1) Nacacalácad. nacacahapis; macacalácad. macacahapis are also in use.
(2) Speaking properly, lácad, in the potential sense, lacks imperative.

ing to the potential sense is ma, the one corresponding to the causative sense, is ca; (yca, since such verbs admit but of y passive). In the passive of in, this particle is dropped in all the tenses, which is a peculiarity of maca conjugation, only ma or na remaining as seen hereafter.

Verbal.

The action of being able to walk at. Ang malacaran.

The student should conjugate the following verbs by maca, both in the active and in the various forms of passive.

To make merry, to gladden, to cheer.	Macatóua.
To make melancholy.	Macalumbáy.
To frighten, to intimidate.	Macatácot.
To harm, to do ill.	Macasamá.
To cause pain, to grieve.	Macapañganyaya.
To strengthen, to cause health.	Macagaling, macalacás.
To be able to do or to make.	Macagauá.
To terrify.	Macapañgilabot.
To beautify.	Macagandá.
To cause the disgust of satiety.	Macabusog.
To hinder, to cumber.	Macagambala.
To mitigate grief.	Macaguinhauá.

Maca may be recombined with any other conjugation admitting of potentiality by being prefixed to the passive particle of any such conjugation. Care should be taken in employing the proper particle required by the kind of action, so as to make the proper discrimination of sense.

To be able to go out.	Macalabás.
" " " " take out.	Macapaglabás.
" " " " go away.	Macaalís.
" " " " take away.	Macapagalís.
" " " " teach.	Macaáral.
" " " " study.	Macapagáral.
" " " " preach.	Macapañgáral.

Any such particle indicative of the primary sense should be preserved in the passive.

I could get out from Manila. Ang Maynila, ang nalabasan co.
I could take out from the church. Napaglabasan co ang simbahan.

In actions, maca, refers more to a material or physical than to a moral capability or permissive power. The latter is better expressed by mangyari or súcat, although maca is also sometimes used.

Meat may not be eaten on fast-days.	} Sa mañga viernes nang cuaresma,i, di súcat cumáin nang lamangcati. Súcat siyáng big-ián. ¿Mangyayari bagá?.
It may be given to him, he may be trusted with it.
Might it be?

The potential active and passives of maca may be used indiscriminately without paying any attention as to whether there are objects or not in the sentence, or whether they are or are not circumscribed in sense.

I can write this book.	} Nacacasúlat acó nitóng libro. Ytóng libro,i, nasusúlat co. Nacacaya acó, nacaya co.
I could.

Maca is fit to express such actions as are inherent in the powers of mind or the corporal senses, to indicate the capability they are endowed with to perform such acts as are peculiar to them, without the will taking any part therein. Thus.

To understand, that is to say, to apply the power of will to understanding.	}	Tumalastás.
To comprehend.		Magtalastás.
But, to understand, to have the understanding free.	}	Macatalastás.
To hear purposely, to listen.		Dumiñgig.
To hear a good deal or many things.		Magdiñgig.
But to hear, to have the hearing free.		Macariñgig.

In the same sense:

To think.	Macaísip.
To remember.	Macaalaalâ.
To make out.	Macatanto.
To feel.	Macaramdam.
To see.	Macaquita.
To smell.	Macaamóy.
To taste.	Macalásap.
To touch.	Macaramâ, or, macadamâ.
To say, to pronounce.	Macauica.
To divert.	Macalibang.
To learn.	Macapagáral.
To explain.	Macasaysáy, macasalaysáy.
To show, to declare.	Macaháyag.
To perceive, to know how, to know as a fact.	}	Macaálay.
To conceive.		Macamálay.

If an act admitting of volition is conjugated by mara, the same sense of involuntariness is imparted as if ma were used.

On my loitering about, I got into my uncle's inclosure. (without my being aware of it)	}	Acó,i, nalilígao ay nacapásoc acó sa bacoran nang aquing amaín.
I was reading when I fell asleep.		Sa aquing pagbasà,i, nacaatólog acó.

In verbs denoting the initiative on the part of the subject towards some end, the tendency is expressed in the regular way; but the attainment is expressed by maca.

To look for. To find.	}	Humánap. Macahánap.
To ask for. To obtain.		Cumita. Macaquita.
To run for. To overtake.		Humiñgi. Macahiñgi.
		Humábol. Macahábol.

The passive of an serves to denote the same sense of being overtaken by unconscious agents.

Night came down upon us before we arrived at Manila.	}	Nagabihan camí bagò dumating sa Maynila.
The army were surprised on their way by the rain.		Naolanán ang hocbó sa dúan.

Maca is very much made use of by natives in a potential elusive sense to indicate something which they are ashamed to declare or vouch for.

In confessing what may bring punishment upon them or what may hurt the feelings of the person they are speaking to, they, generally, employ maca as an insinuation for any such acts as they are, however, well assured of.

Have you ever purloined anything?	¿Ungmomit ca bagá nang anomán?
I have sometimes purloined. (I may have purloined.)	Marahil nacaomít acó.
Did you see me kill him?	¿Naquita mo acóng pumatáy sa caniyá?
I saw.	Nacaquita acó, naquita co.

CONSTRUCTION.

Active sentences the verb of which obtains in maca conjugation are constructed in the regular way, with the agent in the nominative case and the object in the accusative, in whatever sense the verb may be used; but the object of a verb in the causative sense should always be preceded by sa and not by nang. Passive sentences in which maca is used in the potential sense also follow the general rule of construction; the agent in the possessive case, and the patient in the nominative; but the agent should be put in the nominative and the patient or object, in the possessive, for passive sentences where maca is used in the causative sense.

He can write the letters.	{ Nacacasúlat siyá nang mañga súlat.
	{ Nasusúlat niyá ang mañga súlat.
Chastity imparts health to (strengthens) the body.	{ Ang calinisa, i, nacagagaling sa cataouán. Yquinagagaling nang cataouán ang calinisan.

THIRTY SEVENTH EXERCISE.

Why can you not walk? I cannot walk, because I am lame. What saddens her? Her mother's death saddened her. With whom will he be glad? He will be glad with his children. What caused your father's melancholy? Sea-faring life frightens him. What made you sick last week? Fruit injured me. And what made you recover? Some medicines cured me. Can he do that? He cannot do that. What terrifies children? Thunder terrifies children. What beautifies girls? Modesty beautifies girls. What causes satiety? Sweet potatoes cause satiety. What would hinder him? His office hinders him. Who mitigated your grief? My wife mitigated my grief. Will he be able to go out now? He cannot go out now, but he will go away to-morrow. Have you been able to take out the stone? I could not take out the stone. Can you not teach Tagalog? No, I cannot, but I can learn it. Can he preach to the people? He is not a priest, so he cannot preach. May I (am I permitted) take the book? You may take it. Do you understand me? I don't understand you. Do you comprehend what I say? I do. Does he hear the roaring of the wind? He does not, he is deaf. Can you think upon it? I cannot think, but I can remember. Can he make out the meaning of this word? He can feel and see; but he cannot make out the meaning. Could he smell the fragrance of flowers? He could before, but he cannot now even perceive objects by touching nor liquors by taste. Will he be able to pronounce? He will not be able to pronounce, for he stutters somewhat. Can they explain the case? They can lay it before the Judge. Do they know how to read? They do. What do you do here on the beach? I arrived here without my being aware of it. Has the servant looked for the key? Yes, but he could not come across with it. Has your sister asked our neighbour for flowers? No, because she knows she will not be given them. What did the boy do? He ran for Frank and he overtook him. When shall we depart? Start early in the morning that you may not be harmed by sunshine. And if night come upon us in the way? Go on, for you will have the benefit of enjoying moonlight; but take care not to be surprised by the rain.

THIRTY EIGHTH LESSON.
YCATLONG POUO,T, UALONG PAGARAL.

MODIFICATIVE VERBALIZING PARTICLES.

MAGPA=PA.

Magpa, commonly verbalizes chiefly in a factitive sense. It being disyllabic in structure, pa, the last syllable of it, is repeated to form the simple present and future tenses. The passive particle for magpa is pa (sometimes pagpa, papag, according to the verb requiring um or mag in its primary or secondary sense.). Pa, being monosyllabic, the first syllable of the root and not that of the particle should be repeated in the proper tenses of the passive. Care should be taken to introduce the passive particle required by the verb in its primary sense, by inserting it before or after (generally after) pa, the passive particle of this conjugation, in the pluperfect and future perfect tenses of the active and passives, and the other tenses of the latter requiring it for distinguishing the sense.

The two following examples of conjugation have been selected to make this discrimination more noticeable.

learn from.

The student should conjugate the following verbs by magpa in the active and in all the forms of the passive.

To enact, to order to institute.	Magpahalal.
To create, to order to bring forward.	Magpalalang.
To order to do or make.	Magpagauá.
To order to go or come upstairs.	Magpapanhic.
To order to have something upstairs.	Magpapagpanhic.
To order to go or come downstairs.	Magpapanáog.
To order to get something downstairs.	Magpapagpanáog.
To be able to order to get into.	Macapagpapásoc. (1).
To order to plant.	Magpatanim.
" " " write.	Magpasúlat.
" " " bolt.	Magpasusi.
" " " sew.	Magpatahi.

Magpa in the foregoing instances refers to actions to be executed by a person other than the subject. If the action is active and such as to be suffered by the subject, magpa, means to allow one's self to suffer willingly, or to let one's self be acted upon by the acts of others.

(1) Potential and factitive senses combined: maca is conjugated, and pa is repeated in the present and simple future tenses.

To allow one's self to be cheated.	Magparaya.
" " " " " " touched.	Magpahipo.
" " " " " " whipped.	Magpahampás.
" " " " " " slapped.	Magpatampal.
" " " " " " crucified.	Magpaparipá.
" " " " " " punished.	Magpaparúsá.
" " " " " " combed.	Magpasucláy.
" " " " " " belied.	Magpasoat.

If magpa is applied to a root denoting a physical state got at from another contrary previous one by a slow self-working process, the action of the subject either to promote or not to interfere with the transition is meant.

To allow to become cool, to make cool by exposure.	} Magpalamig.
To allow to grow rotten, to allow rot-tenness to go on.
To allow to get dried, to put to dry.	Magpatuyó.
To allow to fall into decay.	Magpaguibá.

Attention should be paid to what is said either previously or subsequently to discriminate the sense of, "to order to demolish" from that of "to allow to fall into decay".

When the same effect is to be got at through the influence of an external agent, the latter may be conjugated by magpa and the purposed act of the subject to profit by such influence is indicated.

To expose to sunshine.	Magpaaráo. (1)
" " " the wind.	Magpahafgin.
" " " rainfall.	Magpaolán.

This is only with regard to the effect sought for in the performance of such actions by an agent incapable or producing the working power; but if the same are looked upon with regard to the causer, as God or any Power to which they may be attributed, the sense is of causality.

To cause the Sun to shine.	Magpaárao.
To cause the billows to rise.	Magpaalon.
To thunder. (looked upon as to the power which produces it).	} Magpacolog.
To lighten. (do do).
It is God who causes thunderbolts to fall down, and the trees to bloom and bear fruit.	Magpaquidlat.
	} Ang Dios, ang nagpapalintic, nagpapulae-lac at ang nagpapaboñga naman sa mañga cáhoy.

If not the effect, but the time of such atmospherical events is considered, magpa indicates refraining on the part of the subject until such emergencies are over. Care should be taken to make the sense clear by some other complete or discriminative word with those verbs to which magpa imparts different significations.

To wait until rain is over, to wait for the rain to cease.	} Magpatila.
To wait until dawn breaks.
" " " the day or sun grows less hot.	} Magpaomaga.
To wait until the sun rises.
To allow the water to be cooled.	Magpalamig nang árao.
	Magpasítang.
	Magpalamig nang túbig.

(1) The word is made grave to distinguish this sense of that of "to wait until the sun rises."

Magpa is fit to express such acts on the part of the subject as may redound to the benefit of others and which can be resolved into the different ways of giving with roots having an active sense in what regards the agent.

To impart sight, to cure blindness.	Magpaquita.
To feed.	Magpacáin.
To quench, to provide drinks.	Magpainom.
To shelter, to afford a shelter.	Magpatulóy.
To lend money (without reference to reluctance or readiness).	Magótang.
To lend money. (willingly).	Magpaótang.
To clothe, to provide clothing for somebody.	Magparamit.
To invest money on interest.	Magpatubò. (from tubò , "to grow").
To send, to forward.	Magpadalà.

But if the root has a passive force, the sense is one of exaction or asking for.

Alms.	Limós. (corr. from Sp. word limosna).
Pledge.	Sanlá.
Tribute. (capitation tax).	Bouís.
To give alms.	Maglimos.
To ask for alms, to beg.	Magpalimós.
To ask for pledge.	Magpasanlá.
To pay tribute.	Bumouís.
To collect, to exact tribute.	Magpabouís.

It should also be noticed that if magpa is made use of by a person inferior in rank to that addressed, the sense is reversed. Thus, magpa-gauá ca niyán sa iyóng amá, magpaúlán ca sa Dios, do not mean respectively, "order your father to do that", "make God to send down some rain", but, "crave your father to do that"; "pray God for rain", and so forth in similar cases.

Every student will easily make out the difference in meaning between "to confess to the priest" and "to confess by the priest". Any such actions having a passive sense as to the performer, are conjugated by magpa.

To hear confessions.	Magpacumpisal.
To confess to the priest.	Magcumpisal.
To ask for pardon, to haggle, to ask for a reduction of price.	Tumáuar.
To grant a reduction of price.	Magtáuar.
To grant pardon, to pardon.	Magpatáuar.

Magpa is therefore a particle forming a certain kind of deponent verbs. (1).

To get shaved.	Magpaahit.
To have one's shoes shined.	Magpalinis nang sapin.
To get one's hair cut.	Magpagupit.

To say, to recite something by many or many times as in prayers, may be expressed by magpa.

Say (plural) amen and amen.	Magpaamén cayó.
-----------------------------	-----------------

Through a looseness of rules which prevails everywhere in Tagalog, magpa may be made to mean conscious acting of the subject upon himself.

(1). We preserve to the word deponent the sense it has in Latin, where it means a verb having an active meaning with a passive form or vice-versa.

To embellish one's self.	Magpagandà.
To deck one's self.	Magpabut.
To elate, to draw credit or praise upon one's self.	Magpapuri.

A sense of involuntariness or the natural effect of inanimate agents, is expressed, in this conjugation, by dropping the g of magpa.

Smoke sweeps upwards.	Napapaitáas ang asò.
Water flows downwards.	Napapaibabá ang túbig.
Vapors of the soil rise in the atmosphere.	Ang mañga siñgáo nang lupa napapasaimpapauid.
Rivers flow into the sea.	{ Napapasadágat ang agus nang mañga flog.
My heart throbs unto (is drawn towards) Thee my Lord.	Ang aquin puso, napapasainyò, Pañginòon cong Dios.

Verbs to which magpa does not impart an ordering sense may be made to express it by repeating pa.

God commands to give alms to the poor.	Ang Dios ay nagpapalimos sa mañga duchá.
--	--

But it is clearer to say: Ang Dios ay nagoòtos maglimos sa mañga duc-há.

THIRTY EIGHTH EXERCISE.

Did you order the children upstairs? I did. Do you order the servants to bring up some firewood? I do. What does George's father order him to do? He orders him to continue studing. Why do you not order your son to learn? I don't order him to learn, because he is sick. Does your brother-in-law order his servants to attend mass every holy-day? He does. Why did you not wait till the rain ceased? I waited till the sun rose and did not start till the sun grew less hot. Why do you allow the plants to grow rotten? I don't allow them to become rotten, but, on the contrary, I expose them to the wind and sunshine. Is he waiting till the rain ceases? Yes. Why does he not wait until the sun rises? Because he is in a hurry. What did Peter order his servant to do? He said to him, don't let the flowers fade. (get dry). Why doest not thou allow the water to cool? Because it is already cooled. Why does your sister allow herself to be cheated? Because she is very shy. Who causes the sun and the moon to shine? God. What else does He cause to happen? He causes the rain to fall down, the lightning to flash, the thunder to crack, and the billows to rise. Does He cause too the trees to bloom and to bear fruit? He does. From whom did that beggar ask for alms? He begs from my aunt. Why did not the rich man feed those people? He said to his servant, feed them. Shall I quench their thirst? Yes, give them wine to drink. Who is that man over there asking for alms? He is a beggar whom I sheltered last night. Does he collect plenty of alms? No, Sir, it is not sufficient for his living. Why do you not lend him money? Because I have none, as I invested my money at interest (loaned). Why did not Anthony provide clothing for his children? Because he has nothing to buy clothes with. Where shall I put water to cool? Put water to cool in this shed. Which priest received your confession? Father Jonh heard my confession. Why does that girl embellish herself? Because she wishes to be praised. In what direction does water flow? Water flows downwards. What penance did the priest impose you? The penance he inflicted me was to fast. Did you provide the poultry with water? I did. What did you feed them with? I fed them with husk-rice. Did he order his son to rise? He did. Why do you not allow me to pass farther? I will not allow you to pass farther until you give me water to drink.

The student should conjugate by maqui actively and passively the following verbs:

To join officiously in the teaching of others.	} Maquiáral.
Do do do do do the studying do do	} Maquipagáral.
" " " " " " " playing " "	} Maquipaglaró.
To embark sneakingly, to sneak into a ship, to embark with others.	} Maquisacáy.
To meddle in conversation.	} Maquipagósap.
To join in weeping.	} Maquitafigis.
To join in rejoicing.	} Maquitóua, maquipagcatóua.
To pick a quarrel.	} Maquipagáuay.
To meddle in contention.	} Maquipagtaló.
To sneak into company.	} Maquisamá.
To participate, to claim a share in.	} Maquirámay.

Maqui may be made to mean sharing, resemblance in or to have a leaning for customs or manners, if applied to roots denoting qualities capable of being imitated.

To conform one's self to, to comply with customs.	} Maquiogali.
To adopt natives' manners.	} Maquitagalog.
To behave in a manlike way, to use to flirt or mix with male-people.	} Maquilalaqui.
To assume Spanish manners.	} Maquicastila.
To be a partisan of the American polity.	} Maquiamericano.
To resemble a beast.	} Maquiháyop.
To resemble a human being, to be (an animal) tamed as not to be afraid of persons.	} Maquitaud.
To be effeminate, to be of a lecherous disposition	} Maquibabaye.

The asking for small portions of victuals and cooking necessaries, such as are commonly exchanged freely in rural or village-life among neighbours, may be made by conjugating by maqui the root indicative of any such commodities.

To ask for a little cocoa-nut oil.	Maquilañgís.
" " " " " vinegar.	Maquisuca.
" " " " " grain of salt.	Maquiasín.
" " " " " small drink.	Maquiálac.
" " " " " handful of rice.	Maquibigás.
" " " " " particle of fire.	Maquiapúy.

A sense of intension is made in the conjugation of maqui by affixing an or han to the verb.

To hate bitterly, to detest.	Maquipagtaniman.
To meddle with others to jeer contentiously.	} Maquipagbiróan.
To meddle in the romping of others.	} Maquipaglaróan.
To interfere officiously in the conversation.	} Maquipagsalitáan.
To launch one's self into controversy, to dispute obstinately.	} Maquipagsagutan.

I have thanked for a red-hot coal.	{ Naquiapúy acó.
Do not detest thus your neighbour.	{ Houag cang maquipagtaniman sa cá-poua mo tauò.
Why does your nephew meddle in controversy with John?	{ ¿Báquit naquikipagsagutan ang iyóng pamangqing lalaqui cay Juan?.
Mary is a girl who behaves in a man-like way.	{ Naquiquilalaqui si María.

PARTICLES AND WORDS USED AS DIFFERENT PARTS OF SPEECH.

Reference has already been made to the pliable character of Tagalog words and how they may stand for different parts of speech. The independent particles too, have, most of them, an enlarged range of meaning and may sometimes stand for parts of speech other than those which they most commonly stand for. In this and other lessons to follow, the various meanings of those words most usual in common topics will be considered.

ANG.

The article and relative pronoun ang may stand, besides, for a sub-ordinate causative conjunction.

You did not pay any attention to (looked at) me, because I am poor.	{ Di mo acó liniñgon, ang acó,i, duc-há.
I cannot rise, for I am sick.	{ Hindí acó nacacabañgon or macabañgon, ang acó,i, may saquit.

AT.

A', the copulative conjunction may likewise stand in the same way for a causative one.

He could not come, because he had work.	{ Di siyá nacaparitó, at may abala siyá.
---	--

At=t comes after a causative or adversative conjunction as a completive ligament.

I cannot pay, because I have no money.	{ Hindí acó nacababáyad or macabáyad, sa pagca,t, ualá acóng salapí.
She is ugly, but she is judicious.	{ Siyá,i, páñgit, ñgoní,t, siyá,i, mabait.
All of them sang, but him.	{ Siláng lahat ay nagáuit, alintana,t, siyá,i, hindí.

THIRTY NINTH EXERCISE.

Why do you meddle to converse with old people? I meddle in their conversation because I am anxious to become wise. Why do you enjoin me not to meddle with women in jeering? I enjoined you that, because it is indecorous to meddle with women in romping. Why did he meddle in disputing with his neighbour? Because his neighbour meddles to inspect impertinently. Does your brother assume Spanish manners? No, he does not assume Spanish manners. What are you going to thank the neighbour for? I am going to thank him for a handful of rice. Whom do you ask it for? I ask it for my friend that is sick, and has nothing to eat. What did they thank for? I asked for a little wine. Whom have you thanked for it? I asked it from the sailor. Did I not say to you not to ask it from such a niggardly fellow? I asked some from him as there was no other. Is he esteemed? He was esteemed by his master when still young. How old is your son? He is hardly three years old; but my brother is about sixteen years and the infant one is already eight months. What did you give to those children? I gave them nothing yesterday, but I had already given them what you told me when you arrived. Will he give me that walking-stick? No, but he will give you the book you charged him with. Do you wish to sell that horse? Why!, are you willing to buy it? If it is cheap I will buy it. On which paper is he writing? He is writing on this paper. Is he going to call for the priest? No, he is going to call for the physician. What are those children doing there on the beach? They are playing. What will you ask for from your father when he arrives? That I be given money. Where are those women going? They are going to a very distant place. Did he pour wine into my cup? He did not pour wine, but he poured water into it. What are you doing? I am putting water into your tumbler that is very large. What are those men looking at? They examine the image of the Virgin. What is your friend studying? He is studying Latin. Where is he studying? In Manila. Is it difficult to learn Latin? It is. Why does not Peter salute you? As I am poor, nobody looks at me, were I rich I should be esteemed by everybody.

FORTIETH LESSON.

YCAAPAT NA POUONG PAGARAL.

MODIFICATIVE VERBALIZING PARTICLES.

PA=PA.

As a verbal particle pa, for active and passive, differs from magpa mainly in its being applied to form the verbs of motion. In other minor respects both particles differ in that pa refers more to the subject while magpa looks forward to the object. This similarity extends itself to the conjugation, for pa is prefixed by na in the present and past tenses.

The five adverbs of place, dinì, ditò, diyán, dóon, saán are conjugated by pa to mean "to come", "to go"; dinì, indicating a place more determinate than ditò; diyán, the place where the person addressed stands, and dóon, a place far away from both interlocutors, Saán, indicates motion to an unknown place and means "to move towards". Any other root indicative of place or resort may be conjugated by pa if motion thereunto is to be meant; but sa, although not absolutely necessary, should be inserted between the particle and the root.

Pa, being a monosyllabic particle, the first syllable of the root is to be repeated in the proper tenses of the conjugation. If, however, sa is inserted to conjugate a nominal root of place, sa and not the first syllable of the root should be repeated, passa being then considered as a true independent particle. As to the conjugation of the above four adverbs of place, the use has been to some extent established of repeating either the particle or the first syllable of the adverb, it being indifferent to say, papari'ò, pariri.ò, etc., although the latter form is more to be recommended.

CONJUGATIONS.

ACTIVE.

Infinitive.

To come here.	Paritò.
To go home.	Pasabáhay.
To crave help.	Patólong.

Present indefinite tense.

Come, -st, -s.	Naparirito. (napaparitò).
Go, -est, -es home.	Napasabáhay.
Crave, -st, -s help.	Napatotólong.

Present perfect and past indefinite tenses.

Came, -st; have, hast, has come.	Naparito.
Went, -est; have, hast, has gone home.	Napasabáhay.
Craved, -dst; have, hast, has craved help.	Napatólong.

Pluperfect tense.

Had, -dst come.	Nacaparitò, naparitó na.
" " gone home,	Nacapasabáhay, napasabáhay na.

" " " " " gone home.	Macapasabáhay, pasasabáhay na.
" " " " " craved help.	Macapatólong, patotólong na.

Imperative.

Come, let come.	Paritò.
Go home, " go home.	Pasabáhay.
Crave, " crave help.	Patólong.

Verbals.

The action of coming.	Ang pagparitò.
" " " going home.	" pagpasabáhay.
" " " craving help.	" pagpatólong.

THE PASSIVE.

Verbs of motion being intransitive do not admit of in passive, unless they be recompounded with some other particle imparting an active sense. Thus, that they may be conjugated in such passive, they must be combined with magpa in the ordering or bespeaking sense; as, paparitohin mo siyá, "order him to come here". In the instrumental or causal passive, ca, the proper particle for neuter verbs or involuntary actions in said passive, should be inserted between the sign and the verb, thus making yca, yquina, etc.

IN PASSIVE.

Infinitive.

To be ordered here.	Paparitohin.
" " " " home.	Papasabahayin. (1).
„ crave to be helped.	Patoloñgin.

Present indefinite tense.

Am, art, is, are ordered here.	Pinariritò. (pinapaparitò).
" " " " " home.	Pinapasabahay.
Crave, st, -s to be helped.	Pinatotolong.

Present perfect and past indefinite tenses.

Was, -st, were; have, hast, has been ordered here.	Pinaparitò.
" " " " " " home.	Pinapasabahay.
Craved, -dst; have, hast, has craved to be helped.	Pinatolong.

Pluperfect tense.

Had, -dst been ordered here.	Pinaparitò na. (:).
" " " " " home.	Pinapasabahay na.
„ " " „ craved to be helped.	Pinatolong na.

Future indefinite tense.

Shall, -lt, will, -lt be ordered here.	Papariritohin. (papaparitohin).
" " " " " " home.	Papasabahayin.
" " " „ „ crave to be helped.	Patotoloñgin.

Future perfect tense.

Shall -lt, will, -lt have been ordered here.	Papariritohin (papaparitohin na.)
" " " " " " " home.	Papasabahayin na.
" " " „ „ „ craved to be helped.	Patotoloñgin na.

(1) The form in the example is merely illustrative, as the passives of this root are very little made use of.

(2) This, and the future perfect tense are but rarely used. The form naparitò, is not admissible, as it will entail confusion with the active.

Imperative.

Be ordered, let . . . be ordered here. Paparitohin.
 " " " " " " home. Papasabahayin.
 Crave, let . . . crave to be helped. Patoloñgin.

Verbals.

The state of being ordered here. Ang pagpaparitò.

„ „ „ going home „	„ pasabahayan or papasabahayan.
„ „ „ providing help to be rendered by.	„ patoloñgan or papatoloñgan.

The y passive stands for the cause or reason; an, for the place or person in verbs of motion, and for the person to whom a service is rendered, in the others.

Why does he go to Manila?	¿Anóng yquinaparoróon niyá sa Maynila?
The paying of my tax is the reason of my going there.	¿Ang pagbayad nang aqing bouís, siyá ang yquinaparoróon co.
Where is he going?	¿Saán ang paroroonan niyá?
He is going to Cebú.	Ang Cebú ang paroroonan niyá.
Whom did you come to see here?	¿Sino bagá ang pinaritohan mo?
I came here to pay you a visit.	Pinaritohan quitá. (catá)
Whom does he order to render assistance to him?	¿Sino ang pinatotoñoñgan niyá?

The student should conjugate in the active and passives of pa, the following verbs:

To go there.	Pariyán.
To go yonder.	Paróon.
To come here.	Parini.
(Where?). to go.	¿Pasaán?
To repair to, to go towards.	Patofigó.
To go to church.	Pasasimbahan.
To go into the country, to go to the farm.	¿Pasabúquid.
To go to market.	Pasatianggui.
To go to the sea-shore.	Pasadágat.
To go to the mount.	Pasabundoc.
To ask for mercy.	Paáua.
„ „ „ protection.	Paampón.
„ „ „ support.	Pacopcop.
„ „ „ aid, succour.	Pasangalang.
„ „ „ defence.	Patangol.

The above-mentioned adverbs of place prefixed with pa may be considered as simple roots and conjugated by um.

To come here.	Pumaritó, pumarini.
To go there.	Pumariyán, pumaróon.
(Saán?) to go.	¿Pumasaán?.

The In passive in verbs of motion stands for the person ordered to repair to (some place).

Order my servant to come here.	Paparitohin mo ang aqing bata.
Did you say to him to repair there?	¿Pinaparóon mo siyá?

I did already. Pinaparóon co na siyá.
 Order him to go there. Papariyanín mo siyá.

Pa coincides with magpa in the acquiescing sense, but pa denotes more readiness on the part of the patient.

To ask to be kissed. Pahalic.
 " " " " touched. Pahipo.
 To consent to be beaten. Patalo.
 " " " " deceived. Parayá.

"To say", in any specific manner denoted by the root is conjugated by pa, but it does not indicate plurality as magpa does.

To say yes, to affirm, to consent in anything. Paóo.

To say, no, to deny. Padili, pahindí.
 To say not to be willing, to say refusal. Paayáo.
 To say, Jesus. Pajesús.
 To say, the deuce! Padiablo.

PARTICLES AND WORDS USED AS DIFFERENT PARTS OF SPEECH.

ANO.

The interrogative pronoun anò is used in several ways:
 As an interrogative conjunction of cause, followed by at.

Why did you not come in time? ¿Anò,t, di ca naparitò sa capanahonan?
 And why do you eat fruit? ¿At anò,t, cungmacáin ca nang bofiga?

Anò, stands for the admirative interjection "why"!, "what"!

What!, are you per chance a king? Anò.! ¿hari ca cayá?

The reply to the same when the tone of the question is one of surprise, may be made by anò preceded by ay.

Of course. (I am). Ay anò.

Anò is conjugable by um, mag, ma, etc., as, more or less, every word in Tagalog can be, the sense being that which the verbal particle with which conjugated imparts to the action that is inquired after.

What is your business here? ¿Nagaanò ca ditò?
 Well now, and what of that?. what is to be done? ¿Anhin bagá?
 What is he going to do there? Magaanó siyá dòn.?
 What are you being done upon? ¿Ynaaanò ca?
 Nothing can be done to you. Hindí ca maaanó.

Anò, repeated means "at random" "unaccounted for" and is used in the negative.

This work is not accounted for. Ualáng anò anò ang gauáng itò.
 He slapped me without the least reason. Tinampal acó niya ualáng anò anò.

Idioms and phrases.

Well then.....	¿Anò bagá?.
What else?	¿Anò pa?.
How can it be?	¿Di anò pa?.
What matters?	¿Di anhin?.
For he says that.....	Di anhin dáo na.....
They say, it is said:	Di umanò.

FORTY FIRST LESSON.
YCAAPAT NA POUO,T, ISANG PAGARAL.

MODIFICATIVE VERBALIZING PARTICLES.

MAGCA=PA GCA.

Magca, in the active; pagca, in the passive, as a verbal particle, verbalizes intransitively, imparting a sense of plenty in what generally comes out or is produced naturally and drops off of itself without the designed interference of any active or conscious agent. It points out a previous condition of lack or scarcity which is resolved into the opposite denoted by magca. It differs from man in that the latter lays stress on the action, while magca denotes state, without reference to how it has been brought about, this being the reason for its intransitiveness and for its not admitting of in passive. Thus, mamoñga, means the action of fructifying; while magcaboñga, means to be laden with fruit. Speaking properly, magca is but mag and the passive particle of ma, ca. Ca, the last syllable of the particle, should be repeated in the proper tenses of the conjugation.

Y passive, in this conjugation, stands for the reason or cause; an, for the place or person, according to the nature of the action.

What he inherited from his uncle is the reason of his being wealthy.	Ang ypinagcacaróon niya ay ang pamana sa caniyá nang amáin niya.
I own a great deal of property in Cavite.	Ang Cavite, ang pinagcacaróonan co.
He owes a great deal to his father-in-law.	Pinagcacautañgan niya ang caniyang bianáng lalaqui.

The student should conjugate by magca in the active and passives the following verbs:

To be of judgment, to arrive at the age of reason.	Magcaisip, magcabait.
To bear fruit.	Magcabuñga.
To carry illness about one's self.	Magcasaquit.

To rage. (a plague.)	Magcasálot.
To rage (small-pox)	Magcabolótong.
To forbid.	Magcacasala.
To sin.	Magcasasala.

Magca, also means plurality or universality in the working of emergencies by which many are affected, although this universal sense is better made by repeating ca and rendering the root acute in accentuation.

To prevail, to spread about. (famine)	Magcacagotom.
To spread about. (fire)	Magcacasonog.
To be blowing a hurricane.	Magcacabaguió.
To be engaged in public rejoicings.	Magcacatoui, magcacapiesta.
To be engaged in revolution.	Magcacagoló.

Fortuitous meeting or assemblage of many may be expressed by magca.

To meet (many, accidentally).	Magcasalubong.
To assemble, to gather together.	Magcatipon.
To assemble in company.	Magcasamá.
To coincide.	Magcaayon.
To be many engaged in quarrelling.	Magcaúuay.

Sometimes magca and the repetition of the root imparts a sense of completeness in intransitive actions.

To break off into very small bits.	Magcalansag-lansag.
To be torn away in rags.	Magcauindang-uindang.
To be in state of complete destruction.	Magcasirasirá.
My son has already entered the age of reason.	} Nagcacaisip na ang anac co.

PARTICLES AND WORDS USED AS DIFFERENT PARTS OF SPEECH.

BAGAY.

Bágay, as a noun, means "thing", "matter", "subject", "gait".

Something, some object.	Ysàng bágay.
What is the matter, subject?	¿Anò bagá ang bágay?
What is his appearance, American or native?	} ¿Anòng bágay or anyó niyá, americano ó tagalog?.

(1) The pupil should not lose sight of the fact that the root is that part of the word which remains after taking away the particle or particles entering to compose it. Thus, uban means "gray-hair."

Bágay, as a verb, means "to equal", "to suit", "to make ready".

The penalty will be proportioned to the offence.	Pagbabagayan nang hírap or parusá ang casalanan.
Is it becoming for a girl to walk about the streets?	{ Nababágay bagá sa isáng dalaga ang paglúcad (pagligáo) sa mañga lansañigan?
Make the children ready for the ball.	{ Magbágay nang mañga batang mag-sasayáo.

lize those two shirts? I have no scissors to equalize them. Did you make ready the tools for the making of the table? Not yet. Where are the new silk handkerchiefs? They are in the chest. Have you a new master? No, we have a new priest. Have you handseled the suit of clothes? I have. Are you not willing to appear before the priest? No, for I am afraid. Why does your cousin spit at his brother? Because he was first spitten upon. Who will remember me? Your mother will remember you. What has your father planted there? He has planted banana-trees. What is he going to put into the room? He is putting nothing into the room, he is putting water into my glass. Why do they not draw nearer that candle burning away? Because they have no stools to sit upon. Do you consider the practice of virtue a heavy thing? I don't consider it heavy, I remember the eternal fire. What will he do to me? He will do nothing to you. What was done to you? Nothing was done to me. Who is saying mass? Our priest. Why does your femae-cousin put on an upper petticoat? She does not put on an upper petticoat, she wears an apron. Will you smoke? Thanks, I don't smoke. Why does your servant feign to be sick? He feigns to be ill to avoid punishment. What was the reason for your neighbours quarreling? Gambling. Where did they quarrel? This house was their quarreling place.

FORTY SECOND LESSON.
YCAPAT NA POUO,T, DALAUANG PAGARAL.

MODIFICATIVE VERBALIZING PARTICLES.

MAGUIN—PAGUIN.

Maguin or maguing, active; paguin or paguing, passive, as a verbal particle means conversion into the thing or quality denoted by the root it is applied to. The transformation of one quality into another by slow gradual process of assimilation is expressed by um; but maguin denotes conversion off hand of one thing or quality into another, thus differing from um and ma or na. The last syllable, that is to say, gui (since guin is three-lettered) (1) should be repeated in present and future tenses.

ROOT.

Fair, just, deserving.

Dápat.

PARADIGM.

To become worthy.

Present indefinite tense.

Become, -st, -s worthy.

Naguiguindápat.

Present perfect and past indefinite tenses.

Became, -st; have, hast, has become worthy. Naguindápat.

(1). U, in this case, is not reckoned as a letter.

Pluperfect tense.

Had, -dst become worthy. Nacapaguindápat, naguindápat na.

Future indefinite tense.

Shall, -lt. will, -lt become worthy. Maguiguindápat.

Future perfect tense.

Shall, -lt, will, -lt have become worthy. Macapaguindápat, maguiguindápat na.

Imperative.

Become, let . . . become worthy. Maguindápat.

Verbal.

The action of becoming worthy. Ang paguiguindápat.

IN PASSIVE.

That verbs with maguin may admit of in passive, they should be recompounded with magpa which makes them active. The object being verbalized which is justly what would require it, is the reason for this particle lacking this passive.

Infinitive.

To be enabled to become worthy. Papaguindapatin.

Present indefinite tense.

Am, art, is, are enabled to become worthy. Pinapaguiguindápat.

Present perfect and past indefinite tenses.

Was, -st, were; have, hast, has been enabled to become worthy. Pinapaguindápat.

Verbal.

The action of becoming worthy on account of. Ang ypaguiguindápat.

As maguin denotes a state, it admits of ca in the passive of y: thus, it may be said: yquinapaguiguindápat, yquinapaguindápat, ycapaguiguindápat, ycapaguindápat, which emphasizes more the causative sense.

AN PASSIVE.Infinitive.

To become worthy at or in. Paguindapatan.

Verbal.

The action of becoming worthy at or in. Ang paguiguindapatan.

The student should conjugate by maguin in the active and passives, the following verbs.

To be converted into wine, to convert into wine.	} Maguingálac. Maguingсуca. Maguingapdo. Maguingháyop. Maguingbanal. Maguingmarámot. Maguingbifíngi. Maguingpipi. Maguingbulag. Maguingtauò.
Do do do do vinegar.
" " " " gall.
" " " " a beast.
To turn out a virtuous fellow.
" " " " miser.
To become deaf.
" " mute.
" " blind.
To be converted to manhood, to take corporeal form or human attributes.

Y passive stands in this conjugation for the reason or cause; an, for the place; although they are little in use. Attention should be paid to the following illustrations showing the use of these passives.

His wisdom and judgment made him worthy to fill the office.	} Ang carunufigan,t, ang cabaitan ni-yà,i, siyang ypinaguindápat niyang magcaróon nang catungculan.
My God, enable me to become worthy of attaining eternal life.
The Son of God assumed human attributes for the sake of redeeming mankind.	} Ang pagsácop sa tauò, ang siyang yquinapaguintauò nang anac nang Dios.
Nazareth was the place where Jesus Christ grew into a man.
It was in Manila where he was ordained a priest,	} Ang Maynila ang pinaguinparían niyà.

The sense of conversion denoted by maguin may entail volition on the part of the subject with the possessive pronouns.

I will be yours, I will become your slave.	}	Maguiguing-iyò acó.
You will be mine.		Maguiguingaquin ca.

Maguin, imparts sometimes a sense of doubt, especially with numeral adjectives.

What will my fate be?	¿Anò cayá ang maguiguingpálad co?
Will it be true?	¿Maguiguingtotoò bagá?.
After about six months.	Cun maguing ánim na bouan.
To be owing to.	Maguindahilán.
About how many will they be?	¿Maguiguing-ilán silá?.
They may be about ten.	Maguiguinsampóuo.

Maguin is also apt to express the copula on account of the close relation in signification existing between "to be" and "to become". Thus, it may properly be said; ?Naguiguingalila ca sa Pare?. "Are you the priest's servant?"

It was Abraham's son, Isaac; and it was Isaac's son, Jacob; and it was Jacob's son, Juda and his brothers.	Naging anac ni Abrabam, si Isaac; at naging anac ni Isaac, si Jacob; at naging anac ni Jacob, si Judá at ang caniyang mañga capatid.
--	---

PARTICLES AND WORDS USED AS DIFFERENT PARTS OF SPEECH.

CAYA.

Cayá, as noun, means any instrument used for hunting or fishing, and also stands for the game or for what has been caught, but in this sense it is becoming obsolete.

Bows, muskets, and night strollers are laid hands upon by constables.	}	Ang bósog, ang pana pati nang ma- ñga manliligao ay quinacaya nang mañga alguacil. (alguacil , Sp. word for a "bumbailiff").
--	---	---

Cayá, as a verb, means "can", "to be able" in a material sense, but it is however conjugated by maca.

Has he strength enough for that?	¿Macacaya bagá niyà iyán?
I cannot bring it here.	Dili co macayanan dalhín ritò.

Cayá, as an adverb, is used postponed in interrogation; having, as bagá, an expletive sense and means "how"?, "how now"?, "by chance".

Are you, by chance, the son of Peter?	¿Yeáo cayá bagá ang anac ni Pedro?
How!, is he the murderer?.	¿Siyá cayá ang nacamatáy?.

Cayá, as a conjunction, is used before the verb and means "since", "therefore".

You have been called for, and since you are well go there.	Tináuag ca, cayá yámang magaling ca na, paróon ca.
He is sick, therefore I will pay him a visit.	Siyá,i, may saquit, cayá dadalauin co siyá.

Cayá, is followed by the affirmative and completive particles. Cayá ñga, means "wherefore", "just that", in the second sentence.

Just because she is a woman she endeavours to be chaste. Cayá ñga, siyá,i; babaye magpacahin-hin siyá.
 Just for that reason I will not give you any money. Cayá ñga,i, di bibiguián catá nang salapí.

Cayá ñgani is more emphatic than cayá ñga and is used in the negative.

Since you have no farm, lease one. { Cayá ñgani ualá cang búquid ma{ mouís ca.

Cayá ñga yata is also used for "therefore"; caya ñganit, for the adverbial phrase "no sooner," as soon as".

I no sooner arrived than I arrested him. Cayá ñganit pagdating co,i, dinaquip co siyá.

Notice must be taken of the common native habit (not one to be imitated by Europeans learning the language) of inserting in a sentence words which have no meaning to fill a temporary hiatus while the speaker is thinking of his next word. These prop-words are numerous in Tagalog and vary in different localities; but the most usual one is:

COÁN.

perhaps the word most in use by natives. It stands for what one does not remember or serves as a periphrasis or euphemism for anything which is already understood between the interlocutors, for what will be shameful to express or may hurt the feelings of others.

Mr. Such a one.	Si Coán, or, couán.
What (is understood).	Ang coán.
The privy parts.	Ang coán.

Coán, in the same sense, can be made into a verb and be conjugated by all the verbal particles which the nature of the action it stands for may admit.

She is growing so and so.	Cungmocoán siyá.
She might. (consent).	Macacoán siyá.
Order her so and so.	Magpacoán ca sa caniyá.
She meddles in doing this and that.	Naquiquicoán siyá.

FORTY SECOND EXERCISE.

Who took man's attributes? The Son of God took man's attributes. Why did He take man's attributes? He took man's attributes for the sake of our redemption. Did your son become worthy to be ordained a priest? No, but he became worthy of obtaining an office. Did what I told you turn out true? Yes, it turned out true. Shall I be yours and you mine? No, thou shalt neither be mine nor I thine. What has been the reason? This has been the reason. What will become of me (will be my fate)? What your fate will be, nobody knows. What shall I do to become worthy of others' consideration? Pay what you owe. Shall the servant do anything? Let him put water into this vat. Where has your wife been buried? Here in this spot she was buried. Why does not your tailor put down that clothing? He has no place to put it on. Why did he get in without bowing? Because he is an uneducated man. Did she consent? She did without reluctance. What does he puff up for? He does not remember his origin. Why do you use to find fault with everybody? I did not get accustomed to that. Will you accompany me? I will keep you company. Where are you going? I am going to fish with a rod. What is your father distributing? What he is distributing is known by my brothers to whom he is distributing it. Who converted water into wine? Jesus Christ converted water into wine. Who was converted into a beast? Luthbel was converted into a beast. Did the wine convert itself into vinegar? It did. What was your friend converted into? He was converted into a miser. What has your aunt become? She became deaf, mute and blind. Can you lift that? I cannot lift that. What have you laid hands upon? I laid hands upon the thief. Do you chance to be Mary's brother? I am. What do you intend to do? Whereas (since) he has not come, I will go for him.

FORTY THIRD LESSON.
YCAAPAT NA POUO,T, TATLONG PAGARAL.

MODIFICATIVE VERBALIZING PARTICLES.

MAGSI=PAGSI.

Magsi, active; pagsi, passive, does not impart any peculiar modifying sense to the root it conjugates. It is but one of the manifold ways of expressing plurality in Tagalog and means that many or the whole people alluded to, do perform the action denoted by the root. Thus, magsi is used but in the plural and may be conjugated in the passives the nature of the action may admit of. It being dissyllabic, repeats si in present and future tenses.

Verbal.

The action of beholding (by many) in. Ang pagsipanooran.

The student should conjugate actively and passively the following verbs, some of which include combination with other verbalizing particles.

To teach. (many).	Magsiáral.
To learn. (").	Magsipagáral.
To preach. (").	Magsipañgáral.
To confess. (by many penitents).	Magsipagcumpisal.
To confess (by many priests).	Magsipagpacumpisal.
To enter, to go in. (many).	Magsipásoc.
To get (something) into. (by many).	Magsipagpásoc.
To go out. (many).	Magsilabás.
To draw (something) out. (by many).	Magsipalabás.
To weep. (many).	Magsitañgis.
To laugh. (many).	Magsitauá.

Still the sense of plurality may be carried to a higher degree of numerousness by inserting in this, as in other conjugations, ñga, between the changeable and changeless portion of the particle.

All the children of this school learn.	{ Ang mañga bata nitòng escuelañan nañgagsisipagáral.
All of you there outside come in.	{ Mañgagsipásoc cayóng naririyán sa labás.
Honor the masters who teach you.	{ Pagpitaganan mo ang mañga umaáral or maestro nañgagsisiáral sa iyo.
All this crowd made a confession this morning and they all will behold the procession to-morrow.	Ytòng maraming mañga tauò nañgagsipagcumpisal cañginang umaga at mañgagsisipannóor nang procesión bucas.

Corner.	Súloc.

It is outside the wood.	Na sa labás nang gúbat.
Just what.	Ganán.
Take just what you wish.	Muha ca nang ganán fbig mo.
Take just what suffices for a shirt.	Muha ca nang ganán súcat baróin.
That is only for me.	Ganán aquin iyán.
You (plur.) take for yourselves what is for me.	Naggaganán inyò cayó nang ganán sa aquin.
As for my part.	Sa ganán aquin.
As for him.	Sa ganán caniyá.
As for my part, I abandon her.	Sa ganán aquin, pinababayán co siyá.

PARTICLES AND WORDS USED AS DIFFERENT PARTS OF SPEECH.

CASI.

Casi, as a noun, means, as already said, "intimate friend".

They are intimate friends. Magcasi, magcacasi silá, and conjugated by mag means to engage in close familiarity.

He engages in intimacy. Nagcacasi siyá.

Casi, as a verb, also means "to pervade", if conjugated by um.

The Holy Ghost pervaded the souls of the Apostles. { Ang Dios Espíritu Santo, ang cun-masí sa calóloua nang mafiga Após-toles. (Sp.)

Still casi conjugated by um means "to accept of a secret or clandestine gift". as to be bribed, and by mag, "to bribe".

The judge accepted of my gift. Ang hócom ay ang quinasihan co.

Casi may be used as an impersonal verb meaning "it seems".

It seems that he went there. Naparóon casi siyá.
It seems he does not know her. Di niyá naquiquilala casi.

DI.

Di, the contraction of dili an hindí, is always a prepositive particle meaning "not", "in", (Latin prefix), "un".

Insufferable. Di mabatà.
Unspeakable. Di mauica.

Di cannot be conjugated by pa on account of its monosyllabic structure, thus, to "say no," is expressed by the full word hindí or dili, saying pahindí, padili.

Di serves to affirm in an alternative or contrasting sense.

Whom but Our Lord God, should I pray? ¿Di sino ang dadaíngan co cundí ang
Dios ating paínginóon?.

Di joins to adverbs, imparting a negative sense.

róon, "to have", "to own", "to be worth"; still it may be conjugated by man: mandóon, manróon, "to take something out of a heap".

Give them some fruit out of the } Biguián mo silá nang nandoróon. basket.

FORTY THIRD EXERCISE.

It seems I don't know him. Have you not eaten the meat? I did not eat the meat but the boiled rice. Do you intend to engage in trade? What shall I do but to engage in trade? Why do you ask me that? Because I want to know whether you go there or not. Where do you go? I go to church. What are you going to do there? I am going there to attend mass. Had the letter been already read when you were at home? The letter had already been read. Had the hen been looked for? It had not yet been looked for. Were our ancestors stronger than we? Our forefathers from whom we descend, were stronger.

FORTY FOURTH LESSON.
YCAAPAT NA POUO,T, APAT NA PAGARAL.

MODIFICATIVE VERBALIZING PARTICLES.

MAGSA=PAGSA.

Magsa, active; pagsa, passive; is another verbal particle which if applied to the root of a national adjective denotes imitation, following of the manners or customs of that nation. This particle is little in fashion as the same sense may be conveyed by magui and other means of expression. We give, however, an example of it in the subjoined conjugation and it will be seen that sa, the last syllable of the particle, is repeated in the proper tenses.

FORTY FIFTH LESSON.
YCAAPAT NA POUO,T, LIMANG PAGARAL.

MODIFICATIVE VERBALIZING PARTICLES.

MANHI—PANHI.

Manhi, active; panhi, passive; is a compound of man=pan and the adverbial particle hi, the latter having an ironical adversative sense, somewhat after the one denoted by the English prefix "for" in "forswear", "forbear". Thus, ganti, "reward"; gumanti, "to reward"; manhiganti, "to revenge"; pálay, "husk-rice"; mamálay, "to gather in paddy"; manhimálay, "to glean"; pálad, "good luck", "fortune"; magcapálad, "to be lucky"; manhimálad, "to predict by fortune-tellers". Man is in this conjugation the verbal particle, hi being only complementary of the sense. Hence the roots conjugated by manhi undergo the same change of the initial letters which they would undergo if conjugated by man.

The form of conjugation, in other respects, follows the general rules; hi, the last syllable, being repeated in the proper tenses.

PARTICLES AND WORDS USED AS DIFFERENT PARTS OF SPEECH.

LOOB.

Lóob, as a noun, means "the inside", "the inner part of some closed space", not the contents, which is expressed by lamán. Metaphorically, lóob means "will", "good-will", "heart".

The inside of the room.	Ang lóob nang silid.
Mercy, grant.	Calóob.
Gratitude.	Utang ná lóob.
Coward, spiritless, ungrateful fellow.	Tauóng ualáng lóob.

As a verb, lóob means "to enter", "to allow", "to permit", "to do something willingly", according to the particle.

To enter, to fall upon, to break open.	Lumóob, manlóob.
To allow something in, to give admittance, to allow pillage going on.	Magpalóob.
To bestow graces, mercies.	Magcalóob.
To allow, to do something willingly.	Maglóob.
Do it heartily.	Maglóob nang gumauá.
What do you desire?	¿Anóng lóob mo?
If you are not willing, don't go there.	Cundí mo lóob, di nang paróon.

Loób, as an adverb, stands for "inside", "in", "within", and must be complemented by the proposition sa.

Within, in, inside.	Sa lóob.
Heartily, willingly.	¿ Sa lóob, nang lóob, sa bóong lóob, nang bóong lóob.

OCOL.

Ocol, as a noun, is fit to express "good fortune", "fitness".

I lack good luck.	Tauò acóng ualáng ócol.
You are both of the same temper.	Magcaócol cayóng dalauá.

Ocol, as a verb, is used in several ways.

Soul is for (belongs to) God.	Ang calolóua ay naoócol sa Dios.

It suits Peter to be judge.
I yield to the will of God.

Ocol cay Pedro ang maghocom.
Ynocolan or inaayonan co ang loob nang Dios.

PONO.

Pono, as a noun, means "source", "origin", "trunk of a tree", "foreman", "leader".

God is the source of truth.	Ang Dios ay ang pono nang catotohanan.
How many banana-trees are there in your farm?	¿Ylán bagá ang mañga pono nang ságuing na nasa iyóng búquid?
He is the chief of the fleet.	Siyá,i, ang pono nang hocbó sa dágat.
Generative organs.	Ponong cataouán.
Head place or town, president of the town, mayor.	} Ponong bayan.

Pono, as a verb, means "to fill", "and also "to make up".

Fill the vat.	Ponán mo ang tapayan.
Make up one hundred.	Magponó ca nang sangdaán.

QUITA=CATA.

These two pronouns when used in the nominative express the plural in a way even more restricted than camí, as they mean "thou and I alone", but they have a somewhat interjectional exhortative sense.

Well then, let us go to mass.	Quitá,i, magsimbá.
Well, let us set about it.	Catá, quitá na.
Let us eat.	Quitá,i, cumáin.

But, most commonly, quitá-catá, stand for the possessive case with regard to the speaker or agent, and for the nominative of the patient, both of them being used in the passive as a contraction of co icáo, "thou by me".

I will keep you company, you shall be accompanied by me.	} Sasamahan quitá or catá.
I will wake thee.	Guiguisiñgin catá or quitá.
You are whipped by me.	Hinahampás quitá or catá.

I eat the fruit sought by my mother. Why do you not drink that wine? Because I never drink.

FORTY SIXTH LESSON.
YCAATAT NA POUO,T, ANIM NA PAGARAL.

MODIFICATIVE VERBALIZING PARTICLES.

$$\text{MAGPACA} = \frac{\text{PAGPACA.}}{\text{PACA.}}$$

Magpaca, active; pagpaca=paca, passive; may be considered as an enlargement of magpa, (which it somewhat resembles in sense in some respects) with the intransitive particle suffixed thereto. Hence it does not generally admit of the in passive and pa and not ca is repeated in the present and future tenses. Its principal signification is, like magpa, to allow, to suffer willingly what the root it joins to means. The discrimination between the passive and the self-acting upon sense should be made by adequate expressions for verbs admitting of both. Nagpacamatáy si Jesucrisso cusa niyá, "Jesus Christ gave up His life"; nagpacamatáy Si Cato sa caniyá.ig sarili, "Cato committed suicide".

The student should conjugate actively and passively by magpaca, the following verbs:

To humble one's self.	Magpacababa.
To give up fortune.	Magpacaduc-há.
To become mean spirited.	Magpacaliit.
To embellish one's self, to allow one's self to be led into the right path.	Magpacabuti.
To allow one's self to be insulted.	Magpacaapí.
To repent.	Magpacasisi.
To value one's self highly.	Magpacamahál.

Y passive stands generally in this conjugation for the instrument or cause of the action; that of an, for the place or the object, according to whether the verb admits or not an passive for the direct object.

Jesus Christ gave up His life for the redemption of mankind.	Ang ypinagpacamatáy ni Jesucristo, i, ang pagsacop sa catauohan.
It was on the cross that Jesus Christ gave up His life.	Ang crus ay ang pinagpacamatayán ni Jesucristo.
Notice carefully what I tell you.	{ Pacatandaán mo ang sinasabi co sa iyò.

It should be taken into account that pagpaca in the passive is for those actions which require to be conjugated by mag in some special discriminative sense; paca, for the others.

Endeavour to teach your children good habits.	Pacaaralan mo ang iyòng mañga anak nang mabuting ásal.
Endeavour to learn the English language.	Pagpacapagaralán mo ang inglés na uica.

Hitherto magpaca has been applied either to intransitive actions or to those which do not go beyond the subject. When magpaca conjugates verbs the action of which is voluntary or capable of admitting a direct complement other than the subject, it indicates a purposed earnest desire, a special care of executing the action in the highest possible degree of efficiency, and in this sense it admits of the in passive.

To do something carefully.	Magpacarahan.
To think deeply.	Magpacaísip.
To observe carefully.	Magpacatandá.
To be upon one's guard.	Magpacaíngat.
To behave one's self very mindfully.	Magpacabaet.
To put in order, to settle things heedfully.	Magpacahúsay.
To study in earnest.	Magpacapagáral.
To esteem highly.	Magpacamahál.
Modesty enhances woman's beauty.	{ Ang cahinhina, i, nagpapabuti sa ba-baye.

The reason for my female-cousin embellishing herself is that she may be praised.	Ang ypinagpapacabuti nang aquing pinsang babaye,i, ang nang siyá,i, mapuri.
Meek people allow themselves to be abused to acquire merits towards God.	Ang ypinagpapacaapí nang mañga banal na tauo, ang nang magcaroón nang carapatan sa harap nang Dios.
Repent earnestly of all your wrongs.	} Pacapagsisihan mo ang lahat mong masamang gauá. } Pacaisipin mo iyán. } Pinagpapacamahal quitá or pinacamamahal.
Think carefully of that.
I do esteem you.

Reciprocal actions with mag and an are greatly intensified by magpaca.

They harm each other bitterly.	Nagpapacasamaán silá.
You aided each other earnestly.	Nagpacatoloñgan cayó.

Magpaca drops the g and remains mapaca when a fortuitous and not a purposely executed action is meant.

To allow one's self to be led into the right path.	} Magpacagaling. } Mapacagaling. } Mapacasamá.
To be saved, to attain salvation.
To be condemned, to incur eternal punishment.

In the passive, when paca is used, the first syllable of the root should be repeated.

He endeavours to purify his habits.	} Pinacalilinis niyá ang caniyang mañga asal. } Pacalilinisán niyá ang lahat niyang mañga casalanan. } Mapapacagaling ca cun sinusunod mo ang aquing mañga santong utos.
He will be purified of all his sins.
Thou shalt be saved if thou keepest my holy commandments.

PARTICLES AND WORDS USED AS DIFFERENT PARTS OF SPEECH.

SAAN.

Sáan, as its structure, sa-an indicates, is, most commonly, the adverb of place "where", "whereto".

Where is the quilt?	¿Sáan naróon ang cómot?.
Whereto do you go?	¿Sáan ca paroróon.?

Sáan may be made a verb if conjugated by pa, in which case it stands for the verb of motion which it replaces, meaning, "to make for, or, towards".

Where is she going to?	¿Napasasáan bagá siyá?.
------------------------	-------------------------

Sáan is joined to other particles imparting various senses thereto.

Anywhere, wherever, everywhere.	Sáan man.
Everywhere, anywhere in the Earth.	Sáan man sa lupa.
Anywhere you go.	Sáan man pumaróon ca.

Sáan, sáan pu is negative in regard to the action, but affirmative in regard to the reason.

You shall be punished.	Hahampasin ca.
Of course, it is obvious that I shall not be punished.	} Sáan acó hahampasin.
You shall go there.	Paroróon ca.
Where else shall I go?	¿Sáan pa acó paroróon?

Saan di pa is affirmative in a contrary sense to that of sáan, sáan pa.

How can it be true?	¿Sáan pa di totoò?
How can he be whipped?	¿Sáan pa di siyá hahampasin?

We know already that sáan, haan preceded by ma or na, expresses "to be" as a neuter and not as a copulative verb.

Where Frank will be?	¿Masasáan bagá si Isco?
Where is the book?	¿Nasáan ang libro?

SANA.

Sana, as has been said, is a particle fit to express the conditional or future consequent tense.

John would have arrived had he not been sick.	Si Juan sana,i, dungmating dafiga,t, nagcasaquit.
Had they cured him he would not have died.	Cun guinamot siyá nilá ay hindi sana namatáy.

Sana preceded by cun has a peculiar sense better to be learned by the following illustrations.

It is harder than stone, and let pass stone as a term of comparison.	} Matigás pa sa batò, cun sana sa batò.
The spoliation, the theft as it were.	} Ang pagágao, ang pagnanácao cun sana pananácao.

Sana is sometimes contracted into sa.

I should go.	Naparóon sa acó.

FORTY SEVENTH LESSON
YCAAPAT NA POUO,T, PITONG PAGARAL.

MODIFICATIVE VERBALIZING PARTICLES.

MAGPATI=PAGPATI.

Magpati, active; pagpati, passive; is a very little used verbal particle. It may be considered as a compound of mag or magpa and ti, contraction of tig; tigtig meaning "to shudder with sudden terror". It is only applied to those roots which if conjugated by um or ma express motion or corporal position, to which magpati adds a sense of voluntary suddenness, or, if the g is dropped, of unconscious hurry. In magpati=pagpati, pa is repeated in present and future tenses, and admits only of y (yca) and an passives.

The student should conjugate actively and passively by magpati, the following verbs:

To spring to one's feet.	Magpatitindig.
To prostrate one's self.	Magpatirapá.
To throw one's self down, to stretch one's self at full length.	Magpatihigá.
To sit down of a sudden.	Magpatiopó.
To turn one's back suddenly.	Magpatitalicod.
To place one's self quickly side on.	Magpataguilid.

Y passive, in this conjugation, stands generally for the cause, an passive, for the place or person.

His distracted love made him bend his knee.	Ang calacasan nang caniyàng sintà,i, ang ypinagpatiluhod niyá.
He prostrated himself before the altar.	Ang altar (Sp.) ang pinagpatirapaan niyá.
I prostrate myself before my king.	} Ang pinagpapatirapáan co,i, ang a- quing Hari.

The g of magpati=pagpati is dropped according as the action is voluntary (r involuntary, the latter also being expressed by mapa.

To spring into.	Magpatiholog.
To tumble downwards.	} Mapatiholog, mapatihápáy, mapati- bouang.
To toss.	Magpatihapáy, magpatibouang.
To totter down subitaneously.	Mapatihapáy, mapatibouang.
To remain involuntary in a lying down posture.	} Mapatihigá.
Spring into the sea.	Magpatihólog ca sa dágat.
I rose unconsciously to my feet.	Napatitindig acó.

PARTICLES AND WORDS USED AS DIFFERENT PARTS OF SPEECH.

SILA.

Silá is the well known third person pronoun in the plural, meaning "they,,,"

They, always they, are given. Silá nang silá ang binibiguián.

Silá, and silá po are used in addressing a single person and by so doing the sense is carried to the utmost degree of respect.

You, thou. (simplest sense.)	Ycáo, ca.
You. (sing.) (polite) •	Ycáo po, cayó, cayó po.
You, thou. (Your Excellency, Your Majesty, Your Highness).	} Silá, silá po.

This, however, does not exclude the use of the address in the proper way.

Your Excellency. Yyò, inyò pong camahalan.

Silá is made a verb in the ways already explained for the other personal pronouns.

The child says silá. Napapasilá ang bata.

Silà, thus accented, as a verb, means "to eat meat or fish".

The servant is eating the meat or fish. Sinisilahin nang alila ang cati.

SIYA.

Siyá, besides standing for "he", "she", "it", also stands for the compound relative pronoun, "what", or "that which", or better to say, it is a kind of demonstrative pronoun or a somewhat emphatic means of recalling to memory the subject of a sentence.

Joseph, it is he who stole.	Si José, siyá ang nagnácao.
My mother, it is she who wept.	Ang aquing inà, siyá ang nagtafigis.
Drunkness is what killed him.	{ Ang calañgohan siyá ang ypinatáy sa caniyà.
You yourself!, is what I said.	Ycao nga, siyá ang ysinabi co.

It may be said that in this sense siyá stands for every gender of the reflective pronoun in reference to a noun.

The blacksmith himself made it.	Ang pandáy bácal, siyá ang gungmauá.
The aunt herself returned it back.	Ang alí siyáng nagsaolí.
Wealth itself caused his ruin.	{ Ang cayamana, i, siyá ang yquinasamá niyá.

Siyá, conjugated by pa, means "to assent", "to abide by other's opinion".

He assents.	Napasisiyá.
Do not agree to that, don't assent to.	Houag mo ypasiyá.

Siyá, conjugated by magca, means "to suit", "to become", "and also" to be enough, sufficient".

That dress suits her.	Yyáng damit nagcasisiyá sa caniyá.
That stick is not enough for a pillar.	Hindí nagcacasiyá iyáng cáhoy sa isáng haligue.

Conjugated by um, siyá means to reach the point of full development.

Her body has already reached its full development.	{ Sungmiyá na ang catouáng niyá.
--	----------------------------------

Siyá, if conjugated by man, means "to fill up the whole room", "to go on growing".

His sore is coming up in flesh. (is healing.)	{ Naniniyá na ang caniyáng súgat.
Adjustment, agreement, suitability.	Casiyahán. (notice the accentuation.)
Enough, average, common, ordinary thing.	{ Casiyahan.

Siyá may also stand for the person addressed in a politely respectful sense.

Your mercy.	Siyá po.
-------------	----------

Siyá may be used as an adverb or interjection.

So, just so, just it.	Siyá.
Bravo!	Siyá.

But, most generally, it is associated with some other particle.

Enough!	Siyá na.
It is he himself!, it is just that, just it.	Siyá nga.
Although he be.	Siyá man.
Would to God, amen, happiness to you.	Siyá nauá.
It is he then....	Siyá palá.....

SUCAT.

Súcat, as a noun, means "measure", that is to say, some standard apparatus proper to ascertain quantity. As a verb, it has the following significations:

To measure. (simple sense.) Sumúcat, manúcat.
To measure a great deal. Magsucat. (notice the accentuation.)

The meaning of pattern, standard, which, súcat has is applied in many ways. It is used in a potential sense as mangyari, maca.

She can work. Súcat siyáng gumauá.
They may be given it. Súcat siláng biguián.

But if the sense is a passive one or the action does not admit of potentiality, it means "duty or moral obligation," the same as dápat.

You deserve to be punished. Súcat cang hampasín.
He is worthy to be appointed captain. Súcat siyá maguingcapitan.
It is beneath their nobleness. Dili súcat sa caniláng camahalan.

Súcat na means the same as siyá na, "enough". Súcat na, followed by an infinitive means the hourly occasion of doing something.

It is time to eat.	Súcat nang cumáin.
" " " " go out.	" " lumabás.
" " " " study.	" " magáral.
" " " " walk.	" " lumácad.
" " " " sleep.	" " matólog.

To pray, to say prayers.	Manalañgin.

In my opinion.	Sa aquing acala, sa isip co.
Till, until, as far as.	Hangán.
Till evening.	Hangáng gabi, hangán sa gabi.
Till to-morrow.	Hangáng bucas.
As far as the bridge.	Hangán sa tuláy.
Till I die.	Hangán sa camatayan co.
To, towards.	Daco, sa daco, dápit.
Towards the forest.	Sa dacong gúbat.
" " sea.	" " dágat.
" " land.	" " lupa.
Upwards.	Dacong itáas.
Downwards.	Dápit ibabá.
Eastwards.	Dacong silañganan.
Westwards,	" calunuran.
On, upon.	Sa ibábao.
Above, over.	Sa itáas.
Under, underneath.	Sa ilálim.

PARTICLES AND WORDS USED AS DIFFERENT PARTS OF SPEECH.

TABI.

Tabi, as a noun, means "border", "bank", "shore", "extremity".

The river bank. Ang tabi nang flog.
The sea-shore. Ang tabi nang dágat.

As a verb or a verbal noun, tabi has the following significations:

To be on the border. Matabi.
To go about bordering. Mapatabi.
To place one's self at the border, edge. Tumabi.
Let him not place himself at the edge. Houag siyá tumabi.
Place that at the extremity. Ytabi mo iyán.

Place yourself at the very edge. Patatabi ca.
 The extremity, the foremost point of something. } Ang catabihan.
 Laystall, the dirtiest place. Tabihan.

Tabi is very much made use of as a polite warning for somebody to get out of the way when persons, generally inferiors, want room for themselves to pass on, by or through.

By your leave. Tabi po.
 Please, make room for me to pass. ¡Tabi! acó daráan.

It is also a respectful expression to ask permission for something to be done.

Pardon, Sir, I am going to make water. Tabi po, acó, i, iihí.

TAGA.

Taga, as has been said, denotes nativity, pertaining to the place of birth.

Where are you from?, what country are you from? } ¿Taga súan ca?
 I am a Tondoman. Taga Tondo acó.

Taga, as a noun, also means "fishing-hook" of any size, binuit being a small one.

Bait your hook. Painan mo ang iyóng taga.

Taga, as a verb, signifies "to hew" in a longitudinal way.

To hew downwards. Tumaga.
 To hew a great deal. Magtaga.
 To go about hewing. Managa.

Tumaga means also to lay hold of, some holdfast thing, as the anchor.

The anchor laid hold on land. Tungmaga sa lupa ang sinípit.

Metaphorically it may be said:

His words pierce deeply into my heart. Tungmataga mandin sa lóob co ang caniyáng uica.

Taga, as a prepositive particle of frequentative nouns, will be treated of in proper place.

TALAGA.

Talagá, is, like ócol, either a telling or an attributive word denoting an idea of bias, predestination, fitness, better to be known by the following examples.

Naturally, in a natural, innate way. Talagá
 The lemon is sour by nature. Talagáing maasim ang dáyap.
 This misfortune was destined to me by God. Talagá nang Dios sa aquin itóng aking cahirapan.
 To keep something to be devoted to. Magtalaga.

To yield, to be resolved.	Tumalagà.
I yield to anything you may order me.	Tungmatalagà acó sa anomán yotos mo sa aquin.
He is resolved to do that.	Tungmatalaga siyá gaoin iyán.

TAMBIING.

Tambing, adverb of time, means "immediately," "forthwith".

Do it immediately. Tambing mong gaoin.

Tambing, as a verb, is conjugated by mag and means "to do something quickly," "to dispatch," "to prepare."

Make haste. Magtambing ca.

In the passive, it follows that required by the verb it is joined to.

Take it forthwith. Tambiñgin mo cunin.
Give it at once. Ytambing mo ybigáy.

If used independently, it follows the general rules of the passive; y, for the thing; an, for the person or place.

Make haste as to the money for Peter. Tambiñgan mo si Pedro nang salapí.
The money for Peter, made haste with it. } Ang salapí ytambing mo cay Pedro.

To betray.	Maglilo.

MODIFICATIVE VERBALIZING PARTICLES.

MAGCAN=PAGCAN.

Magcan, active; pagcan, passive; is the last verbal particle we shall treat of, although perhaps some others of a narrow local range may be in use. It is an intransitive particle rarely used, and generally applied to roots of such fluids as flow or are expelled from the human body, to indicate that the shedding or flowing is involuntary and out of some cause which renders the excretion either unconscious or uncontrollable. Magcan is dissyllabic; ca, the last syllable, consists of three letters of which only the two first, ca, are taken for repetition according to the general rule. Now, if this is done, confusedness might arise with the particle magca, to avoid which both ca and the first syllable of the root are repeated, the latter in all and can in the present and future tenses. On account of the involuntariness of the action this particle only admits of y and an passives, and cannot be used in the imperative.

TILA.

Tila is, as diua, casi and other expressions, a kind of impersonal verb standing for "it seems", "it appears".

It seems to be a person.	Tila tauò.
It appears that he went there.	Tila naparóon.

Tila, as a verb, is conjugated by um, magpa or pa and means "to cease raining", "to wait till rain is over."

Rain is subsiding.	Tungmitila na.
Let us wait until rain is over.	Patiláin ta mona ang ulán.

TOLOY.

Toláy, adverb, means "as well as", "at the same time", "jointly", "conjointly".

Give my son this and fetch my book on the way.	Ybigáy mo itò sa anac co, toláy acó,i, ycoha mo nang aquing libro.
Let him sell the bushel of rice along with the bag. (cover).	Ypagbilí niyà ang cabán na bigás, toláy nang bayong.

Toláy in the past tense of the passive still retains its adverbial sense, meaning "wholly", "completely", or the perfective sense imparted to some verbs by the English particle "up".

It was killed at once, upright.	Pinatáy din tinoláy.
---------------------------------	-----------------------------

I made it up. Yinari cong tinolóy.
I bought up his pledge. Tinolóy cong tubusín ang sanlá niyá.

Tóloy is made a verb with various significations.

To make up, to conclude.	Tumóloy, magtóloy.

He affords shelter to by-passers, palmers.	Nagpatatolóy siyá sa taga ibáng bayan.

TONGCOL.

Tongcol is, like ócol and talagá, a word having attributive sense. Used as a noun it means "propriety", "adequateness".

Whom does this correspond to?	¿Sinong may tungcol nitò?
It corresponds to me.	Natotongcol sa aquin.
Duty, obligation, authority, office.	Catongcolan.
This is my duty.	Catongcolan co itò.

Use of tongcol as a verb:

To distribute to each party what is due to him.	} Magtongcol, magpatongcol.
God designed this for me.
To apportion one's task, to take one's part of the task.	} Acó,i, pinatotongcolan nang Dios nitò. Tumongcol.

Tongcol may be used as an adverb in the sense of gánang, ganán sa.

As for me.	Tongcol sa aquin.
------------	-------------------

To be alone.	Mag-isá.
She is there all by herself.	Nag-iisá siyá dóon.
Do it all by yourself.	Gaoín mong mag-isá.

Tender, merciful.	Maauain, mahabaguin.
Meek.	Maamó, maamóng lóob.
Humble.	Mababang lóob.
To desire, to be fond of.	Mauil'.
Amateur, fond.	Mauilihín, maibiguín, matoafín.

FORTY NINTH EXERCISE.

Why do you not mind that baby over there weeping? I don't mind him, for babies weep without being conscious thereof. Why does that girl show tears in her eyes? It is on account of sickness that she sheds tears unconsciously. Does the curate of your parish preach well? He preaches effectively and he sheds tears in the pulpit. How is your husband? My husband is aggravated in his complaint, he suffers from incontinence of urine and he bleeds unconsciously; he covers himself with perspiration and slavers; sometimes he swoons away and bursts out into laughter. Did the maid blush? She blushed at the sight of her lover. Why is there so much fruit strewn on the ground? Because it is too ripe and drops off from the trees. Do the children romp? They are overjoyed with their toys. What do you laugh at? Laughter tickles all over me. Is to afford shelter to people, good? To afford shelter to other people is an upright action. Why did you not shun him? He placed himself right in front of me. How are the trees in your garden, arranged? They are placed opposite each other. Did you go the shortest way to Mariquina? I left the high road and ventured on the cross-path. Do I release the prisoner? That is not incumbent on you. Is not that sail on the sea, white? It seems to be yellow. Does it not appear to be a steamer? No, it seems to be a sailing vessel. Are you going out at once? No, I shall wait until the rain is over. What? Fetch my spectacles and at the same time take away this chair. Did the servant drink any milk? He drank up the whole. What shall I then do? Go on with whipping him. Where does your friend lodge? He lodges at my house. What is your duty? My duty is to judge. What office does he fill? His office is that of a collector. Did you distribute the salary to the journeymen? I did. What part of the task did the soldier take for himself? He took upon himself to keep guard at the outpost. Why are the couple alone? They are all by themselves, because they are married to each other. Do you wish me to accompany you? No, I will go alone. Is it proper to owe and not to pay? No, it is not proper to owe and not to pay, nor it is just to run into debt. Is his master cruel or merciful? He is meek and merciful. Are you fond of riding? I am not fond of riding.

FIFTIETH LESSON.
YCALIMANG POUONG PAGARAL.

THE GERUND.

The gerund is, in English, a verbal noun preserving the same government as the verb it is derived from, as in "I like eating apples". The termination "ing" of the English verbs is, outside of the above mentioned case, parsed properly or improperly, as verbal noun, present or predicative participle, participial adjective, etc., according to its being used in one way or another. It is also a peculiarity of the English language to use the gerund, instead of the infinitive which most other languages require, after some preposition either expressed or understood, as in, "after playing", "he continues growing up". But in other languages the gerund is also that form of the verb expressing the action in an adverbial manner, as illustrated by the following expressions: "He reads standing", "he learns by teaching". Tagalog has no proper inflexion for the English verbal forms of "ing" termination, thus, all of them will be included in the explanations hereafter.

The present participle, as has been said in a foregoing chapter, is expressed by the active form of the verb, preceded by the article, and adapts itself to every tense and case.

The loving girl. (maid).	Ang sungmisintàng dalaga.
Of the obeying child.	Nang sungmusunod na bata.
To, for the working man.	Sa gungmagauáng tauò.
I gave a dollar for the fighting (he who fought) soldier.	Ybinigáy co sa naquipagbacang sundalo ang piso.
I will buy a book for the studying pupil. (he who will study)	Ybibili co ang magaaral na alagad nang isàng libro.

When the "ing" termination makes a verbal noun, this, is expressed by the Tagalog verbal noun.

Reading is very amusing.	Ang pagbasà,i, nagbibigáy aliw
Preaching well is very difficult.	} Ang pañgañgáral na mabuti ay maliuag na totoò.
Eating too much is dangerous	Ang pagcacái,i, nacapañgañganib.

When the termination "ing" makes the gerund, as considered in English, it is translated by the infinitive.

I like shooting fowl.	Nauiuili acóng mamaril nang ibon.
I would like eating fish.	Ybig co sana cumáin nang isdá.
He tries buying this house.	Nagbabantá siyá bilhín itòng bahay.

If the English present participle is used attributively, that is to say, adjectivally, connected with a noun or pronoun, it is generally translated in Tagalog by the infinitive.

I saw her playing the harp.	} Naquita co siyá tumogtog nang arpa. (Sp.)
-----------------------------	--

I heard my father whipping him. } Narifigig co ang amá cōng humam} pás sa caniyá.

The present tense may also be used if the determining verb obtains in the present or the action is considered as going on.

I behold my herd pasturing. } Nanonóor acó sa aquing caban na
 } nananabsab. (from sabsab, "pasture").
 I notice my servant rowing. (oaring.) } Pinagmamasiran co ang aquing ali-} lang gungmagaor.

The English present participle used predicatively to form a compound tense is generally translated in Tagalog by the corresponding tense.

He is mustering people for the cockpit. } Pinagtatáuag niyá ang mañga tauò } sa saboñgan.
 I was writing when he called me. } Sungmusúlat acó nang acó,i, tiná-
 } uag niyá
 They will be gambling when you arrive } Magsusugal silá cun dumating ca there. } dóon.

There is in Tagalog no proper progressive conjugation; if, however stress is laid on the going on of an action, sa and the root with its first syllable and then the whole root repeated, is sometimes used in the present tense in a sense of displeasure or reprimand.

He is looking at there as a fool. } Sa titiñgintiñgin siyá.
 He is standing purposeless. } Sa tatayotayó siyá.
 They are present without saying a } Sa haharapharap silá.
 word. }

The present participle used adverbially is generally translated by the Tagalog verbal noun preceded by sa.

Bottles are made by blowing. } Ang mañga bote,i, guinagauá sa paghi-} hihip.
 Cold is expelled by walking. } Ang guínao ay napalalabás sa pag} lalacad.
 Teachers learn by teaching. } Ang mañga ungmaáral ay nagaáral sa } pagáral.
 By practicing virtue, Glory is attained. } Sa pag-gauá nang cabanala,i, quina} camtam ang caloualhatfan.

But if condition is implied, the imperative or infinitive preceded by cun is used.

He will arrange the matter by paying } Maghuhúsay siyá nang bágay cun bathe debt. } yaran niyá ang ótang.
 Mary singing, he refuses to play. } Nanayáo siyáng tumogtog cun nag} aáuit Si María.

If an idea of time is prominent in the expression, cun, before the present or future tenses is used.

Old people speaking, children should } Cun nagsasalitá ang matatandá, dápat be silent. } tumahimic ang mañga bata.
 The sermon commencing, I will go } Cun pinupunuan ang pañgáral, ay away. } aalis acó.

The idea of a past time with the gerund is generally expressed by the past tense preceded by nang.

He dying, the doctor arrived.	{ Nang siyá,i, namatáy na, dungmating ang médico.
They sailing, their mother went back.	{ Nang naglalalayag na silá,i, nouí ang canilàng inà.

The English gerund coming after some preposition or adverb and replacing the infinitive is translated in several ways according to the sense imparted to the action by the adverb or preposition.

"On" with the gerund, denoting simultaneity or continuance is translated by pag prefixed to the root, with the possessive case of the agent and the accusative of the object (if any) following.

On my finishing this work I shall read.	Pagtapus co nitòng gauá, acó,i, babasá.
On striking twelve o'clock we shall go to rest.	Pagtogtog nang á lasdoce (Sp.), magpapahiñgá tayo.
On my father going upstairs, he fell down.	Pagpanhic nang amá co,i, naholog siyá.
On his preaching, rain came down.	Pagpañgáral niyá nagmulá ang olán.

If the action is past or complete, pagca, instead of pag, is prefixed to the root, with the same construction.

After having finished my breakfast I shall go church.	Pagcatapus nang aqing pamáhao, magsisimbá acó.
On having paid for the shoes, I bought a bed.	Capagcabáyad co nang sapin, bungmili acó nang isa'ng hihigáan.

"After" with the gerund is translated by pagca.

After dining.	Pagepapanhali.
After saying this, he embraced his uncle.	Pagcasabi niyá nitó yungmácap siyá sa caniyàng amain.
The mass over, the priest took chocolate.	{ Pagcamisa, nagsicolate ang pare.

If other prepositions are used before the gerund, the infinitive or verbal noun may be used in Tagalog with the proper particle preceding.

In making use of gunpowder great care should be taken.	Sa pag-gamit nang pólvora (Sp.) i, magpapacaiñgat ang tauò.
This (kind of) herb is good for curing toothache.	Ytóng camantiguí ay mabuti sa paggamot sa saquit nang ñgipin.

PARTICLES AND WORDS USED AS DIFFERENT PARTS OF SPEECH.

TOUI.

Touí is an adverb meaning "always" and has sometimes the conjunctive sense of "whenever".

Always, constantly.	Touíng tóu, touí nang touí.
You are constantly busy.	Touíng touí mayróon cang abala.
Whenever you read something.	Touíng bumasa ca nang anomán.
Whenever he writes.	Touíng siyá,i, sumúlat or sungmusúlat.

Touí may also stand for an adjective.

What is he going to fry it with? He is going to fry it with beans and that will be our course.

FIFTY FIRST LESSON.
YCALIMANG POUO,T, YSANG PAGARAL.

USE AND INTERCHANGE OF TENSES.

The Tagalog language is in the use of tenses, as in everything else, very lax. It has already been said that the root alone may be used with some adverb or word importing time to express every tense. The following directions about the use of tenses are however given to assist the learner to some understanding of the subject.

The present indefinite is used for any actual action whether it is represented as habitual, true, or as going on at the time it is being spoken of.

He visits her every other day.	{ Dinadálao niyá siyá sa touíng da-lauàng árao.
Her niece goes to mass every holyday.	{ Ang caniyàng pamanguing babaye nagsisimbà touíng árao nang piesta . (corr. from Sp. word fiesta , "feast")
He bows to, salutes her.	Bungmabati siyá sa caniyá.
The bird is pecking.	Nanunuca ang ibon.
The leader is writing.	Sungmusúlat, nasúlat ang pono.

This same tense serves for the past indefinite of the progressive conjugation with some adverb denoting past time, or without it if the epoch is otherwise expressed or understood.

The children were yesterday playing in the garden.	Naglalaró cahapon ang mañga bata sa halamanan.
I was dressing myself when she entered my room.	Nagdadamit acó nang pungmásoc siyá sa aquing silid.
You were running.	Tungmatacbò cayó cañgina.

The same sense of continuance may be expressed by the adverb pa, "still".

Stars are shining.	Nagniningning pa ang mañga bituin.
--------------------	------------------------------------

The past indefinite (when the action is not simultaneous with any other) and present perfect tenses are expressed alike.

Jesus Christ resuscitated on the third day after his death.	Nabúhay olí si Jesucristo sa yeatlóng árao nang caniyàng pagcamatáy.
I have finished the work.	Nagtapus acó nang gauá.
I gave them yesterday your books.	{ Ybinigáy co na sa canilá cahapon ang mañga libro mo.

The pluperfect exists in Tagalog only as a remote degree of the past and hence the completive particle na, "already"; after the simple past serves as a means of expressing what is called the past perfect tense, especially when two past actions, one of which is anterior to the other, are compared. The form of the pluperfect with naca and na is merely supplemental.

I had already eaten yesterday when you arrived. Nacacáin na acó cahapon nang dung-mating ca.
 The servant had already looked for the cat that disappeared when Frank found her. (it) } Pinaghánap na nang alila ang pu-sang naualá, nang naquita ni Quicoy.

The future indefinite is used in the proper way for any action to be executed at some future time.

The Son of God will come down again on Earth to judge the living and the dead. Ang Anac nang Dios ay mananáog olí sa lupa, hohocoman niyá ang nagñag-bubúhay pa at ang nañgamatáy na.

But it is also employed to express the English infinitive which comes after a verb importing initiative, start.

I am going to study. Acó,i, magaáral.
 The priest is going to read. Ang pare ay babasá.
 He is going to eat. Siyá,i, cacáin.
 We are going to get out. Camí, aalis na.
 You are going to write. Cayó,i, susúlat.
 They are going to sleep. Matutúlog na silá.
 My mother is going to say her prayers. Magdarasal si iná.

What has been said above about the past perfect applies also to the future perfect; na, for the same reason, postponed to the simple future, forms the perfect.

I shall have cooked the fish you charged me with when you come back. Lolotoin co na ang isdá na iyóng ypinagbilin sa aquin cun icáo,i, bumalie.
 The house will have been destroyed by moths when you are ready to tenant it. } Sisirain na nang anáy ang báhay cun matolóy cang mamáhay.

The imperative, besides its own proper use, also serves for the present subjunctive with some conjunction of doubt or purpose.

If I write. Cun sumúlat acó.
 Although he go there. Paróon man siyá.
 Endeavour to be virtuous that you may attain eternal life. Magpacabanal ca nang icáo,i, macapagcamit nang búhay ualáng hangán.

We know already that the tenses of the subjunctive mood are expressed by the corresponding ones of the indicative with the proper particles either preceding or following.

I should pay for it if I had any money. } Babayaran co sana cun acó,i, may caroonan.
 Provided you do not do it. Houag mo lamáng gaoin.
 Would to God he would come. Pumaritó nauá siyá.
 Should that be true I would kill him. } Cun iyán sana,i, totoò papatayin co siyá.
 Obey your father, lest you be punished. } Sumónod ca sa iyóng amá maca parusahan ca.

INTERCHANGE.

It is very frequent in Tagalog to use one tense for another, the idea of tense being but somewhat accessory.

Don't carry about your infant brother in your arms.	Houag mo calunñgin and capatid mong bungsó.
To declare, to lay before.	Magpaháyag.
To cloak, to connive at.	Maglñhim.
Hiddenly, deceitfully.	Sa lñhim.
Here, here it is.	Naitó.
There it is.	Nandiyán, nandóon.
Before doing, before being done.	Bagó gumauá, bagó gaoin.
Before doing this.	Bagó gaoin itó.
Before your writing this letter.	Bagó mo sulatin itó.
Beginning, commencement.	Pono, mola.
Edge, point, extremity.	Doló.
End.	Catapusan, hangán, cahanganan.
God is increate.	Ang Dios ay ualáng puno,t, duló.
He is eternal.	Ualá Siyáng hangán.
Even so, even being so.	Gayón man.
Even your sin being so.	Gayón man ang casalanan mo.
Besides. (preposition).	Bucod pa, bucod namán.
Besides this.	Bucod pa ritó, bucod pa sa ritó.
Besides that.	Bucod namán sa róon.
Wherever. (conjunction).	Sáan man.
Wherever you go.	Sáan man paróon ca.
However, whatever. (conjunctions)	Matáy man.
However, whatever you think of it.	Matáy mong isipin.
Whereas, wherefore, therefore, since, for that reason, that is the reason why.	Cayá, cayá ñga.
That is the reason why he is here.	Cayá ñga nariritó siyá.
To prepare one's self.	Gumayac.

FIFTY FIRST EXERCISE.

Have you seen my brother? I have not seen him. Has the servant already arrived? He has not yet arrived. Have you taken my book? I have not taken it. Has he met his sister-in-law? Yes, when he was going out she arrived. Who gave you that ring? My aunt gave it me when my father was still here at home. Did your daughter catch the butterfly? No, when she was about to catch it, it disappeared from her sight. Did her mother call her? Yes, when she was about to come downstairs, her mother called her. Do you forget me? I don't forget you. Do you pay attention to what I am saying to you? I pay close attention to what you say. What do you order me to do? Don't abandon your friends. What did he enjoin me before? Before you go to bed, pray. (first) What did you say to me? Before you write, think of what you are going to say. Why does she not eat? She does not eat, because she is not hungry. Why do you make the sign of the cross? Because my mother told me, before your doing something, make the sign of the cross. Why does [not your father allow Mary to read this book? Because before she reads it he wants to examine it. Where shall we go after dining? We shall go to the beach after dinner. What shall I do after reading. After you read, write (also). What shall I do after reading the letter? After your reading the letter, give it to me. When did you receive my letter? I received your letter after I had already written. What did his brother do? When he saw his master he concealed himself. What has happened? On my doing what you ordered me, he forbade me to do it. What did you say to him? On my trying to speak to him he refused to listen and went away; but when the mass was over he called out to me. Why do you not study? I cannot study. Can your son not write? He can write, but he cannot speak. Can he pronounce? He cannot pronounce. Can they not declare it? They cannot declare it. Can they not fail to go? They cannot fail to go. How can that be? It is ordered so by law. Was not that made publicly? No, it was made secretly. Where is my watch? Here it is. Where is your father? There he is. Where does this road begin? It begins at the beach. How was your female-cousin wounded? She was wounded with the point of a pin. Who created God? God is increate and eternal. Is He merciful? His mercy is endless, however great your sins may be He will pardon them; besides that, He helps man through virtue. Where is He? He is everywhere, wherever you may go there He is and whatever you do, He sees it. Since it is so, prepare yourself to be one day in His presence.

FIFTY SECOND LESSON.
YCALIMANG POUO,T, DALAUANG PAGARAL.

PECULIARITIES.

Proper auxiliary verbs, as they are conceived in other languages, do not exist in Tagalog; but, in a certain sense, it may be said that uulá, in the negative, mayróon and may, but especially the latter, in the affirmative, are used somewhat after the manner in which "not to have", "have not", etc.; "to have", "have", etc., are used in English, only that they adapt themselves to every tense. The English impersonals "there to have", "there not to have"; "there not to be", "there to be", "there is", "there is not", etc., followed by a noun in a partitive sense or a past participle, may be translated, respectively, by may and uulá, with the proper tense in Tagalog after them.

Has he not eaten any bread?	¿Uulá siyáng bagá quináng tinápáy.?
He has eaten some bread.	Siyá,i, may quináng tinápáy.
Is there no one eating.?	¿Uulá bagáng cungmacáin.?

It was enacted to serve in the army.	May ypinagotos na maglingcod sa hocbó.
It will be resolved to proceed up to the end.	May ypasisiyáng ytóloy.

Mayróon is used for "to have to" with the agent in the nominative case and the verb which stands for its direct complement following in the corresponding tense or that peculiar to Tagalog, in the passive.

What have they to say?	¿Mayróon bagá siláng sasabihin.?
They have to say that....	Mayróon siláng sinasabi na....
Had you to buy something.?	} ¿Mayróon bagá cayóng binibiling ano- mán.?
We had to pay the debt.	Mayróon camíng binayarang ótang.
Shall I have anything to do.?	¿Mayróon bagá acóng gagaoín.?
You shall have to sweep the door-sill.	Ycaó ay mayróong naualisang pintoan.

May is also used before a common noun in a sense of ownership, parentage or appertenance.

The owner, the proprietor.	Ang may ari.
the father, one of the parents.	Ang may anac.
The maker.	Ang may gauá.
Author, inventor, fabricator, designer.	May cathá.
Who composed these verses.?	¿Sino ang may cathá nitòng tula.?
The Creator.	Ang may lalang, may capal.
The powerful man.	Ang may capangyarihang tauò.

God, our Lord is the Creator and the Almighty.	} Ang Dios, Pañginóon natin, siyá ang may lalang at ang may capangyarihan sa lahat.

May=meý is put before substantive roots having a passive force, and converts them into adjectives.

Sick.	May saquit.
Guilty, culprit.	„ sala.
Wise, learned.	„ dónong.
Denticulated, toothed.	„ ñgipin.
Golden, gold-yielding.	„ guintò.

May=meý is still used preceded by sa for the preposition "near".

Near the tree.	Sa may cáhoy.
„ „ house.	„ „ báhay.
„ „ church.	„ „ simbahan.
What is that near the border of the sea.?	¿Anò cayá yaóng na sa may tabí nang dágat.
That near the sea is a pirogue.	} Yaóng na sa may dágat ay isàng } bangca.

Another peculiarity of Tagalog is the using of some roots in an absolute impersonal verbal manner for every tense. The roots most commonly made use of in such way, are:

Coming from, deriving.	Gáling.
Concluded, made up.	Yari.
Finished, ended.	Tapús.
Condign. (punishment)	Súcat.
Deserving, worthy, just, right, proper.	Dápat.
Wishing, willing.	Ybig.

Not knowing.	Ayauán.
Refusing, not willing.	Ayáo.
It is, was, will be said; he, she, they, says, say, said; will be said.	{ Dáo, conó.

Dáo and conó are always postponed to the verb, dáo being far more in use.

It is said you are very rich.	Mayamang mayaman ca dáo.
It was said you were dead.	Namatáy ca dáo.
It will be said he will become mad.	Maoolol siyá dáo.
He says let him go out.	Lumabás siyá dáo.
They say they are not willing.	Nanáyao conó silá.
He says he will study.	Magaáral dáo siyá.

Ayáo governs the noun or pronoun in the nominative or possessive case, according to whether the sentence is active or passive.

Are you not willing to enter.?	¿Ayáo cang pumásoc.?
I refused to marry.	Nayáo acóng magasáua, or, ayáo acóng nagasáua.
Will you refuse to give my money back.?	¿Ayáo mong ysaolí ang salapí co.?

Ayauán = auán is used absolutely in a grudging manner for "I don't know", "I don't care".

Do you know what your master said.?	{ ¿Naaalaman mo cun anò ang salí
I don't know, I don't care.	{ nang iyóng pañginón.?
	Ayauán, auán.

Although ybig is sometimes used actively, it adapts itself better to the passive.

Do you wish to read.?	¿Ybig mong (ca) bumasa.?
I wish to read the book.	Ybig cong basahin ang libro.
Did he wish to work.?	¿Ynibig niyang magtrabajo? (1).
He wished to pay his debt.	{ Ynibig niyang bayaran ang caniyang
	{ ótang.
Will your friend be willing to come here.?	¿Yibiguin bagá nang caibigan mo paritò.?
He will be willing to come here to see you.	{ Yibiguin niyang paritohan ca niyá.

Dápat and súcat, as absolute impersonal verbs, are used in passive sentences; dápat, generally for reward, and súcat for penalty.

It is just to punish him.	Súcat siyang hampasín or parusahan.
It will be right to hang them.	Súcat siláng bitayin.
He deserves to be granted the prize.	Dápat siyang pagcalooban nang ganti.
They deserved to obtain the office.	Dápat niláng camtán ang catongcolan.

Tapus and yari are used with the particle na after them; tapus, may indifferently refer to time or work, yari, only to the work.

The rain is over.	Tapús na ang olán.
In the month of November southern winds will cease.	Sa bouán nang Noviembre tapús na or matatapus ang taghabagat.
Have you completed your work.?	¿Yari na ang gauá mo.?
It is already completed. (finished).	Yari na.

(1) The letter j, which is exotic, is still retained in some Sp. words as trabajo, etc.

Gáling, as many other roots, may be used without the proper composition for the sake of briefness when stress on the action can be dispensed with and the tense is determined otherwise or is tacitly understood.

Where do you come from?	¿Sáan ca gáling.?
I come from Tayabas.	Gáling acó sa Tayabas.
Yesterday, when we met your servant, where was he coming from.?	Cahapón, nang nasalobong namin ang alila mo, ¿sáan siyá gáling.?
He was coming from the well.	Gáling siyá sa bucal.

In the same way, many other verbal roots can be used absolutely in the imperative for briefness' sake, especially when the verb is used without any direct or indirect complement. This manner of using the verb is greatly in use among natives and is somewhat interjectional.

Walk!	Lácad.
Take!	Cuha.
Run!	Tacò.
Run for it!, overtake!	Tacohin.
Drag along.	Hila.
Eat!	Cáin.
Come on.	Hali ca, tóloy.

Sometimes the imperative is used with the verbal ligament for a greater emphasis if the verb ends in a consonant.

Kill it.	Patayi.
Receive it.	Tangapi.
Wrap it.	Baloti.
Drink.	Ynomi.

It is not only in the imperative that the root alone, can be used without the verbal particle. Some verbal roots when they are not carried away from their original sense by some modifying verbal particle, are used for every tense if the latter is otherwise determined by some other words. (1).

What do you bring.?	¿Anò ang dalà mo.?
I bring nothing to-day.	Ualá acóng dalà ngayón,
Yesterday I brought some fruit.	Ang dalà co cahapo,i, buñga.
What will he be willing to have to-morrow.?	¿Anòng ibig niyà búcas.?
What does he say.?	¿Anòng sabì niyà.?
He says that.....	Sabì niyà,i,.....

Some compound words either nouns or adjectives, are fit to be used absolutely as verbs.

Wise, learned.	Marúnong.
Does he know.?	¿Marúnong siyá.?
Do you know how to read.?	¿Marúnong cang bumasa.?
No, sir, I cannot read.	Hindí po, di acó marúnong bumasa.
Do they know how to speak English.?	¿Marúnong siláng magúicang inglés.?
They do not know how to speak English; but they know how to speak Tagalog.	Hindí silá marúnong magúicang inglés; figuní,t, marúnong silá magúicang tagalog.

Need, want; it is necessary.	Cailañgan.
What do I need.?	¿Anòng cailañgan co.?

(1) We insist that this important point be not lost sight of by the student.

You need to be cured.	Cailaňgan cang gamotín.
They need to work.	Cailaňgan silíng magtrabajo.
The orphan.	Ang olilá.
To leave off.	Iuan.
Leave off reading.	Iuan mo ang pagbasá.
The poor follow, the unfortunate.	Ang mahírap.
Have you no parents.?	¿Ualá cayóng magugúlang.?
No, Sir, we are parentless.	Hindí po, camí, po, maňga olilá.
Pure, genuine.	Taganás, pulós.
This ring is of genuine gold.	{ Ytóng singsing na itò,i, taganás na guintò.
That image is pure ivory.	Yyáng laráuang iyá,i, polós na garing.
Customary, habitual.	Caraníuang, caratihan.
Customary dress.	Caraníuang damtín.
Inveterate habit.	Caratihan ásal.
Enough, sufficient.	Casiyahan, caiguihan.
That is sufficient.	Yyá,i, caiguihan na.
To pass, to elapse.	Lumipas.
The time has passed when . . .	Lungmipas na ang panahón na . . .
To exceed, to excel, to overdo.	Lumalo.
He excels in wisdom.	Lungmalalo ang pagcarúnong niyá.

FIFTY THIRD LESSON.

YCALIMANG POUO,T, TATLONG PAGARAL.

USE OF NANG and SA IN THE OBJECTIVE CASE.

The use of nang or sa before a common noun, direct object of an active sentence, is generally decided by the nature of the action. Nang, which is, by far, better adapted to the direct object, if it is represented by a common noun, is used:

With verbs denoting assimilation on the part of the agent.

To obtain glory.	Magcamit nang calualhatian.
To eat cherries.	Cumáin nang lombóy.
I found money.	Nacapólot or nacaquita acó nang salapi.
He borrowed ten dollars.	Ungmótang siyá nang sangpouong piso.
We take the book.	Cungmocola camí nang libro.
They will receive fifteen dollars.	Tatangap silá nang labing limang piso.
Buy a farm.	Bumili ca nang búquid.

With verbs the action of which necessarily requires two complements (accusative and dative) either expressed or understood, although they may mean expulsive acts on the part of the subject. In such cases the direct object (generally a thing) goes with nang and the indirect (generally a person), with sa.

He writes two letters to your father.	Nagsusúlat siyá nang dalauang súlat sa amá mo.
I sold my estate to the natives.	Nagbili acó nang ari co sa maña tagalog.
We shall give the eggs to the baker.	Magbibigáy tayo nang maña itlog sa magtitinápay.
Send the trunk to the carpenter.	Magpadalá ca nang cabán sa anloague.
The uncle lent the money.	Ang amá,i, nagpaótang nang salapi.
They had said everything to the master.	Nacapagsabi na silá nang lahat sa pañginóon.
You will have returned the book to the priest.	Nacapagsaolí na marahil cayó nang libro sa pare.
I granted him permission.	Nagcalóob acó sa caniyá nang pahin- tólot. (1).

Before any common noun, the direct object of the sentence, if it is used in a partitive or indefinite sense.

Put some rice (the boiled rice which constitutes natives' principal food), on the fire.	Magsaapúy ca nang canin or moris- queta.
---	---

(1). The student should not lose sight of the fact that these sentences are better constructed in the passive. If they are here expressed actively, it is only to make more noticeable the use of nang and sa.

He counts money.	Bungmibílang siyá nang salapí.
We ask for something.	Hungmihíngi camí nang anomán.
Ask some vinegar on passing by.	Maquiráan ca nang suca.
They have sown paddy.	Naghasic silá nang pálay.
They shall gather (cut off with the fingers) some betel leaves.	{ Mañgíngitil silá nang mamin.
Gather some flowers.	{ Mitás or mamitás ca nang bulac-lac.
Don't pick up any quarrels.	Houag cang humánap nang ósap.
Will you have some bread.?	¿Ybig mo nang tinápay.?
I want a little.	Ybig co nang cauntí.

Nang is generally used in all cases not otherwise specified in the subjoined paragraphs for the use of sa.

He cannot lift the vat.	Hindí siyá macabuhát nang tapayan.
We build our house of stone.	Nagbabató camí nang báhay namin.
Peter reduced the price.	Nagbabá Si Pedro nang halagá.
Drive away the poultry.	Bumúgao cayó nang manoc.
They will undo (untie) the agreement.	Cacalag silá nang tipán or pinagcaisahan.
It is a sin to listen to (hearing) obscenities.	Sala ang dumiñgig nang uicang mahálay.
Paint the board.	Humibo ca nang tabla . (Sp.)
Why did not the servant transfuse the water into the vat.	¿Báquit hindí nagsalin ang alila nang túbig sa tapayan.
Snuff the candle.	{ Pumótol ca nang pabílo (Sp., "wick")
Correct (rectify) your bad habits.	{ nang candíla.
	Tumóuir ca nang masamáng úsal mo.

Sa is used before the direct object in the active:

In sentences the verb of which obtains in the causative sense of maca conjugation.

Modesty enhances woman's beauty.	{ Ang cahinhinan ay nacagagandá sa mañga babaye.
His arrival caused pleasure to his mother.	{ Ang pagdating niyá,i, nacatóua sa caniyáng iná.
Why does war cause sorrow to your sister.?	¿Báquit cayá ang pagbabacá,i, nacalulumbáy sa capatid mong babaye.?
This fruit is green and will harm my children.	Ytóng boñgang itó,i, hiláo pa,t, macasamá sa mañga anac co.
It is the remedies that cure the sick.	{ Ang mañga gamot ay siyáng nacacagaling sa mañga may saquit.
His brags cause fright to the boys.	{ Ang mañga cayabañgan niyá,i, nacaatatacót sa mañga bata.
The tears of David washed his couch.	{ Ang mañga luha ni David nacadilig se caniyáng hihigaan.

With verbs which more or less require a person for their direct object.

To salute, to bow at, to greet.	Magbati, bumati.
Salute the priest.	Bumati ca sa pare.
To betray.	Magcanuló.
Saint Peter betrayed his master.	{ Si San Pedro,i, nagcanoló sa caniyáng maestro.
To cure.	Gumamot.
Jesus Christ cured the sick.	{ Si Jesucristo,i, gungmamot sa mañga n.ay saquit.
To whip, to cudgel.	Humampás.
Shall we whip our servant.?	¿Hahampás tayo sa alila natin.?

To incite, to cajole, to spur on.	Pamongcahi.
She cajoles the man. (male).	Namomoncahi siyá sa lalaqui.
To slap.	Tumampal, magtampal.
I will slap the scoundrel.	Tatampal acó sa tampalasan or tacsil.

In certain verbs which may take a thing or a person for their direct complement, nang, comes before the thing; sa, before the person.

To pay the (for the) maintenance.	Magbáyad nang yquinabubúhay.
He paid the physician.	{ Nagbáyad siyá sa médico or mangagamot.
To obey (to keep) the commandments of God.	{ Sumonod nang mañga otos nang Dios.
Your friend does not obey his mother.	{ Ang caibigan mo,i, hindi sungmosonod sa inà niyà.
Ask (inquire) the reason of that.	{ Magtanong ca nang cadahilanang niyán.
Ask the servant whether he swept the bath-room.	{ Tumanong ca sa alila cun niualisan na niyà ang paligóan.

Sa is also generally used with indicative verbs, that is to say, those signifying pointing or aiming at, if the action, not the effect, is meant.

To look at the sky.	Tumiñgin sa láñgit.
I aimed at the general.	Tumurlá acó sa general . (Sp.)
They point to the thief.	Tungmотор silá sa magnanácao.
We will shoot (fire) at the birds.	Babaril camí sa mañga ibon.
To throw arrows at.	Magpana sa

To wring, to twist.	Míhit, magpíhit.
To turn, to retract, to fall back.	Magbalic, bumalic, malic.
Turn your heart to God.	Magbalic cang lóob sa Dios.
To join, to approach.	Umagápáy.

To be in a family way.	Dalàng bata, tauò.
To bear anger, envy.	Dalàng póot.
To have fear.	Dalàng tácot.
To carry shame along.	Dalàng hiya.

Dalà is used in the sense of having over one, with words similar to those in the examples and it may be conjugated by mag.

This boy carries shame about him.	Nagdadalàng hiya itòng batang itò.
To swoon away, to be giddy.	Mahilo.
I swooned away at the shock, stroke.	Yquinahilo co ang pocpoc.
To stop.	Humintó, maghintó.

FIFTY THIRD EXERCISE.

What must I do to obtain the pardon of my trespasses? If you want to obtain the pardon of your sins, make a good confession. Do you write when you study? When I study I do not write. What does Joseph's father say to him? He is saying to him, don't eat when writing. Did you enjoin the children not to sleep when in prayer? I did. Why do they stop there? They stop there to see a ship under sail. Do you hold it to be bad to listen to obscenities? I do hold it to be very bad. Does your master repute it as a good thing to serve God? Yes, indeed. Where do you go? I go to Manila. When will you come back? I shall come back in the evening. Does your son refuse to appear before his master? He refused to present himself, for he fears punishment. When will he read the book I gave him? He will read it next Sunday. Do Americans think of going away? They don't think going away. Why did you not reply to the priest? I was overcome with shame. Will he make a retraction of his insults? He will retract his foul words. Why do you not turn the back to your wrongs? Because I still bear anger towards my enemies. Whom does that school-boy fear? He fears his master. Did the old woman swoon away? She swooned away, but she soon recovered from her fit and now is growing calmer. What bustle is that? It is the children that are romping about in the street. Did you tell them to be silent? I told them to be silent. Do natives plot? They plot sometimes openly (publicly) sometimes hiddenly. Who use to chew tobacco? Americans use to chew tobacco. Do natives chew betel nut? The majority do. Do mice nibble at the cheese? Mice nibbled at the cheese. What is the dog gnawing? It is gnawing a bone. At whom does that boy make grimaces? He does not make grimaces at any body, he smiles. Did the sailor go beyond The Cape? He did not go beyond, as he was overawed. What miracles did Jesus Christ work in former times? He wrought many miracles. Are miracles wrought at present? No, there are no miracles wrought nowadays nor probably will there be any in the future. What did he say? I will tell you in a few words what he said. How many inhabitants are there in this town? According to the census taken last year, there are about seven thousand inhabitants.

FIFTY FOURTH LESSON.
YCALIMANG POUO,T, APAT NA PAGARAL.

THE ADVERB.

Adverbs in Tagalog are not distinguished by any prevailing termination corresponding to the English "ly". Those expressed by a single root are few when compared with those including composition with a prefix or some other separate self-signifying particle or word. Many of them have the adjectival composition of ma, others have the particle sa before them, there being also a number of adverbial clauses consisting of roots with particles or words either preceding or following them. The majority of adverbs if not all (monosyllables excepted) admit of declension and conjugation as is the case in Tagalog with most roots and even particles. Many adjectives and some prepositions and conjunctions are used adverbially.

ADVERBS OF MANNER.

Of these, the following are simple:

As, so, like.	Gaya, ga, para. paris.
Purposely, knowingly, intentionally, designedly.	Tiquis, pacsá.
Willingly.	Cusa.
Hardly, scarcely.	Bahaguiá.
Especially.	Bucod, tañgi.
Conjointly, as well as.	Sabáy.
According.	Ayon, alinsonod.
As if selling.	Ganagbibili.
This lizard is like a caiman (is caimanlike.)	Gaboaya itòng tocong itò.
He did it on purpose.	Tiniquis niyà, pinagsá niyà.
You are like me.	Ycáo,i, paris co.
It is hardly sufficient.	Bahaguiá na magcasiyâ.
He has been especially summoned.	Bucor siyáng natáuag.
Man as well as woman, the man and the woman too.	Ang laláqui casabáy nang babaye.

The following are compound adverbs of manner.

So, thus, that way.	Ganóon, gayón.
So, thus, in this manner.	Ganitò.
So, thus, as that.	Ganiyán.
Finally, at last.	Catapustapusan, cauacasuacasan.

English adverbs of manner ending in "ly" are generally expressed by the corresponding adjectives.

Swiftly.	Matulín.
Quickly.	Madalí.

Slowly, understandingly.	Marahan.
Well, goodly.	Mabuti, magaling.
Badly.	Masamá.
Clearly.	Malíno.
Carefully.	Mahúsay.
Strongly.	Malacás.
Do it quickly.	Gaoin mong madalí.
Wrap it up carefully.	Balotin mong mahúsay.
He pushed the boat strongly.	{ Ytinolac niyà nang malacás ang bangca.

It is well to say, however, that not all the adjectives can be used as adverbs. In the latter, those, for instance, which are simple as lupit, olol, etc., are included. Of the ones formed with ma, those only denoting manner or degree are used adverbially; but not the others as marúnong, mabaet, etc..

Some substantive roots are made adverbs of manner by preceding them with the particle sa.

Openly, publicly.	Sa háyag.
Hiddenly, secretly.	Sa íhim.
Commonly, customarily.	Sa ogali, sa caogalían.
Judiciously.	Sa bait.

Adverbs admit of a superlative degree in the same way as adjectives.

Very carefully.	Mahúsay na mahúsay.
Very well.	Mabuting mabuti.
Very badly.	Masamáng masamá.
Very slowly.	Ynot inot, marahan dahan.

ADVERBS OF PLACE.

Many of these are verbal roots preceded by sa.

Where.?	¿Sáan.?
Here, hither.	Ditò, dini.
There. (near you)	Diyán.
There. (at that place)	Dóon.
Near, close.	Malápit, sa may, sa síping, sa tabi.

 { sa misa.
 It is late. (in the morning). Tanghali na.
 It is late. (in the evening). Gabí na.

For the proper use of the conjunctive adverbs the following rules should be taken into account.

Sa refers to a principal action immediately following the secondary one to which it is applied. It indicates rather punctuality than simultaneity.

On his saying these words, he died. { Sa pagsabi niyá nitóng mañga uica ay { namatáy.
 On their noticing the earthquake, they ran away. Sa pagcamalay ni á nang lindol, silá,i, tungmacbò.

Pag refers to the subordinate action which it represents as accomplished or in progress with some other simultaneous action. It goes with the possessive case of the agent and the accusative of the object.

As soon as I told it to him. Pagsabi co sa caniyá.
 No sooner he went in. Pagpásoc niyá.
 As soon as you greet him, come back. Pagbatí mo sa caniyá mouí ca.
 As my father went away, he arrived. Pagalís nang amá co, dungmating siyá.
 On my arriving at the house, I saw an innumerable crowd. Pagdating co sa báhay naquita co ang isang catiponan di mabflang na tauò.

Pagca is used in the same sense and with the same construction. It points out the action as past and does not indicate simultaneity.

No sooner he had finished the work than he came to pay me a visit. Pagcatapus niyá nang gauá, dinálao acó niyá capagdaca.

After studying we shall go for a walk. Pagcapagaáral namin, magpapasial camí.
 After striking nine o'clock, we shall go for rest. Pageatugtog nang á las nueve, magpahifiga tayo.

Pagca is sometimes used for "from", "since".

From my infancy down. Pagcabata co.

Capag, capagca refer to an action altogether past and perfect.

After his having finished speaking, they embraced each other. Capagcapañgósap niyá, nagyacapan silá.
 The function being over, I went home. Capagcatapus nang piesta, napasabáhay acó.
 After having concluded that, they began to dance. Capagiyari nilá niyón nagmula siláng magsayáo.

Capag and capagca are very important particles both of them referring to an action altogether past; capag, represents the action at the start; capagca, as accomplished and perfected, and they may be rendered, respectively, "on starting", "on having finished"...; but if the action is such as not to admit of duration, both particles may be used in the perfective sense.

They should be considered in two ways: as present participles and as adverbs. As participles, they adhere to the verbal particle which the nature of the action requires, with the possessive case of the agent following.

After his commencing to teach. Capagáral niyá.
 After I began to study. Capagpagáral co.
 After the priest starting to preach. Capagpañgáral nang pare.
 After your having finished saying that. Capagcasabihin mo iyán.
 After my having finished learning. Capagcapagáral co.
 After his having finished preaching. Capagcapañgáral niyá.
 After his arriving. Capagcadating or capagdating niyá.
 After my having thrown away my ring. Capagcaytapon or capagytapon co ang aquing singsing.

Capag, capagca and even pagca and pag, as adverbs, are written separately in the sense of "when", "on," and may govern the nominative case of the agent, with the verb in the active, if the action is represented as present, simultaneous or probable.

As soon as I receive a letter, I give an answer. Capag acó,i, tungmatanggap nang súlat, acó,i, sungmasagot.
 No sooner do I get up than I take a bath. Pagca acó,i, nabañgon ay naliligo acó.
 As soon as my son is twelve years old, I shall make him work. Pag ang aquing anac ay may labing dalauá ig taón, papilitin co siyang magtrabajo.

Pag is used with the negative in a sense of menace.

You shall see how I beat you. Pag hindi quitá paloin.
 If he does not come I shall not pay him. Pag hindi siyá pumarini ay hindi co siyá babayaran.

Pag is used for active verbal nouns; pagca, for intransitive ones.

The throwing down of bombs. Ang paghólog nang bomba. (Sp.)
 The falling down of the fruit. Ang pagcahólog nang boñga.

Pag, applied to actions admitting of time for their development, expresses the action as going on; pagca, as completed.

The growing light. Ang pagliuánag.
The clearness of day. Ang pagcaliuánag.

With regard to the government of pug and pagca in verbal nouns, great care should be taken in distinguishing whether the person is active or passive as to the action. Any disregard of this rule may lead to many striking mistakes.

The beheading of Saint John. (that is to say, inflicted on him) } Aug pagpógot cay San Juan.
The beheading by the executioner of } Ang pagpógot nang mamumúgot cay }
Mary Stuart. } María Estuardo.
The birth of The Holy Virgin. } Ang paggañganac cay María Santísima
The bringing forth of The Holy Vir- } Ang pañgañganac nang Santísima } gin. } Virgen.

Sacá, as an adverb, indicates more futurity than mamayá.

God made the skies first, and man } Guinauá nang Dios ang láñgit, sacá } long afterwards. } ang tauò.
He laughed, and then? Natauá siyá ¿at sacá?

Cun, nang; nóon, niyón or niyáon, as adverbs, cannot be used indiscriminately. Cun should be used in reference to the present or future tense.

When I go to Manila I shall buy a } Cun pumaróon acó sa Maynila ybi- } hat for you. } bili quitá nang sambalelo.
When Peter comes let me know of it. Cun darating Si Pedro alamín mo acó.

Cun may be used with the past indefinite tense if the action appears as performed customarily.

When I was in London, I went fre- } Cun acó,i, naroróon sa Londres, na- } quently to play. } pasasateatro acóng malñmit.

Nang is used with all degrees of the past tense.

When he came yesterday to visit me } Nang acó,i, dinálao niyá cahapon, }
I was sick. } nagcacasaquit acó.
When my sister arrived we had al- } Nang dumating ang capatid cong ba- } ready eaten. } baye nacacáñ na camí.

Nóon, niyón, niyáon, come at the beginning of a past narration. They lay stress on the epoch and not on the action.

On that day the battle was fought. } Nóon isang árao ay nangyari ang pag- } babacá.
In those times when Jesus Christ was } Nóon, nariritò pa sa lupa si Jesucristo. } still on Earth.

Bagò, as an adverb, always comes before the verb.

Before you marry think on it care- } Bagò ca magasáua pacaisipisipin mo } fully. } mona.
Before you read, sweep the room. } Bagò cang bumasa, ualisan mo ang silid.

Mona always comes after the verb and is largely used expletively.

Do it first. Gaoin mo mona.
Wait. Hintáy ca mona.

Endlessly, incessantly, without inter- } Ualáng humpáy, ualáng tahán, ualán } mission. } lícat.

Firstly, in first place.	Ona-onà, caonaonahan.
Forthwith, in the twinkling of an eye.	Sa sandalí, sumandalí, sa is'ng quisap matá.

How often do you change clothes.? I change to clean clothes every week.

FIFTY SIXTH LESSON.

YCALIMANG POUO,T, ANIM NA PAGARAL.

THE PREPOSITION.

The pliable condition of Tagalog words to perform the functions of different parts of speech applies largely to adverbs, prepositions and conjunctions. The mutual relations of words are expressed in Tagalog in several ways, only the purpose for which the words establishing the relations are made use of, according to the systematic division established by grammar, serve to classify them as adverbs or prepositions. Some of these aptly illustrate the difficulty of classifying Tagalog words according to the parts of speech usually recognised by grammarians. The nominal ligaments too, sometimes stand in Tagalog for prepositions.

To, at.	Sa, cay, caná.
Before, facing.	Sa harap, sa tapat.
Under.	Sa ilálim.
Near, by.	Sa mey, sa píling, sa síping.
With, along with.	Sa, nang, cay, caná, sabáy, acbáy.
With, by, through.	Nang, dahilan sa.
Against.	Laban sa.
Of.	Nang, sa, ni, cay, niná, caná, na, ng, g.
From.	Sa, nang, gáling sa, mula, mula sa.
In, at.	Sa.
Among.	Sa.
Between.	Sa, sa guitná, na sa guitná.
Towards, to.	Dapit, daco, sa daco.
Till, until.	Hangán.
To, as far as.	Hangán.
For.	Sa, cay, caná.
Without.	Ualá, cúláng.
On, upon, about.	Sa, nang, bágay sa, tongeol sa.
Behind.	Sa licod.

Sa, as a preposition, is for every case of a common noun, except the nominative, and the vocative (nominative of address). It should be put before the object of possession and not before the possessor when used in relation to the possessive case. Sa is exclusive for the dative.

The depth of the river.	{ Ang sa ílog na calaliman, or, ang calaliman nang ílog.
I wrote to the priest.	Sungmúlat acó sa pare.
This plant is for the garden.	Ytóng pananim itò, i, sa halamanan.
He is shooting (aiming at) wild boars.	Nagtuturlá siyá sa bábuy damó.
We shoot (arrows) at birds.	Pungmapana camí sa mañga ibon.
They look at the stars.	Tungmitíngin silá sa mañga bituín.

Sa governs the local ablative mainly indicating place, no matter whether the verb denotes rest, motion or direction.

I pray at home.	Nagdadasal acó sa báhay.
This child cries greatly at school.	Nagtatañgís itóng bata sa escuelahan.
He sleeps in bed.	Natotólog siyá sa hihigaan.
We shall play in the garden.	Maglalaró tayó sa halamanan.
They walked in the road.	Naglácad silá sa dáan.
You go to Cebú.	Napaparóon cayó sa Cebú.
The ship is bound for Manila.	Tungmotoñgò ang sasaquián (or ang dauong) sa Maynila.
This road leads to the beach.	Tungmotoñgò sa dalampásig itóng dáan itò.

Cay is for proper nouns of persons what sa is for common ones. What has been said of sa in the possessive case holds good also for cay. Due allowance should be made for the local ablative, as persons are not places.

John's house.	Ang cay Juang báhay, ang báhay ni Juan.
Mary's needle.	Ang cay Mariang caráyom, ang caráyom ni María.
I gave flowers to Jane.	Nagbigáy acó nang bulac-lac cay Juana.
That shirt is for Anthony.	Cay Antonio yaóng baro yaón.
I don't buy from Diana. (Chinese name).	Hindí acó bungmibili cay Diana. (better). Hindí si Diana ang binibilhan co.
He received the money from Robinson.	Tungmangap siyá nang pílac cay Robinson. Tinangapan niyá Si Robinson nang salapí.

Caná is cay for the plural of companionship.

The estate of the Wallaces.	Ang caná Wallace na búquid, ang búquid niná Wallace.
Smith, Bell & Co's warehouses.	Ang caná Smith Bell na mañga camálig, ang mañga camálig niná Smith Bell.
The book is for Arthur and his family.	Ang libro, i, caná Arturo.
He visited the García family.	Dungmálaro siyá caná García.
He ran for the Wheatleys.	Sungmondó siyá caná Wheatley. (better). Sinondó niyá siná Wheatley.
Your sister went out with her aunt.	Ang inyóng capatid na babaye unmalís casabáy nang caniyáng alí.
I walked along with my friend, with George, and with the La Rosa family.	Naglácad acó casamá nang aquing caibigan, ni Jorge, niná La Rosa.
He was by the tree.	Nariyán siyá sa may cáhoy.
I did it through charity.	Guinauá co dahilan sa áua.
Blasphemy is a sin against God.	Ang pagtotoñgáyao ay casalanang laban sa Dios.

Nang, as a preposition governing the possessive and objective (direct object) case, has been so fully treated of in foregoing chapters as to dispense with the need of further explanations. Nang (preposition) governing the ablative case denotes the instrument when the latter has not been expressed in the proper passive form of the verb.

Cover that with a mat.	Tacpán mo iyán nang banig.
He whipped his servant with a string.	Hinampás niyá ang caniyáng alila nang lúbir.

Why did my mother do this with a needle?	{	¿Báquit guinauá ni iná itò nang caráyom.?, or, ¿báquit ang yguinauá ni iná nitò ay ang caráyom.?
He is praised by every body.		Pinupuri siyá nang lahat.
They killed the cock-roach by stamping it.	{	Pinatáy nila ang ipis nang yápac.
He obtained the office through the influence of his father.		Nang mamaguitan nang caniyáng ama ay quinamtán niyá ang catungecolan.

The English preposition "of" is translated into Tagalog several ways. When denoting possession it is always translated by nang, ni, niná, placed before the possessor (but after the thing of possession) or by sa, cay, caná, in the manner above explained, according to the former being represented by a common, a personal or a companionship noun.

The ear of the dog.	Ang taiñga nang aso.
Joseph's book.	Ang libro ni José.
The house of the Makays.	Ang báhay niná Mackay.

The same is the case if the relation is merely adjectival.

The bank of the river.	Ang tabi nang ílog.
The glory of Heaven.	Ang caloualhatian nang lañgit.

For translating English compound nouns having the preposition "of" understood between their members, the following directions are given.

If the relation is one of matter, the two members are tied together by the nominal ligaments, the matter coming after the thing.

Stone house.	Báhay na batò.
Gold ring.	Singsing na guintó.
Silver looking-glass.	Salamíng pílac.
Steel pen.	Plumang patalim.

If the relation is one of origin, the placing of the two words in the same order may be sufficient, the ligament should be used if the word ends in a vowel, although sa is generally introduced without any ligament.

Berlin flowers.	Bulac-lac Berlin, bulaclac sa Berlin.
Ilocos man.	Taòng Iloco, tauò sa Iloco.
Calamianes wax.	{ Pacquit Calamianes, pacquit sa Calamianes.

The ligaments stand for "of" in the relation of contents.

Two pecks of rice.	Dalauàng salop na bigás.
A glass of water.	Ísàng vasong túbig.
A pitcher of cocoa-nut oil.	Ysáng tapayang lañgís.

Sa, also expresses application or the use a thing is intended for.

Prayer-book, book for praying.	Libro sa dasal.
Water-glass.	Vaso sa túbig, inomán.
Mass garments.	Damit sa pagmimisa.

Hangan is used both for time and place.

From to-day until to-morrow.	Búhat ñgayón hangáng búcas.
From here to Cavite.	Mula ditò hangán sa Cavite.

Other prepositions are translated according to their sense in the way already explained.

He forced a passage among the crowd. Sungmagasa, siyá sa caramihan.

Between the house and the garden.	} Sa guitná (paguitan) nang báhay at nang halamanan.
The path towards the forest.
The dog without a tail.	Ang landás sa dacong gúbat.
He speaks about the marriage.	Ang asong ualáng (ór cúláng) bontot.
The house behind the church.	} Nañgoñgosap siya tongcol sa pagaa-sáua.

Amiable.	Caibig-ibig.
Delightful.	Catouatóua, caligaligaya.
How delightful to listen to the singing of birds.	Caligaligaya paquiñgan ang huni nang mañga ibon.
Terrible, ghastly.	Catacottácot.
Horrible.	Casindacsindac.
Gloomy, sorrowful.	Calumbáylumbáy, calunoslunos.
Painful.	Cahapishapis.
Gallant, courageous, victorious.	Bayani.
To tear down, to cleave.	Lumápac.
Her house is a place of resort for many people.	Ang báhay niyá,i, báhay na pinapanhican nang maraming tauò.
Hell is a place of torment for sinners.	Ang impierno, ang pinaghihirapan nang mañga macasalanán.
Why do you not place those chairs facing each other.?	¿Báquit hindi mo pinagtatapat iyáng mañga upóan?
Put also the two beds facing each other.	Pagtapatín mo namán ang dalauàng hihigáan.
Why had you this child chastised.?	¿Anò,t, pinahampás mo itóng bata.?
Because he made light of me.	Sa pagca,t, acó,i, pinañgisihan niyá.
Don't laugh at the poor.	} Houag mong paglibaquin ang mañga duc-há.

FIFTY SIXTH EXERCISE.

Why is Ann always at the window? She is always at the window, because she likes to see passers-by. Why do you change to new clothes? I change to new clothes, because I must go to church. How many times does he undress himself every day? He only undress himself on going to bed. Is he empowered to imprison me? He has no power (authority) to do that, don't fear, he can do nothing to you. How can that be? It cannot be. Why cannot it be? Because it cannot happen. Am I very sick? No, you can still recover. Is he wise? No, but he can still become wise. How will you reward me? I have nothing with which to reward you. What has happened? There was an earthquake yesterday and our house tumbled down. Where is God? God is everywhere. Where is Jesus Christ now? Jesus Christ is now in Heaven at the right of the Father. Who is happy? The man who is in the grace of God is happy. Where is Peter's house? It is at the middle of the cocoa-plantation. With what did he sew his trowsers? He sewed them with a needle and some thread. With what shall I make this? Make it with an auger. Whose ships are these? They are Wise & Company's. Shall I write the letter in pencil? Yes, write it in pencil. How did he kill the wild boar? He killed it with a spear. How are the houses in your town? All of them but three are nipa houses. Have you bought any gold ear-rings? No, I have bought three wooden images. From where are those pieces of furniture? They are Vienna furniture. What kind of shell is that? It is Cavite shell. How many pecks of rice did you sell? I sold three pecks of rice and two bottles of wine. Where is the rice-pot? The rice-pot is at the corner of the table. Which cat is your friend looking for? The three-legged one. Which is the most courageous among you? The most courageous is Henry's friend. Do you wish to go by this pirogue? I don't wish to, it is a pirogue where many embark. Is there anything more horrible than an earthquake? An earthquake is, indeed, a horrible thing. Is John's house high? It is very high. How many houses has your father built? He has built three. Are they nipa or stone-houses? Two of them are stone, the other is wood. Do you like to live in a nipa-house? Yes, indeed, how delightful it is to live in a nipa-house. When do you go to your friend? I will go to him next Sunday.

FIFTY SEVENTH LESSON.

YCALIMANG POUO,T, PITONG PAGARAL.

THE CONJUNCTION.

Many words and particles which we are already acquainted with as adverbs or prepositions are likewise used as conjunctions for connecting two sentences or words in different ways, only their function in the sentence or clause serving to distinguish which part of speech they are.

The following may be classed as.

COPULATIVE CONJUNCTIONS.

And.	At, ay, ni, nang, sacá.
As well as, both, likewise, even.	Patí, sampón, sacá, sabáy, casan á
Also, even, likewise, besides, moreover, further, furthermore.	} Namán, pa.
Not only but.

At is well known as a copulative conjunction serving to link two nouns or independent sentences to each other.

Heaven and Earth.	Ang lánġit at lupa.
Angels, men, and animals, all of them were created by God.	} Ang mańga ángeles (Sp.), ang mańga tauò, at ang mańga hiyop ay paraparang quinapal nang Dios.
She plays and sings

Ay, the verbal ligament, may be used as a copulative conjunction at the beginning of an interrogative sentence, as connecting the sense to a mental reflection or to something previously said or understood.

Well now, why does he refuse.?	¿Ay báquit nanayáo siyá.?
And then.? what.?	¿Ay sacá, anò.?

As has been already said in foregoing lessons it is a peculiarity of the Tagalog language that two nouns, two pronouns, or a personal noun and a pronoun may be linked by the particle of the possessive case. In the latter case the pronoun, if in the singular, should be put in the plural. In the case of two pronouns joining, the order of first, second and third person should be kept, by naming first (in the plural) that which stands first in rank although they be differently constructed in English. These forms are however becoming obsolete and replaced by the more natural ones used in Spanish.

Henry and Mary.	Enrique ni María.
I, John and even my father.	Camí ni Juan at ang amá co pa.
You and George.	Cayó ni Jorge.
He and I.	Camí niyà. (not silá co)

Ye and they.	Cayó nilà. (not silà ninyo)
Mary and I.	Camí ni María.
He and his father.	Silá nang caniyáng amá.

Sacá is used at the end of a third noun or sentence when stress is laid on the time elapsed.

At six o'clock my father and I arrived, and at nine, the judge.	} Camí nang amá co,i, dungmating nang a las seis, sacá nang a las nueve ay dungmating ang hocom.
She bore a child on 1885; another on 1886, and the last in 1900.
	} Nañganac siyá nóong 1885, nañganac nóong 1886, sacá nang cahulihulí ay 1900.

Patí, sampón, casabáy, as copulative conjunctions, are more emphatic than at and denote an idea of a closer connection of the words or sentences they serve as a link to. They are sometimes used to avoid repeating at and for the sake of euphony. They govern the nominative case unless the noun they link is preceded by the article, in which case, they generally govern the possessive. The n of sampón may be dropped before a word beginning with the same letter. (n)

Soul as well as body.	} Calolóua patí cataouán. } Calolóua sampó nang cataouán.
Both the gold in the church and the silver in the house.
Even what he eats, he borrows.	} Ang guintó sa simbahan patí nang pílac sa báhay. Ang guintó sa simbahan sampó nang pílac sa báhay. } Patí nang quinaeain ay inoótang niyá.
The coward and even the brave a'l of them fled.
The night is still, and the sea is calm, and the breeze is mild.	} Patí nang mañga matápang sampó nang mañga dóuag ay nagtacbohan. } Tahimic and gabi, ang dágat ay palyapa, sampó nang hañgi,i, amihan.

Namán and pa are postpositive conjunctions, and pa is sometimes used for expressing surprise, or reluctance to do something.

Also you shall be punished.	Ycáo namá,i, parurusahan.
And still I am to go there.?	¿Acó pa ang paroróon.?
I could not do it, and you can.?	Di co nagauá, ¿icáo pa.?

ALTERNATIVE CONJUNCTIONS.

Or.	O, (Sp.) cayá, dili.
Whether.	Man.
Either or.	Maguin, o.
To-morrow or the day after to-morrow I will pay.	Bucas o sa macalauá ay magbabáyad acó.
You or I.	Ycáo o acó.

Cayá should be used at the end in alternative sentences. It denotes doubt.

This month or perhaps in June. Ñgayóng bóuan, sa Junio cayá.

Dili, as an alternative conjunction is also placed at the end. It includes the conjunction and the negative adverb and is generally employed in interrogative sentences putting forth a dilemma.

Do you wish or not.?	¿Ybig mo, dili.?
Shall I accompany you or not.?	¿Sasamahan quitá, dili.?

Man is always a postpositive particle which only differs from dili in the latter having an interrogative use.

Whether he goes or not. Paróon man siyá di man siyá paróon,
 Whether he says it or not what is that Sabihin man di man niyá sabihin kay to you.? aihin mo.?

Maguin is used in the manner already explained, for the correlative conjunction "either . . . or".

Either at my house or at yours we shall speak about the matter. { Maguing sa aquing báhay maguing sa iyó, magóosap tayo tongcol sa bagay na iyán.

Either at Manila or New-York, I shall print this work. { Maguing sa Maynila maguing sa Nueva-York ypalilimbag co itóng librong itó.

ADVERSATIVE CONJUNCTIONS.

But.	{ Nguni,t, cundi, datapóua, subali, alintana.
Neither, nor.	Man, hindi, rin, at hindi rin.
Rather than.	Cundi, bagcús, mona, bago.
Though, although.	{ Man, bagamán, bistá, matáy man, cahit, cahiman.
In spite of, with all that.	{ Man, ganóon man, gayón man, ganiyán man.
Whereas.	Palibhasa,i.
Nevertheless, however, notwithstanding, yet, still.	{ Subali, datapóua.
Although if.	Sucdán, mayápat, matáy.
Or else, otherwise.	Cundi.

All the adversative conjunctions ending in a vowel, cundi and palibhasa excepted, take the contracted form of at after them. Palibhasa is followed by y=i, the contraction of the verbal ligament ay.

Nguni, cundi, datapóua, subali, alintana are all used for every sense of the English adversative conjunction "but". Nguni is used in the subordinate sentence, generally in answers, and is not proper to start a sentence.

I should like to eat, but I cannot.	{ Ybig co sanang cumáin nguni,t, hindi acó mangyayari.
I saw him, but I did not speak to him.	{ Naquita co siyá, nguni,t, hindi co siyá inósap.

Cundi is also for the subordinate sentence and generally requires the principal one to be negative.

It is not a male, but a female child.	Hindi lalaqui, cundi babaye ang bata.
This is not a fib, but the very truth.	{ Yto,i, hindi casinoñgaliñgan, cundi catotohanang ganap.

Datapóua is somewhat emphatic and is used to make the contrast more noticeable.

He is rich, but unhappy.	{ Mayaman siyá, datapóua,t, cúlang pálad.
Don't scorn old people, but honor them.	{ Houag ca magpauláng halagá sa mañga magúlang, datapóua,t, purihin mo silá.

Subali and alintana have a somewhat conditional import as "but for," "except," in English.

I would buy some clothing, but for my not having any money.	Ybig co sanang bumili nang damit, subali,t, ualá acóng salapí.
---	--

He was cured, but with all that he died. Guinamot siyá, alintana.t, namatáy.

Man and hindí rin are correlative conjunctions used postpositively; man, generally, in the first member, and hindí rin, in the last, when the latter is employed for the sake of a greater emphasis.

Neither I nor yet he. Acó man, siyá man hindí rin.
We have neither betel not even tobacco. Ualá camí, tabaco man, mamin man.

Hindí rin may come at the beginning of a sentence when used as an emphatic negative adverb.

However wise we may be, we cannot conceive (sound) the essence of God. { Cahit anong marúnong camí ay hindí rin natin mataroc ang pagcadios nang Dios.

Cundi, bagcús, the latter especially, are used in the sense of "rather," and both of them may join in the same sentence.

Whatever your condition may be, do not give yourself up to despair, but rather trust in God. Cahit anò ang pagcalagáy mo, hindí mo pagpatiuacal, cundi bagcús man-uala ca sa Dios.
Not only he does not gain (earn), but rather he loses by the trade. Hindí íámang di siyá naquiquinábang, cundi nañguñgulugui pa siyá.
Not only not sound, but rather, ill. Dili gumaling, bagcús sumamá.

Bagamán, bistá, matáy man, cahit=cahit, and the compound cahíman or cahímat come before; man, after, the word they refer to.

John, though poor in money is rich in honesty. Bagamán si Juan, ay duc-há, sa purí namán, ay mayaman siyá.

Bistá, bista,t, bistat is more formal and its use is rapidly dying away.

Though he is angry with me, he will give me the money. { Bistá,t, siyá,i, nagdadaláng póot sa aquin, ay bibiguián din niyá acó nang salapí.

Matáy man is emphatic and may stand for "ever so much", with a verb.

Think I ever so much about it, I cannot understand it. Matáy co man isipin, hindí acó nacatatalastás.
Though my earnest desire was to come here, my strength failed. Matáy man acó nacaíbig paritò, ay di co macayanan.

Cahít and its compounds are used in the same way as matáy man.

Although I be cudged, I will say nothing. Cahit acó,i, hahampasin, ualá acóng sasabihin.
I will go though he may not consent to it. Cahima,t, di máyag siyá, paroróon din acó.
Though he is rich, he is a miser nevertheless. Mayamán man siyá, siyá,i, maramot namán.
I will not pay you in spite of that. { Hindí acó magbabáyad sa iyò ganóon man.

Palibhasa is used for "since," "whereas;" it is followed by y=i and shares somewhat of the nature of causative conjunction.

Whereas my neighbour trespassed, I may also sin, since I am as frail as he. Cun ang cápoua co tauò ay nacasasala, macasasala namán acó, palibasa,i, acó,i, tauòng mahina para rin niyá.

Whereas He is God He can do every-thing. Nacapangyayari sa lahat, palibhasa, i, Siyá, i, Dios.

Sucdán=socdán is used in the sense of "no matter that," "be that as it may."

Be I first satiated no matter-if I get ill. } Nagpapacabúsog mona acó, sucdán
I fire, be that as it may. } acó, i, magcasaquit.
Babaryl acó sucdán anong manyayari.

Mayapa=mayapat is very little used in a sense of surprise and reluctance.

What, because I drank I must pay.? } ¿Mayapa, t, acó, i, ungminom, ¿caila-
Go, or else I will say it. } ngang na acóng magbáyad.?
Paróon ca, cundí sasabihin co.

CAUSATIVE CONJUNCTIONS.

Why.?, what for.? } ¿Báquit.?, ¿baquin,? ¿anò, t,?
Therefore, as, so. } Palibhasa, baquin, di baquin.
Since, whereas. } Yáman, háman, yayámang, at.
Why not. } Báquit hindi, di.
Because, for, as. } Sa pagca, t, at, ang, dahil sa, báquit.
Hence, whence. } Manáa. (lit., behold!)

The interrogative adverbial conjunction "why" is expressed either by báquit = baquin or by anò followed by the contraction of the copulative conjunction.

Why did he send so many books.? } ¿Baquin nagpadalá siyá nang gayón
 } maraming libro.?
Why do you look for the black hen.? } ¿Anò, t, hinahánap mo ang inahing } maitim.?

If the sentence is both interrogative and negative and the form with anò is employed, the latter may be suppressed.

Why did he not come.? } ¿At di siyá napatitò.?

At anò, ay at, ay anò are inquisitive expressions for "what of,?" "what about,?" "how is it about.?"

What about your law-suit.?" } ¿At anò ang ósap mo.?
And the marriage, what.? } Ay at ang tungcol sa pagcasal ¿ay anò.?
How is it about the money.? } ¿Ay anò ang salapí.?

Báquit also denotes "as," "how".

As you are also a rogue. } Báquit icáo ay tampalasan namán.
And so, how do you not do it.? } ¿Ay baquin di guinagauá mo.?
Now, do you not see it is nonsense.? } ¿Ay baquin di mo naquitang iyá, i, } buhag-hag.?
Since (whereas) you broke the plate, } Yaman or yayaman binásag mo ang pay for it. } pingán, iyòng bayaran.
Because I laughed, he became angry. } Sa pagca, t, acó, i, napatata, nagalit } siyá.
I cannot go, because I am sick. } Hindi acó nacapaparóon, at acó, i, may } sakit.
She refuses, because he is old. } Nanayao siyá, ang siyá, i, matandá na.
He does not pay, for he is poor. } Di siyá nagbabáyad at siyá, i, mahirap.
You did not believe me, hence your } Di mó acó pinañualáan, manáa ang disgrace. } cahirapan mo.

Sa may also be a causative conjunction.

As he did not come, I went there. Sa di siyá naparito. naparóon aó.

CONDITIONAL CONJUNCTIONS.

If.	Cun .
Provided.	Cun lámang, houag lámang.
Unless.	Cundi lámang, liban na, cun diri lámang.
Lest.	Macá , baca .
Were it not for.	Dañgan , cundañgan .

Cun and cundañgan etc. generally come before the nominative case.

If he scolds you, do not become angry.	Cun icáo ay auayan niyá, houag cang magálit.
If he looks for you.	Cun hanapin ca niyá.
Were it not for him I should have beat you.	Cundañgan siyá hinampás catá.
Were it not for Our Lord Jesus Christ having redeemed us, all of us should have certainly been damned.	Cundañgan ang ating Pañginóon Si Jesucristo ay sungmacop sa atin, tayong lahat ay napacasamá rin.

The following illustrations will show the use of the other conjunctions of this group.

I shall give it you, provided you do not say it.	Bibiguián catá, houag lámang sabihin mo.
He will not go unless I order him so.	Hindí siyá paroróon, liban na sa siyá, i, otosan co.
Don't run lest you fall down.	Houag cang tumacbò, maca mahólog ca, or, macá icáo ay mahólog.
Go quickly, lest dark surprise you on the road.	Paróon cang madalí maca magabihan ca sa dáan.

ILLATIVE CONJUNCTIONS.

Well then, that is the reason why.	Cayá cayá figa, yayamang.
Consequently.	Diyata , sa macatour.
Inasmuch, in so far as.	Yayamang .
That, in order that.	Nang , upang.
That.	Na .
You have been called, since you are well, go.	Tinauag ca, yamang icáo ay magaling paróon ca.
As he has no farm, he leases one.	Palibhasa , i, ualá siyang búquid. ung-mupá siyá.
I saw him yesterday, consequently (therefore) he did not embark.	Naqita co siyá cahapon, sa macatour hindí siyá sungmacay.
He can do it inasmuch as he is king.	Mangyayaring gaoín niyá yayamang siyá, i, hari.

The most important conjunctions of this group, are nang and na.

He says that I slept.	Nagsasabi siyá na aco, i, natólog.
Be virtuous that you may be happy here and in the life to come	Magracabana , cayó nang magcapálad, cayó ditò sa lupa at sacá sa cabiling búhay.
Allow yourself to be cured in order that you may recover.	Magpagamót ca, nang icáo ay gumaling.

A, the contracted form of the article ang, is prefixed to the possessive case of nouns or of the personal pronouns, in a verbal sense, the same as nica, when quotation of or reference to the words or sayings of such persons or texts are to be expressed, somewhat after the defective "quoth" in English.

God says, or said.	Anang Dios.
Peter says, or said.	Ani Pedro.
The Holy Scripture says.	Anang Santong Súlat.
Says, or said he.	Aniyá.
Jesus Christ says, said.	Ani Jesucristo.
Says, said the Apostle.	Anang apóstol.
I say, said.	Anaquin.
They say, said.	Anilá.
We say, said.	Anamin, anatin.

N is inserted for euphony's sake when the possessive begins with a vowel, as seen in anaquin, etc.

Scoundrel; vile, mean fellow.	Bulisie.
Issue, result, consequence.	Casapitan.

FIFTY SEVENTH EXERCISE.

Who went to school? Clara and Matilde went to school. Did you taste the wine I sent you? Yes, I have already tasted it. And what do you think it good? No, I think it bad. Where do you go? I am going down to the garden if you permit me. Do you permit me to go? Yes, but don't gather any fruit, because it is still green; lest you feel pain in your teeth. Where shall I sit? Don't be seated on that chair, for it is broken. How did Lincoln die? He died assassinated by a fanatic a sad and terrible thing the death of so great a man was! Did he commit sin? He will rather die than sin. What do you want that chair for? I take it for my friend to sit on. Why does he affect to practice virtue? He affects to be virtuous that he may be praised. Why do you not wash your face every day? Because the water is cold. What did you order me to do just now? Run for the priest and in case you should meet any acquaintance on the street don't stop to converse with him. Why shall I not talk with him? Because it is a very pressing business. But I have to go to Henry's. Well then, if you go to him don't tarry there. Do the trees you planted, already fructify? They do not yet fructify; but they already blossom. What does your father say to you? He says do not go to the forest lest you be assaulted by highwaymen? What? Do not go up into that house, lest there are some people above. What? Do not run lest your mother beat you. Why was he afraid? He feared, lest he should be heard. Will she write to me every month? She will write to you provided she is not busy. Who is mad? Either her father is mad or she is a fool. Will he come or not. Whether he comes or not, is nothing to me. Did they both go? Neither the one nor the other went. Will you also go? I would rather pay a fine. Did you not hear your brother is a scoundrel? Although he may be a scoundrel, he is not a rebel. Did you learn your lesson by heart? Though I study much I cannot learn it. Would they come if I offer them some money? They would not come even in spite of that. Are you resolved to fight him? I will fight him though I be killed. Do you know that I have been beaten at play? You did not mind me, behold the issue now. Will you visit my mother, since you are here? Since I am here I will visit her. Why did not the servant bring my horse? Because you said nothing to him about it.

FIFTY EIGHTH LESSON.

YCALIMANG POUO,T, UALONG PAGARAL.

THE INTERJECTION.

Among the Tagalog words serving as interjections, abá, aróy and iná co (the latter contracted into nacó=nacú), which natives profusely employ, are the most important. Abá is used for wonder, surprise, cheer, pain, warning etc., and it would be difficult to exhaust its meanings.

O dear me!	¡Abá!
Alas!	¡Abá!
Alas, poor me!	¡Abá co!
Alas, poor thee, warn thee!	¡Abá mo!
Let us go!	¡Abá tayo!, ¡ahá tayo na!
Well!, did I not say to you not to go there.?	¡Abá! ¿di co uica sa iyò na houag cang paróon.?
How!, did I not say so to you.?	¡Abá! ¿dili gayón nga ang uinica co sa iyò.?
What!, what is the matter.?	¡Abá!, ¿anò.?

Aróy or aráy is exclusively for sudden or intense pain.

Oh,! woe!	¡Aróy!, ¡aráy!
Oh,! this pain!	¡Aróy!, ¡masaquit.!

Yná co is an exclamation importing surprise or wonder.

Oh mother!	¡Yná co!
Oh mother!, the rain. (how hard it rains!)	¡Yná co!, ang olán.

Among many other exclamations, the following are frequently in use.

Oh how.....!	¡Ayáa!. (always postponed)
Oh, how pretty!	¡Buti ayáa!
It is a pity!	¡Sáyang!
What a pity, so much money lost!	¡Sáyang ang salapí gayóng marami!
Would to God!	¡Cahimanuari!, ¡nauá!, ¡maanong!

Cahimanuari and maanong are used before; nauá, after the verb.

Would to God you might attain Heaven	Cahimanuari macamtán mo ang íangit
Would to God he would die.	Maanong siyá,i, mamatáy.
Would to God he may come.	Dumating siyá nauá...
Be quick!	¡Dali!
Away!	¡Súlong!
Back!	¡Orong!
Beware!	¡Tabi!
Hush! silence!	¡Houag maguínigáy!
Be silent!	¡Houag cang mag-ínigáy!

Bravo!	¡Buti ñga.!
Poor thing!	¡Caáua áua.!
Oh God!	¡Ay Dios col.!
Fury!	¡Líntic.!

Ayáa, bapáa are little in use nowadays and are postpositive interjections proper to express wonder. Ayáa is more in use by women; bapáa, by men. Both of them may concur in the phrase, bapáa preceding, to render the expression more emphatic.

How pretty!	¡Diquit ayáa.!
How great!	¡Laquí bapáa,! ¡laquí bapáa ayáa.!
How beautiful to see!	¡Gandá bapáa panoorin.!

When the thing object of wonder is expressed, the second a of bapá, ayá is transferred to the end of the admiring clause.

Oh how good this is!	¡Galing bapá nitò a.!
Oh how sweet that is!	¡Tamís ayá niyáng a.!

Hyperbolic expressions can be made with pagca, anó, ca, put before the root in the possessive case. Ca and pagca are used prefixedly. The root may be repeated for the sake of greater exaggerative sense.

How immense the sea is!	¡Pagcalaquí nang dágat.!
How pretty these flowers are!	¡Pagcadiquitdiquit nitòng maña bu- laelac.!
How the stars glare in a still night!	¡Anòng pagcaningning nang maña bituin sa isáng gabing tahimic.!
What a crowd!	¡Caraming tauò.!

As exclamative expressions may also be considered those formed with the prefix ca and the repetition of an adjective or affective verbal root in the way to be explained in subsequent lessons.

How tall!	¡Catáastáas.!
How long!	¡Cahabahaba.!
How pitiful.	¡Caauaáua.!
How gloomy.	¡Calunoslunos.!
How amiable Jane is.	Caibigibig si Juana.
How horrible is death.	Caquilaquilábot ang camatayan.

Imprecations are greatly in fashion among natives. Every tense, but especially the past or the imperative, is made use of for the purpose.

May a caiman swallow thee!	¡Canin ca nang boaya.!
May the sea glut him!	¡Lamonin siyá nang dágat.!
May a flash (thunderbolt) strike you!	¡Tinamáan ca nang lintic.!
Would to God they would die!	¡Maanong mamatáy silá.!
May a snake sting you.	¡Tuquín ca nang ahas.!

FIFTY NINTH LESSON.

YCALIMANG POUO'T, SIYAM NA PAGARAL.

PARTICLES FORMING SUBSTANTIVES AND ADJECTIVES

Most of the particles have been noticed in speaking of the verb, but there are some that have likewise a nominal or adjectival use. Some others, which are not verbal, enter into composition for various purposes forming idioms and other peculiar ways of expression. Although explanations and hints about some of them have already been given occasionally in foregoing lessons, a separate study of all is now subjoined, anything relating to particles being very important in Tagalog.

AN. CA.

An, (han, when the last vowel bears the sharp accent) is always a suffix and the most important one. It is applied conjointly with the prefix ca to adjectival roots purporting a quality, to form the abstract noun for such quality.

ADJECTIVE.	ABSTRACT.	QUALITY ROOT.	ABSTRACT NOUN.
Quiet.	Quietness.	Tahímic.	Catahimican.
Noble, dear.	Nobleness.	Mahal.	Camahalan.
Liar.	Lie.	Buláan.	Cabulaanan.
Mad.	Madness.	Olol.	Caololan.
Bad, naughty, cruel.	Naughtyness, } cruelty.	Tampalasan.	Catampalasanan.
Foolish.
Industrious.	Industry.	Sípag.	Casipagan.
Firm.	Firmness.	Tíbay.	Catibayan.
Strong.	Strength.	Lacás.	Calacasan.
Deep.	Depth.	Lalim.	Calaliman.
Broad.	Breadth.	Lápad.	Calaparan.
Heavy.	Heaviness.	Bigat.	Cabigatan.
Light.	Lightness.	Gáan.	Cagaan.
Meek.	Meekness.	Amo.	Caamoan.
Round.	Roundness.	Bílog.	Cabilogan.
Beautiful.	Beauty.	Gandá.	Cagandahan.
Large, long, great.	Length, greatness.	Laquí.	Calaquihan.
Lordly.	Nobility.	Guinòd.	Caguinoohan.
Young.	Youth.	Bata.	Cabatáan.

This composition is likewise used to form collective nouns.

Boy.	Young people.	Bata.	Cabatáan.
Christian.	Christendom.	Cristiano (Sp.)	Cacristianohan.
Island.	Archipelago.	Polo.	Capoloan.
Earth. (material).	Earth, world.	Lupa.	Calupáan.

An=han, without ca, is appended to a root having a nominal or verbal force to form the place or the instrument on which, not by which, the work is accomplished, using the future tense for those roots admitting of contraction, or beginning with l.

To bathe.	Bath-room.	Paligo.	Paligoan.
To put into a harbour.	} Wharf.	Dóong.	Doofigan.
To spit.		Spitting-box.	Lura.
To eat.	Dining-room.	Cáin.	Cacanáin.
To drink.	Vessel.	Ynom.	Ynoman.
To strike fire by percussion or rubbing.	} Steel or instrument for striking fire.	} Pinquí.	} Pinquían.
To lie down.
To put into.	Storing place.	Silid.	Sisidlan.
To worship.	Temple.	Simbá.	Simbahan.
To make cocks fight.	} Cock-pit.	} Sábong.	} Saboñgán.
To pasture.
Mud, dirtiness.	Quagmire.	Pusalí.	Pusalían.
Sugar-cane.	Sugar plantation.	Tubò.	Tubohan.
Bamboe.	Bamboo-grove.	Cauayan.	Cauayanán.
Cocoa-nut.	} Cocoa-nut plantation.	} Niog.	} Niogan.
Banana.
Head.	Pillow, holster.	Olo.	Olonán.
Foot.	} Pedestal, foot-stand.	} Paà.	} Paahán.
First, anterior.
Last, posterior.	} Back, hindermost place.	} Huli.	} Hulihán.
To wrap up.

The future tense of the an passive should also be used in other conjugations with such nouns as indicate places which carry along with them an idea of futurity or potentiality for the actions performed thereon.

To baptise.	Baptistery.	Binyag.	Pagbibinyagán.
To preach.	Pulpit.	Pañgáral.	Pañgáralán.
To sentence, to pass judgment.	} Hall where a court or a judge sits.	} Maghocom.	} Paghohocomán.
To kill.
To hang.	Gibbet.	Magbitay.	Pagbibitayán.

But if the verbal root is intransitive in character, ca should be used and the first syllable of the root repeated.

To stumble.	} Stumbling-place or place or thing serving as an obstacle.	} Matísod.	} Catitisoran.
To fall.
To slide, to slip down.	Slippery place.	Marulás.	Carorolasan.

The student should notice that in most nouns thus formed from a verbal root, the stress of the accent is on the last vowel: This is, in many cases to draw a distinction between the person or the place. Thus pañgañgaralan means the person to whom something is to be preached, while pañgañgarulán, is the place, to say, "the pulpit."

An comes at the end of a diminutive noun or of those things being not real, but represented by any graphic means or of which one speaks in contempt.

Little bird or the figure of a bird painted or drawn.	}	Ybonibonan.
Human figure painted or despicable person.		Tauotauohan.
Petty king or person who plays the role of a king.	}	Hariharían.
Canopy, ceiling.		Lañgitlañgitan.
Quack, empiric in physic.		Medimedicohan.
God, idol.		Diosdiosan.

Sometimes, an applied to a noun root converts it into an adjective of a characteristic quality in a somewhat augmentative sense.

Head.	Club-headed.	Olò.	Olohan.
Nose.	} Large-nosed person.	} Ylong.	} Yloñgan.
Snout.
Shoulder.	Broad shouldered.	Balicat.	Balicatán.
Mouth.	} Large-mouthed, charlatan.	} Bibig.	} Bibigán.

Ca, is another important prefix word-building particle.

Ca, as has been said, comes before roots importing companionship, likeness, reciprocalness or conformity, to indicate one of the corresponding parties.

Companion.	Casamá.
Commensal.	Casalo.
Fellow-passenger.	Casacáy.
Inmate, one of the persons living at the same house.	} Casangbaháy.
Contrary, foe, one of the quarelling parties.
Assistant, aiding party.	Católong.
Competitor.	Catalo.
Playing-fellow.	Calaró.
Equal, fellow officer, officer of the same rank.	} Capara.
To scorn, scorning-party.
Namesake.	Cañgalán, casañgáy.
Face-resembling.	Camuc-há.
Equal, similar.	Capantáy, cahalimbáua.
Resembling thing or party.	} Catúlad, cahalintúlar, cahambing, cauañgis.
Journey-fellow-passenger.
Contemporary, of the same age.	Capanahón.
Drinking party.	Cainom.

The first syllable of the root is sometimes repeated.

Fellow-villager, compatriot.	Cababayan.
Scorning party.	Cabibiro, cabiro.

Ca comes before the quality root, object of comparison, if it is put at the end in comparative sentences with ga.

As hard as stone.	Gabatò catigás.
As long as this.	Ganitò cahaba.
As tall as that.	Ganiyán catáas.
As sweet as sugar.	Gaasúcal catamís.
How old is he.?	¿Gaanò siyá catandá.?

Ca is also used as a particle expressing past time with some roots importing time.

Yesterday.	Cahapon.
Last night.	Cagabi.
The day before yesterday.	Camacalauà.

Ca has a limitative force when applied to roots of numerable things.

One handful.	Caracot.
One piece, only one piece.	Capótol.
Only one palm. (length measure)	Carangeal.
One drop only.	Capatac.
One person only.	Cataù.
In a word.	Sa catagáng uica.
One load only.	Cadalhán, cadalahan.
Only two persons.	Dalauà cataù.

Ca may be repeated to express a greater degree of limitation.

Absolutely one piece.	Cacapótol.
Absolutely one person.	Cacataù.

This limitative force of ca is also applied to actions which require time for their accomplishment. The sense imparted by the English verb "to have just" may be expressed this way in Tagalog. The first syllable of the root should be repeated in this kind of expressions, with the subject in the possessive case, for these are passive clauses.

He has just come down.	Capapanáog pa niyà.
I have just arrived.	Cararating co pa.
They are just gone out.	Caalis lámang nilà.
We have but come upstairs.	Capapanhic lámang namin.

This same construction may also be made to mean "no sooner than," "as soon as," "immediately," etc.

No sooner did he start speaking than he was miscarried.	} Cauiuica niyà, i. nagecamali na. } Casasápit co dóon ay pinacáin acó. } Capanáog niyà ditò ay naquita ca niyà.
As soon as I arrived there, I was given food.
Immediately that he left, he saw you.

The same construction (that of ca and the repetition of the first syllable) with the subject in the nominative case, serves, in actions admitting degrees of intension, to exhort, to excite to do the work in the manner most energetic possible.

Pray most devoutly to the Holy Virgin	Cahihifigi cayó sa mahal na Virgen.
Beware, be careful, be cautious.	Caiifigat cayó.
Behave most judiciously.	Cababaet cayó.

It has been seen in the preceding lesson that if ca is prefixed to an adjectival root and the latter is repeated, exclamative adjectival expressions are formed.

How amiable.!	Caibigibig.
How pitiful.!	Caabaghabag.

How disgusting!	Cadumaldumal.
How admirable, wonderful.	Catac-hatac-há, catacatacá.
How prodigious.	Caguilaguilalás.

This same arrangement forms some adverbs or adverbial expressions of time.

Suddenly.	Caalamalam.
All at once.	Caguinsaguinsa.
Off hand.	Caracaraca.

Ca, in this construction, it should be noticed, carries the sense to the highest degree of intension and it is even applied to some roots of things as in cataloctalococan which means the very summit of the mountain, the peak.

Is there any spring yonder at the summit of that mountain? Dóon sa cataloctalococan nang bon-doc na yaón. ¿may batis bagá.?

Ca with the suffix an=han forms the superlative degree of adjectives, the root being repeated as already explained.

This is very precious.	Canjahalmahalan itò.
Very savory.	Casarapsarapan.
Very obscene.	Cahalayhalayan.
Very good.	Cabutibutihan.

Some adverbs of time are formed in the same manner.

Lastly.	Catapustapusan.
Finally.	Cauacasuacasan.

The repetition of the root may be dispensed with if some adverb or word importing time comes in the expression.

To leave for, to go away.	Pánao, mamánao.
To carry away.	Magpánao.
To exile.	Magpapánao.
This very week I shall leave.	Capanaoan co itóng lingo.
When he was on the point of dying.	Niyóng camatayan na niyà
When he was about to kill them.	Niyóng capatayan na sa canilá.

FIFTY NINTH EXERCISE.

Do you wish to accompany me? Yes, I will accompany you, where do you go? I am going to fish with a rod. Why do you scorn your fellow-citizens? I don't scorn them. But you find faults with them, do you not know it is improper to find faults with others? What do you admire most? I admire the marvelous things made by God and especially I admire the beauty of the stars on the skies. Can they be trusted? They cannot be trusted. May not they then be intrusted with that business. I don't know. May I still become healthy? You may still get healthy. Can you go to Manila? I cannot go to Manila, for I am ill. Can your brother go to Manila? He cannot go to Manila, because he is very busy. May this medicine alleviate the suffering of the patient? It may alleviate it. Where is the nobility (aristocracy) of this town? They are at church. Has this house any bathroom? There is here a bath-room for grown up people: young people bathe at the river. What do natives use for drinking? Natives use cocoa-nuts as drinking vessels. Where is the pedestal of this image? It is in the cell. Where do the native people assemble? They assemble at the cock-pit.

Does your friend own any sugar plantations.? He does not own any sugar plantation, but he owns two cocoa-nut farms. When did you arrive.? I have just arrived. Where is your master.? My master is just gone out. Did you see her husband.? He had just got into the house when I saw him. Do you wish to dine with us.? No, I have just dined. What shall we do.? Think on it carefully and be on your guard. What has happened to you.? No sooner did I start walking than I stumbled. Where did you slip down.? There, there is a slippery place and I came across a place full of stones. Did you find the book.? As soon as I started looking for it, I found it out. How long is it.? It is as long as this. Is that wood hard.? It is as hard as stone. What a bat is it like.? It is as a bird when flying. Whom are you conversing with.? I converse with my fellow inmates. Whom are you going to take as a companion for the journey.? Your enemy. Are they orphans.? They are, how sad it is to be an orphan. Did you taste pineapples.? Yes, how sweet they are! What do those people do at the beach.? They are bathing, how indecorous to see male and female people bathing together. Did you swim.? Yes, I did, how amusing swimming is.

SIXTIETH LESSON.
YCAANIM NA POUONG PAGARAL.

PARTICLES FORMING SUBSTANTIVES AND ADJECTIVES. (continued)

IN. MA. MACA.

In is a prefix, a suffix or an insertable particle; hin, its more sonorous form, is always a suffix.

In is prefixed to or inserted in nominal roots to form derivatives denoting resemblance or sharing of the properties possessed by the root.

A berry, octagonal in shape.	{ Anything cut up in an eight-sided shape.	{ Balingbing.	Binalingbing.
Night scented flower.	{ Anything resembling such flower.	{ Sampaga	Sinampaga.
Verdure, culinary vegetables, garden stuff.	{ Anything sharing in the green colour.	{ Gúlay.	Guinúlay.
Needle.	{ Needle pointed rice.	{ Caráyom.	Quinaráyom.
To boil rice.	Boiled rice food.	Sáing.	Sináing.
To spin.	Spinning thread.	Súlid.	Sinúlid.
To boil meal, flour.	{ A sort of fritters, any soft pap.	{ Lógao.	Linógao.
To knead.	Bread.	Túpay.	Tinápay.

The first syllable of the root (as for the present tense) should be repeated for anything which is permanent in kind, as these are but participial nouns.

Father.	Godfather.	Amá.	Inaamá.
Mother.	Godmother.	Yná.	Iniiná.
Son or daughter.	{ Stepson or step-daughter	{ Anac.	Inaanac.
Brother or sister.	{ Half brother or sister.	{ Capatid.	Quinacapatid.
Aunt.	{ Some woman who stands for an aunt.	{ Alí.	Inaalí.
Sister-in-law.	{ One's brother's mistress.	{ Hípag.	Hinihípag.

In, either prefixed or inserted, is the well known form of the past participle which, generally, stands for the direct object.

The sweetheart or the beloved person.	Ang sinisintà.
The esteemed person.	Ang minamahal.
The already known person.	Ang quinocoan.

My property, what is held as mine.	Ang inaaquin.
Others' property, their property.	Ang quinacanià.
What is yours. (plur.).	Ang iniinyõ.

The same composition is likewise used to mean the passive effect of some destructive agent.

What is destroyed by mice.	Ang dinadagá.
" " " " ants.	Ang linalangam.
Bananas are done away with by } crows, ravens. }	Ynoouac ang ságuing.

Every present or past stage of a bodily complaint is expressed by the root of the latter with in either prefixed or inserted.

Itch, mange.	{ Person suffering } from itch	Galís.	Ang guinagalís.
Small-pox.	{ Person who has } suffered from small-pox.	Bolótong.	„ binolótong.

The same is the case with the root of any limb or part of the body capable of being affected by pain.

Stomach.	Siemura.
John suffers from the stomach.	Sinisiemura si Juan.
Breast.	Dibdib.
I suffered from breastache.	Dinibdib acó.

In or hin, is suffixed to roots of the above said complaints to express their suffering either at some future time or if they appear as chronic or habitual, forming, in the latter case, nouns expressive of the patient.

Gout.	{ Person who will } be afflicted with gout.	Piyõ.	Pipiyohin.
Itch.	Itchy, scab.	Galís.	Galisin.
Asthma.	Asthmatic.	Hica.	Hicáin.

The same may denote a defect.

Small-pox.	{ Pitted by the } small-pox.	Bolótong.	Bolotoñgín.
Lippitude.	{ Person bearing } lippitudes.	Mota.	Motáin.
Belly.	Big-bellied.	Tiyán.	Tiyanin.

In or hin, suffixed to verbal transitive roots stands for the thing or work which is the result of the accomplished action, if the verb admits of the in passive for the direct object.

To sew.	Needle work.	Tahí.	Tahín.
To eat.	Food.	Cáin.	Canin.
To drink.	Drink.	Ynom.	Ynomin.

But if the thing on which the work remains patent is meant, the an passive particle is used.

To embroider mats	{ Mat with twisted } drawings on.	Sabat.	Sinabatán.
Honey.	{ Cake made with } honey.	Polot.	Pinolotán.
Egg.	Pie with eggs in.	Itlog.	Initlogán.

The same composition is employed for what is left behind as offal by the effect of some actions.

To mow, to reap.	Stubble.	Gapas.	Guinapasan.
To cull, to choose.	Refuse, offal, dregs	Pili.	} Pinilían, pinag- { pilían.
To cut out stuffs.	Cuttings, clippings	Tabás.	Pinagtabasan.
To pick rattans } quite clean.	Peelings, parings.	Cayás.	{ Quinayasan, pi- { nagcayasan.

If the root denotes a passion, an act of the mind or an involuntary action, the root should be prefixed by ma, the particle for adjectives, with the same composition of in-hin suffixed, thus forming frequentative adjectival nouns which are, for the most, acute in accent to distinguish them from the corresponding tenses of the verb.

Compassion.	{ Tender hearted } { humane.	Aua.	Maauaín.
Love.	{ Loving, affection- } { ate.	Sintá.	} Masintahin. { Mairoguin.
Bias, liking.	Amateur.	Uilí.	Maulihín.
Desire.	{ Longing, capric- } { ious.	Ybig.	Maibiguín.
Wrath.	Irascible.	Gálit.	Magalitín.
Laugh, smile.	{ Smiling, pleasing, } { agreeable.	Táua.	Matauanín.
Weeping.	Mourner.	Tañgis.	Matañgisín.
Obedience.	Obedient.	Sonor.	Masunorin.
Sleep.	{ A dull sleepy per- } { son.	Tólog.	Matologuín.

If the root admits of being contracted, begins with l or an intensive degree is meant, the first syllable of the root may be repeated.

Forgetfulness.	{ Short of memory. } { forgetful.	Límot.	Malilimotín.
Joy.	Joyful.	Logod.	Malologdín.
Fear.	Faint-hearted.	Tácot.	Mataacotín.
Sickness.	Infirm, sickly.	Saquit.	Masasactín.
Fever.	{ Person subject to } { fever.	Lagnat.	Malalagaatin.
Bashfulness.	Bashful, diffident.	Hiya.	Mahihiyín.

Ma is the well known prefix particle to form adjectives of those roots that are not adjectives by themselves.

Bravery.	Brave.	Tápang.	Matápang.
Wisdom.	Wise.	Dúnong.	Marúnong.
Soundness.	Sound.	Galing.	Magaling.

The adjectives thus formed may be conjugated by mag in the sense of affecting or boasting of the quality they denote.

Anthony affects to be brave.	Nagmamatapang si Antonio.
John boasts of wisdom.	Nagmamarunong si Juan.

If they are conjugated in the in passive of the um conjugation, the sense is that of holding or reputed the object as possessing the quality expressed by the adjective.

I consider that good.	Minamabuti co iyán.
-----------------------	---------------------

I hold vice to be a bad thing.) Minamasamá eo ang masamáng qui- (naogalian.
He reputes as judicious what Peter says.	Minamagaling niyá ang sinasabi ni Pedro.

Ma, is also joined to a substantive root indicative of a thing capable of being possessed of, imparting a sense of the subject abounding in such commodity as is denoted by the root. Ma, in this case, is but the contraction of may.

There is plenty of rice in this town.	Mapálay itóng bayan itò.
Henry possesses a great deal of gold.	Maguintó si Enrique.
This house is provided with many rooms.	} Masilid itóng báhay.

Ma, as a potential particle, comes before a verbal root, forming adjectives indicative of the possibility or capability of the action being performed. English adjectives ending in "able", "ible", or any other termination denoting potentiality may be expressed in this way.

Sufferable.	Matiis, mabatà.
Pronounceable.	Mauica.
Feasible, practicable.	Magauá.
Easy.	Madalí, magaán.
Eatable.	Macáin.

The repetition of the first syllable of the root (as for the future passive tense of maca conjugation) may be used, especially if an idea of futurity is meant, either form being used almost indifferently.

Feasible.	Magagauá, mangyayaring gaoin.
Eatable.	Macacáin.
Potable, drinkable.	Maiinom.
Possible.	Mangyayari.
Visible, perceptible at sight.	Maquiquita.
Speakable.	Masasabi.

But if negation or inversion of the meaning of the root is to be expressed as when the Latin prefixes "in", "dis", or the Saxon "un" are used in English, the sense is made by the simple root (as for the imperative) prefixed by ma and preceded by the negative adverb.

Insufferable.	Di matiis.
Untolerable.	Di mabatà.
Incomprehensible.	Di matingcala, di maabut nang isip.
Indissoluble.	Di macalag.
Inaccessible, unapproachable.	Di malapitan.
Interminable.	Di matapus.
Unserviceable.	Di magamit.
Uneatable.	Di macáin.
Impossible.	Dili mangyayari.
Inexplicable, unexplainable.	Di masaysáy.

If the capability is expressed by an adjective or an adjectival clause, the verb should be put in the proper passive.

Easy to be done.	Madaling gaoin.
Difficult to say.	Maliuag sabihin.
Troublesome to be attained.	Mahirap camtán.
Unapproachable.	Di malapitan.
Easily pronounceable.	Madaling uicáin.

Susceptible, punctillious. Di maucáan.
It is easier to say it than do it. Madaling sabihín, mahírap gaoín.

Maca, may be assimilated to ma as a particle forming adjectives, if prefixed to verbal roots. What ma is for the potential sense, maca is for the causative one.

Agreeable, what causes pleasure. Macatotóua.
Causative of shame. Macahihiya.
Mortal, destructive of life. Macamamatáy.
Laughable, causing laughter. Macatatáua.

Maca is also prefixed to the cardinal numbers to form the adverbial numerals of time, the first being wholly, and the second and third, partly irregular, as has been explained.

Once. Minsán.
Twice. Macalauá.
Thrice, three times. Macaitlò, macatatlò.
Five times. Macalimá.
A hundred times. Macasangdáan.

Spark. Quislap, alipato, pilantic.
To cause weariness. Macayamot.
To disgust, to cause disgust. Macasáua.
To inflame, to cause to be inflamed. Macasonog.
To produce anxiety. Macabalisa.
To produce nausea. Macasuclam, macarimarim.
To cause the disgust of satiety. Macasuya.
It cannot be. Hindi mangyayari.
Can but..... Hindi mangyayari di.....
I can but go. Hindi mangyayari di acó pumaróon.
It may be. Mangyayari din.
It may not be. Hindi mangyayari.
It may be, it may happen. Súcat mangyari.
It can hardly be, happen. Di súcat mangyari.
To examine, to look into into the qualifications of some candidate. } Sumúlit.
My brother passed examination before the master and came out qualified. } Sinúlid and capatid co nang maestro at siyá,i, nacasúlit.
Nobody knows it. Ualáng nacacaalam.
Nobody understand it. Ualáng nacatatalastás.
Do you understand it.? ¿Natatalastás mo bagá.?
He feels warm. Siyá,i, naiinitan.
He was swayed (blind) with wrath. Nabulagan siyá nang gálit.
Lest. Macá, sacali.

SIXTIETH EXERCISE.

Shall I do it.? Don't do that, lest you be damned. Do I go out then.? Go out and beware; don't fail to do what I told you. Shall I go upstairs.? Don't go up, lest there may be some people over there. What are you going to do.? I am going fishing to see whether I can hook some fish. Why did he not lift the bag.? He is going to try whether he can lift it up. Did they shoot arrows at the birds.? Yes, they did and they shot down some. Did you run after him.? I ran for him, but I could not overtake him. Do you wish me to go out now.?

Don't go away at present, for you will be affected by sunshine and you will feel warm. Shall I stay here any longer? No, begone, lest you may be overtaken by dark in the wood. What happened to them? They were sailing and they were overtaken by a storm at sea. What has happened to you? Our house was burnt down. What has happened? The thread parted. What has happened to your brother-in-law? His strength failed, his senses vanished and his mind gloomed, his breath was cut short and he breathed the last. How was it? His walking-stick split and his ankle was sprained. Why do you laugh? I laugh because that fellow stumbled and fell down. Do I assist him? No, make him walk slowly, lest he may slip. Do you fear? Yes, I do. What are you afraid of? I am afraid of the souls of the dead. Why do you fear the ghosts? fear God and do not fear ghosts, as they will do nothing to you. Where did you stumble? I stumbled against this stone. What house did your mother die in? In our grandfather's house. What did she die of? She died of fever. Why does that woman weep? Because death deprived her of her infant child. I don't see your sister, where is she? She is there knelt down near the altar. And your brother, where is he? There he is standing near the pillar. Is he not that one who is seated on the bench? No, he is that one who is by him. Who is your godfather? My godfather is my friend Charles' father, and my godmother, his sister. Do you take that as yours? No, I take it as theirs. How is your rice field? It has been eaten up by locusts. Is your servant afflicted with itch? No, he is afflicted with asthma. Does his stomach pain him? No, he has a headache. Is his father a big bellied man? No, he is big headed. Where did you put the thrashings? I put them by the side of the sweepings. Is your servant obedient? No, he is, on the contrary, obstinate. Is there any money in the safe? There is plenty of money in the safe. Is this letter pronounceable? Yes, it is easy to pronounce. Is sea-water drinkable? It is not drinkable. Is poison destructive of life? Poison is destructive of life. Is the priest an asthmatic? No, he is a gouty man. Are sparks dangerous? They are, a spark can set a town in flames. Is sweet potato eatable? Yes, but it sometimes causes satiety. Did you come out well from the examination? No, I was disqualified.

SIXTY FIRST LESSON.
YCAANIM NA POUO,T, ISANG PAGARAL.

PARTICLES FORMING SUBSTANTIVES AND ADJECTIVES. (continued)

MAG. MAN. MAPAG.

Mag, as a particle forming nouns, is the contrary of ca. Ca, contracts the sense to one party; mag, indicates two at least.

Mag comes before those nouns which are conceived only in couples to indicate both parties, and denotes plurality without the employment of the pluralizing particle being necessary.

The two sisters-in-law.	Ang maghípag.
The married couple.	Ang magasáua.
Both quarrelling parties.	Ang magáuay.
The engaged parties.	Ang mag-ibigan.
The parents.	Ang magúlang.
The two brothers-in-law.	Ang magbayáo.

If the parties are of such a kind as to be conceived in a number greater than two, ca should be used after mag.

The two brothers.	Ang magcapatid.
The two companions.	Ang magcasamâ.
The two friends.	Ang magcaibigan.

If the parties are more than two, ca should be repeated.

More than two brothers.	Magcacapatid.
" " " companions.	Magcacasamâ.
" " " friends.	Magcacaibigan.

Correlative nouns are expressed by mag prefixed to the principal correlative.

Father and child.	Magamá.
Mother and child.	Mag-inâ.
Father or mother and son or daughter-in-law.	Magbianán.
Master and servant.	Magpañginóon.

Hence these compound nouns may be verbalized in reference to the secondary party.

Paul is a devoted son. (that is to say, he knows how to honor his parents.)	Si Pablo, i, marúnong magamá.
Patrick is not a devoted son to his mother.	Hindí marúnong mag-inâ Si Patricio.
To keep a mother-in-law is a disagreeable thing.	Mahírap ang magbianán.

If the second correlative is named conjointly with the principal one, the latter is prefixed by mag and the former put in the possessive case.

Jesus and His Mother.	Mag-inà ni Jesus.
Flora and her father-in-law.	Magbianán ni Flora.
Peter and his father.	Mag-amá ni Pedro.

Mag denotes totality with some roots importing time.

The whole day, throughout the day,	} Maghapon.
all the day long.
All the night long, the whole night.	Magdamag.

Mag is prefixed to verbal roots of the first and second conjugations to form the verbal noun signifying the agent or doer. The first syllable of the root should be repeated as if to form the future tense.

Farmer, laborer, husbandman.	Magsasacá.
Robber.	Magnanácao.

Man, is another important prefix. Man, drops the n and causes the same changes in the first letter of the root it joins to, as have been explained for it as a verbal conjugating particle.

Man, as has been said, if joined to a root denoting a unity of measure, forms distributive numeral expressions of the standard unity.

Twenty five cents' money piece.	Cahati.
Twenty five cents each, at twenty five cents each.	} Mañgahati.
Dollar.	Piso.
One dollar each.	Mamiso.
Real.	Sicápat.
One real each, at one real each.	Manicápat.
Half real.	Sicolò, sicualò.
Half real each.	Manicolo.
Yard, ell.	Bara. (corr. from Sp. word vara.)
One yard each.	Mamara.
Peck, ganta.	Salop.
One peck each.	Manalop.
Bushel.	Cabán.
One bushel each.	Mañgabán.
Palm. (a measure of length from the thumb to the little finger extended).	} Dangcal.
One palm each.	Manangcal.
Fathom.	Dipà.
One fathom each.	Mandipà.
Inch.	Sandali.
One inch each.	Manandáli.
Hundred.	Daán.
One hundred each.	Manaán.

Man is more proper and usual than mag to express with a verbal root the agent or doer, especially if trade or habitual engaging in the action is meant.

To sew.	Tailor.	Tahi.	Mananahi.
To write.	Writer.	Súlat.	Manunúlat.
To weave.	Weaver.	Habi.	Manhahabi.
To redeem.	Redeemer.	Tubós.	Manonobos.

To spin.	Spinner.	Súlid.	Manunúlid.
To solder.	Solderer, gold-beater.	Hínang.	Manhíhínang.
To foresay, to foretell.	Sooth-sayer.	Hola.	Manhohola.
To reap, to mow.	Reaper.	Gapas.	Mangagapas.
To tempt.	Tempter.	Tucsò.	Manunucsò
To conquer.	Conquerer.	Talo.	Mananalo

Man also comes before a root denoting the instrument through which something is got at, or, before that of a thing to be got at in a customary or mercenary way, forming the verbal noun or the agent engaged in the trade.

Saw.	Sawer, sawyer.	Lagari,	Manlalagari.
Goods, merchandise.	Tradesman.	Calácal.	Mañgáñgalácal.
Sea.	Seaman.	Dúgat.	Mananágat.
Fish.	Fisherman.	Isdá.	Mañgíngisdá.
Dog.	Hunter with a dog.	Aso.	Mañgáñgaso.
Medicine, root, radix.	Quack, physician.	Gamot.	Mangagámot.

Mapag adheres to a verbal root to form, like man, the verbal noun for the agent or doer, if the action is represented as occasional or it is of such a nature as not to appear as a mercenary or life-supporting one.

To draw interest from, to invest money on interest.	Usurer, griper.	Pagtubó.	Mapagpatubó.
To grant, granting	Bountiful, liberal, frank.	Biyaya.	Mapaghiyaya.
Respecting, honoring.	Obedient.	Pitagan.	Mapagpitagan.
To elate.	Overbearing.	Palalo.	Mapagpalalo.
Destroying.	Destructor.	Sira.	Mapagsira.
Scoffing.	Scoffer, jeerer.	Libac.	Mapaglibac.
Jesting.	Jester.	Biro.	Mapagbiró.
Lavishing.	Squanderer.	Acsayá.	Mapagacsayá.
Observing.	Observer.	Masid.	Mapagmasid.
Grudging.	Detractor.	Bolong.	Mapagbolong.

To get a morsel stopped in the throat.	Mahirin.
He had a fin (thorn) stuck in his throat.	Mahirinan siyá nang tinic.
To become, to be proper.	Mabágay.
Do you think is it proper for a girl to go alone about the streets? •	¿Ang ísip mo bagá ay nababágay sa isáng dalaga, ang paglácad na mag-isa sa mañga lansáñgan.?
To hold, to be sufficient.	Magcasiya.
To mistake, to err, to make a mistake.	Magcamali.

Maguin, may be made to denote doubt or chance.

Will it be perchance true.?	¿Maguiging totoò cayá iyáng.?
Why might not that be true.?	¿Sáan di maguiguintotoò ñga iyán.?
After a certain number of days.	Nang maguing-iláng arao.
When one month may be elapsed.	Cun maguing-isáng bouan na.
To meddle with.	Manhimasoc. (from pásoc).
Why do you meddle to look into other people's business.?	¿Baquin mo pinanhihimasocan ang búhay nang ibàng tauò.?

To laugh more and more.	Táua nang táua.
He prays more and more.	Dasal nang dasal siyá.
To walk and ever to walk.	Lalácad nang lalácad.
Read without rest.	Bumasà ca nang bumasa.
Repeat constantly the name of God.	Ang Dios nang Dios ang uicáin mo.
They constantly call me, as if there were no other but me.	Acó nang acó ang tinatáuag nilá, díua,i, ualáng il à cundí acó.
I mean, I say.	Sa macatouir.
The Almighty, that is to say, God.	{ Ang Macapangyarihan sa lahat, sa macatouir, ang Dios.
So to say, as it were.	{ Alaláong, alaláong bagá, cun bagá sa.
The soul, the vital principle as it were.	{ Ang calolóua, alaláong, ang dili bagá nang búhay.

The diversity of meanings which the pronoun anò may embody are very important and we subjoin some illustrations thereof.

What?	?Anò,? ¿anò bagá?
What is your business here?	¿Aanò ca ritò,? ¿ungmaanò ca ritò?
What is his business there?	¿Aanò siyá rón?
What is the matter with Peter that he cries so much?	¿Inaanò bagá si Pedro, nag-iiyac siyá paganón?
They do nothing to him.	Hindí siyá inaanò.
And what does that matter to you?	{ ¿Anhín mo bagá iyán,? ¿anóng ma-saquit sa iyò?
What do I need that book for,? what is that book to me?	{ ¿Anhín co iyáng libro?
How?	¿Paanò?
What will become of me when I have no money?	¿Mapapaanò bagá acó cun acó,i, ualáng salapí?
What has happened to him on his falling down, what was the issue of his fall?	{ ¿Napaanò bagá siyá sa caniyang pag-cahólog?
See whether he was hurt, inquire whether anything has been the matter with him.	{ Alamín mo cun napaanò siyá.
Do you know how his handwriting is?	{ ¿Naalaman mo bagá cun papaanò ang caniyang pagtític?
To what purpose more comment?	¿Paganhín saysayin?
Well then, as I was saying	Ay anò,i,
What else,? what more?	¿Anò pa ñga?

SIXTY FIRST EXERCISE.

Who are those two women? They are sisters-in-law. Who are those people? They are the parents of this child. Who is that couple sitting there? They are wife and husband. Are those two persons brothers? They are brothers. Are those three boys companions? They are companions. And these two, are friends? They are friends. Did the father and the son go to church? Because my master is ever calling me. What is done to you? I am always laughed at by these bakers. What do you want that pin for? I want it to clean my teeth. How is the daughter of the writer? She is already well.

SIXTY SECOND LESSON.

YCAANIM NA POUO,T, DALAUANG PAGARAL.

PARTICLES FORMING SUBSTANTIVES AND ADJECTIVES. (continued)

PA. PAG. PAGCA. PALA. PAN.

Pu is prefixed to a noun or verbal root indicative of such thing or action as can be assigned to a person, to form verbal nouns denoting contents or the portion thus assigned to or handed over by an agent. The change or dropping of the first letters of the root also takes place sometimes in this kind of composition.

Punishment, penance.	{ Penalty inflicted.	Dusá.	Parusá.
Inheritance.	{ Legacy.	Mana.	Pamana.
Marrow, flesh, contents.	{ The contents, what is written on a paper.	Lamáu.	Palamán.
Tumor, abscess.	{ Swelling.	Bagá.	Pamagá.
New.	{ Offering of the first fruits, tithe.	Bagó.	Pamagô.
Food kept from the previous night for the morning.	{ Breakfast.	Báhao.	Pamáhao.
House.	{ Household furniture, chattels.	Báhay.	Pamáhay.
Note, registry.	{ Poll, a record of inhabitants.	Tandá.	Pamandá.
To carry.	{ Load, remittance, sending.	Dalá.	Padalá.
To conceal.	{ Thing concealed.	Tago.	Patago.
To borrow things.	{ Thing borrowed.	Hiram.	Pahiram.

As for the government of sentences in which a noun of this kind enters, the agent should be put in the possessive case, the thing object of the action, if it is expressed, in the nominative, and the person to whom it is apportioned, in the dative. The following examples will illustrate the rule.

I bequeath this to my nephew.	Pamana co itò sa aquing pamangquín.
This was bequeathed to me by my father.	Ytò,i, pamana sa aquin nang amá co
What I do is a penance inflicted on me by the priest.	Ang guinagauá co,i. parusá sa aquin nang pare.
This book I borrowed from my mother.	Ytòag librò,i, pahiram sa aquin ni inà.
That is what I made him carry.	Yab,i, ang padalà co sa caniyà.

If pa is prefixed to a root expressive of a certain manner of placing, the posture, without any reference whatever to the cause, is expressed.

Seated. (status)	Paupó.
Standing.	Patindig.
Lain down.	Pahigá.
Lengthwise.	Pahaba.
Sidewise, incidentally.	Pataguilid.
Side-across.	Pahalang.
Knelt down.	Palohod.
Face downwards.	Pataob.
Face upwards.	Patihayá.

But if such posture is represented as the effect of some cause and stress is laid on the latter, pa should be prefixed by na.

He fell face-downwards.	Naparapú siyá.
I fell down and remained seated.	Napaupó acó.

Pag has already been fully treated of as the proper prefix to form the verbal nouns expressive of the action in um and mag conjugations, the first syllable of the root, for the latter, being repeated as has been explained.

The eating, the action of eating.	Ang pagcáin.
The killing.	Ang pagpatáy.
The weeping.	Ang pagtatañgis.
The weeping much, the action of weeping hard.	Ang pagtatañgis.
The giving.	Ang pagbibigáy.
The throwing away.	Ang pagtatapon.

Pag, as a particle forming, either alone or with sa preceding, adverbial expressions of time, has also been so fully explained in foregoing lessons as to dispense with further explanations.

On his writing.	Sa pagsúlat niyá.
After my reading the book.	{ Pagbatà co nang libro, or, pagcaba-
On my finishing the work.	{ à, etc. Pagtapus co nang trabajo.

By the an passive with na prefixed to a root of a thing or action, of anything capable of being exchanged for or of bringing about profit in return, expressions indicative of the way by which the gain has been come at, are formed.

This money I came at by serving. (rendering menial services).	{ Napaglicoran co itòng salapí.
This money he got at by his selling rice.	{ Napagbigasan niyá itòng salapí.

Pagca, is for intransitive involuntary actions, what pag is for transitive or for intransitive, but voluntary ones.

The dying.	Ang pagcamatáy.
The falling.	Ang pagcahólog.
The stumbling.	Ang pagcatísod.
The slipping down.	Ang pagcadulás.
The sleeping.	Ang pagcatúlog.

When pagca is prefixed to an active verbal root or to a voluntary action, it expresses manner, mode, fashion.

Your fashion of walking.	Ang pagcalácad mo.
Your manner of pronouncing.	Ang pagcauica mo.
Their manner of expression.	Ang pagcasabi nilá.
Her handwriting, penmanship.	Ang pagcasúlat or pagcatític niyá.

Paga builds up abstract nouns expressive of what constitutes the essence, the innermost nature constitutive of a quality.

Divinity.	Ang pagcadios.
The attributes of God.	Ang pagcadios nang Dios.
What is inherent in mankind.	Ang pagcatauó.
Manhood.	Ang pagcalalaqui.
Womanhood.	Ang pagcababaye.
Philosophy.	Ang pagcadúnong.

Pala is prefixed to a verbal or nominal root denoting an action or thing capable of being converted into, or of being object of, a vice, to form adjectival nouns expressive of the habitual indulgence in such vice.

Idol.	Heathen.	Anito.	Palaanito.
Curse.	{ Curser, mordaci- ous.	{ Sumpá.	Palasumpá.
Litigation, law-suit.	{ Barrator.	Osap.	Palaosap. { Palainom nang álac.
Drinking.	Drunkard.	Inou.	Palacáin.
Eating.	Glutton.	Cáin.	Palasintá.
Love.	Wooer.	Sintá.	Palaósap.
Chat, speaking.	Chatterer.	Osap.	Palaáuay.
Quarrelling.	{ Peevish, quarel- some.	{ Auay.

Pan, prefixed to a verbal root capable of admitting of an instrument for the action or for the thing to be made by, expresses the instrument, when the latter is not indicated by y in the manner already explained.

Pan, being the passive particle for man, drops n and causes the first letter of the root to undergo the same changes which have been spoken of in man conjugation. It is by paying attention to the signification and character of the root, that pan derivatives can, in some cases, be distinguished from those formed with pa.

To seal.	Seal.	Tatac.	Panatac.
Hole.	Auger.	Butas.	Pamutas.
To mow.	Sickie.	Gapas.	Pangapas.
To shave.	Razor.	Ahit.	Pañgahit.
To dig.	Pickax, hoe.	Húcay.	Panhúcay.
To cart.	Pannier, basket.	Hácot.	Panhácot.
Stick, club.	Cudgeling-stick.	Palo.	Pamalo.
To rub.	Dishclout.	Pahir.	Pamahir.
To cling.	Hook.	Cáuit.	Pañgáuit.
To pinch.	Pincers.	Sípit.	Panípit.
To sprinkle, to make aspersions.	{ Water-sprinkler.	- Uisic.	Pañguísic.
To sound.	Sounding lead.	Taroc.	Panaroc.
To scratch.	Scratcher.	Cámot.	Pañgámot.
To strike.	Hammer.	Pocpoc.	Pamocpoc.
To write.	Pen.	Súlat.	Panúlat.
To tie.	Tying rope.	Tali.	Panali or pantali.
Dash, line drawn with a pen.	{ Kuler for draw- ing a straight line.	Gúhit.	Pangúhit.

If pan is prefixed to a root itself an instrument, pan, then, has the same import as pinaca, that is to say, what substitutes for that instrument, is formed.

Auger.	} What serves as an } auger.	} Licop.	Panlicop.
Saw.

Prime, the most excellent or valuable part of a thing; intensity, the culminating point of an action.	} Salocoy.
Do do do. (abstract)
In the prime of.	Casalocoyan.
To be in the prime of youth.	Sa casalocoyan.
The time in which the sowing is in full swing.	Masacasalocoyan nang cabatáan.
	Casalocoyan nang patatanim.
The same for thrashing.	Casalocoyan nang pagguic.
Your child is now at the point of growth.	Ang anac mo,i, nasacasalocoyan figayón nang paglaqui.
His sister is now in the prime of life.	Ang caniyáng capatid na babaye ay nasacasalocoyan figayón nang cabatáan.

SIXTY SECOND EXERCISE.

What penalty did the judge inflict upon you? I have been fined twenty dollars. What legacy did you receive from your uncle? He bequeathed me a thousand dollars. Is that true? These words were the contents of his letter. What kind of food is that? This food is for my breakfast. What has Mr. Such-a-one sent? This is what he sent. Is that auger yours? No, it has been borrowed from the carpenter. How shall I do the work? You shall do it sitting. (seated) How should this be cut? Cut it lengthwise. How shall I pray? You should pray knelt down. Is he up or lain down? He is lain down. How is his manner of speaking? His manner of speaking is by stuttering. How is the essence of God? The essence of God is incomprehensible to man. Where is the tying rope for these logs of wood? The tying rope is in the house.

SIXTY THIRD LESSON.
YCAANIM NA POUO,T, TATLONG PAGARAL.

PINACA. SANG. TAG. TAGA. TIG. YCA.

Pinaca is prefixed to nominal or adjectival roots, forming compounds expressive of what serves as a substitute or is reputed to stand for the thing or quality signified by the root. The following instances will better illustrate the matter.

Boiled rice stand for bread with natives.	Ang canin ang siyáng pinacatinápay nang mañga tagalog.
We consider you our leader.	Ycáo ang pinacaponó namin.
The lion is considered the king of animals.	Pinacahari ang leon (Sp.) nang mañga háyop.
Sin is reputed to be the greatest evil.	Ang pinacamalaquí sa lahat. na casa-máa, ang casalanán.
What accidentally serves as a broom.	Pinacausalís.
He who stands for a parent.	Ang pinacamagúlang.
He whom somebody reputes as his lord.	Pinacapañginóon.
What serves as a pen in case of need.	Pinacapanúlat.
Anybody acting for a servant.	Ang pinacaalila.
The mistress, the minion, anybody whom one reputes as husband or wife.	Ang pinacaasáua.

Sang is but a determinated form of isá; the latter may stand alone; sang, is always joined to the thing or unity determined or counted.

It precedes the first unities of the decimal system of numeration.

A denary.	Sang pouò.
A hundred.	Sang dáan.
A thousand.	Sang libò.
A ten thousand.	Sang lacsá.
A hundred thousand.	Sang yota.
A million.	Sang pouong yota, sang áfigao-úñgao.

It expresses totality, length of time.

He came one day.	Naparitò siyá isàng árao.
All the day long.	Sang árao.
For a whole hour.	Sang oras.
Throughout the week.	Sang lingo.
All the month round.	Sang bóuan.
The length of the year.	Sang taón.

It denotes the contents of some thing, not the vessel or continent.

A tinaja (large earthen pot) of, or, } for water.	} Y-àng tapayang túbig or sa túbig. Sang tapayang lañgís. Sang boteng álac. Sang cucharang (Sp.) polot.
One tinajaful of cocoa-nut. oil.
One bottle of wine.
One spoonful of honey.

Sang precedes nouns of towns, meeting-places or resorts to indicate the whole population or attendance.

All the inhabitants of Manila.	Sang Maynila.
The whole population of Cebú.	Sang Sebú.
The full attendance at church.	Sang simbahan.
The spectators of a play.	Sang teatro.
The whole offspring.	Sang anacan.
The litter, the number of pigs farrow- } ed at once.	} Sang anacan bábuy.
Brood of a she-dog.
The whole crew of a ship.	Sang dáuong.
The people sailing on a pirogue.	Sang bangca.

Collective nouns formed with ca prefixed and an or han suffixed admit of sang before to indicate totality.

The full house, all the tenants.	Sang bahayan.
The whole town, all the villagers.	Sang bayan.
All the heavenly legions.	Sang calañgitan.
The whole of mankind.	Sang catauhan.
All the world. (people).	Sang calibotan.
The whole of Christendom.	Sang caeristianohan.
The whole Archipelago.	Sang capoloan.
All the Saints in Heaven.	Sang calañgitan Santos.

Tag is but a contracted form of taga. It serves to form the seasons, monsoons or the prevalent time of any atmospherical occurrences.

Spring.	Tagárag.
Summer.	Tagbisi, tagárag, tag-init.
Autumn.	Tagolán, (rainy season)
Winter.	Tagguírag, taglamig. (cold season).
Prevailing time of the south-west } wind monsoon.	} Taghabárag.
The portion of the year during which } north-east winds prevail.
Space of time during which typhoons } are most frequent.	} Tagbaguírag.

Taga, besides the sense of origin and the others which have been already treated of, forms, like man, frequentative verbal nouns, generally indicating the trade the person is engaged in for a salary, and is put before verbs.

To tend, to watch. } } Watchman, tend- } } er.	} Tanod.	} Tagatanod.
To boil rice for } food. } Cook, man charg- } } ed with boiling } } the rice.
To watch over, to } be on the lookout } for. } Sentry.	} Bantáy.	} Tagapagbantáy.
To look out, to be } careful. } Overseer.
To haunt. } } Haunter.	} Ligáo.	} Tagaligáo.

Herdsmen, swine keeper. (for other people's herd). } Tagatanor nang bábuy.

Tig forms, with the cardinal numerals, the distribute numerals, the first syllable of the cardinal being repeated from five upwards in the way already explained. It differs from man in the latter being only applied to unities of measure, while tig is but for numbers.

One each.	Tig-isa.
Two each.	Tigdalauà, ticalauà.
Five to every one.	Tiglilimà.
Ten to each.	Tigsawpouò, tigsawpouò.

Yea=ica, prefixed to numeral cardinals converts them into ordinals, the first three being irregular.

The first.	Ang onà, ang naonà.
The second.	Ang ycalauà.
The third.	Ang ycatlò.
Four.	Fourth.	Apat.	Ycaápat, ycápat.
Five.	Fifth.	Limà.	Ycalimà.
Ten.	Tenth.	Sang póuo.	{ Y c a p ó u o , y c a - sangpouò.
Twenty three.	Twenty third.	{ Dalauàng póuo,t, } tatlò.	{ Y c a d a l a u à n g p o - uò,t, tatlò.

Man, my friend. (used to attract attention).	{ Mama. } (colloquial name given to any male person, generally older than the speaker).
Woman, madam. (do do do).	Alí (do do do for female persons).
Good fellow, come here, please.	Mama, halí ñga cayó.
Good woman, madam, stop, please.	Alí, hintáy ñga po cayó.

They are highlanders.	Taga bondoc silá.
Is your servant from Ilocos.?	¿Taga Iloco bagá ang iyóng alila.?
No, my servant is from here, from Manila.	Hindí, ang aquing alila,i, taga ritò, taga Maynila.

DIMINUTIVE VERBS.

If an action capable of a scurrilous performance is carried away from its natural sense so as to be made denote fiction, slowness, mockery or awkward execution, the verb, in Tagalog, is said to be in a diminutive form. This manner of representing the action, which is very common among natives, is generally made by repeating the entire verbal root, whatever else refers to the mechanism of the conjugation being preserved.

To walk.	Lumácad.
To walk in a scurrilous manner.	Lumacadlácad.
To say, to speak.	Magüica.
To speak and pronounce indistinctly like little children.	Magüicaüica.
To sleep.	Matólog.
To slumber, or, to feign sleeping.	Matologtólog.
Carried, taken.	Dinalá.
Carried and brought in again and over again.	Dinaladalá.
To write.	Sumúlat, magsúlat.
To scribble.	Sumúlatsúlat, magsúlatsúlat.
To eat.	Cumáin, magcáin.
To eat very little as sick persons do; to eat and slaver as babies.	Cumaincáin, magcaincáin.
To weep.	Tumañgis, magtañgis.
To whine.	Tumañgistañgis, magtañgistañgis.
To rain.	Umolán.
To drizzle.	Umolanolán.
To build houses.	Magbáhay.
To raise little houses as children do.	Magbaybahayan.
<hr/>
To carry off a prey.	Dumaguit.
The sick person can already walk a little, can make some steps.	Ang mey saquit nacacalacadlácad na.
The child begins to mutter some words.	Ang bata,i, nagüicaüica na.
Do not trust him, he only feigns to sleep.	Houag mo siyang paniualáan, nagtologtologán siya lámang.
Why are you always taking the book in and out?	¿Báquit mo dinadaladalá ang libro?
The male and the female child write each other little love-letters.	Ang dalauàng bata nagsusúlatsulatan nang palasintahan.

SIXTY FOURTH LESSON.

YCAANIM NA POUO,T, APAT NA PAGARAL.

THE COLLOQUIAL LANGUAGE.

To the many rules of syntax and illustrations of Tagalog construction hitherto given, it will be well to append a few notes on colloquial Tagalog which are suggested by a consciousness of some of the common errors into which Europeans are apt to fall.

FIRST. Get rid of the notion that it is necessary in Tagalog to express invariably by nouns or pronouns the agents and objects of the actions spoken of. Sentences in Tagalog are arranged in a more impersonal and elliptical manner than in the civilised languages of Europe.

Give me.	Big-ián acó.
Tell him.	Sabihin sa caniyá.
Read it.	Basahin.
Don't say it.	Houag sabihin.
Give it back.	Ysaolí mo.
Let us give them back to him.	Saolíán natin.
I think, I believe.	Acala co,i, (my guess is).
He wishes, he is willing.	Ibig niyá,i, (his desire is).
It seems.	Díua,i, (the appearance is).
They say.	{ Ang sabí, ang balita,i, (the report is).
I am told, people tell me. . . .	{ Ang sabí nang mañga tauò sa aquin ay. . . .
I hear that she is going to be married.	{ Ang sabí,i, na siyá,i, magaasáua.
I like walking better than driving.	{ Mabuti pa ang paglácad sa pagcaca-rruage (Sp.) (Walking is better than driving).

Even in scolding others, natives, sometimes, adopt such an indirect mode of address as to dispense with the Tagalog equivalent for "you", that should be used in similar English sentences.

Are you mute,? why don't you answer.?	{ ¿Pipi bagá itóng bata,? ¿at di siyá sungmasagot.? (Lit. is this boy mute?; why does he not answer.?)
How stupid you are.! can't you see the cats eating the cheese.?	{ ¡Abáa!, itóng tauóng itò. ¿Di niyá namamasdán na ang quiso,i, pinupusa.? (Lit. Oh!, this boy!. Does he not give heed to the cheese being nibbled at by cats.?)
What a lazy fellow you are.!	{ ¡Ayáa, !matamad na matamad itóng tauó.

SECOND. Learn to employ the various passive forms of the verb and try to overcome the difficulties of construction peculiar to these forms.

The rats ate up the candles.	Ang mañga candila, i, dinagá.
Wild boars use to uproot hemp-producing trees.	Ang mañga ponong abacá, i, inoongcal nang bábuy damó.
To officers of the Board of Health set fire to the nipa houses and prevented the plague from spreading.	Pinasonog nang mañga sanitario (Sp.) ang mañga báhay na páuid at hinahá-rang ang salot na cumálat.

THIRD. Bear in mind the distinction between the sense given to an intransitive verb by the particle um and that which is imparted by prefixing mag. Um, expresses a state; mag, an action. Such verb, for instance, as "to swim" may be considered either as descriptive of the condition of the person who swims or as of some circumstance of the action of swimming. Hence, lumañgáy, "to swim"; maglañgáy, "to take along something in swimming". On the other hand, to say, tumañgis is to put more stress on the person who weeps, while magtañgis, is more in reference to the cause of weeping; sungmusúlat siyá, refers more to the manual action of his penmanship; nagsusúlat siyá, lays stress on the thought he conveys to other people in writing; bumauas or mauas, "to waste, to lessen by taking out a portion out of a heap for the subject"; magbauas "to diminish by giving a portion to others, but practically, the difference here is not great.

To following verbs will add to the illustrations given above.

To walk.	Lumácad.
To carry along something in walking.	Maglácad.
To fly.	Lumipad.
To fly to and fro.	Maglipad.
To leap.	Lumocsò.
To rush on, to leap along with.	Maglocsò.
To fall back.	Umòrong.
To withdraw, to take back.	Magòrong.
To dive.	Sumísid.
To dive for.	Magsísid.
To sit down.	Umupó.
To sit down. (many)	Magopó.

FOURTH. Try to employ the specific instead of the generic word for the action to be described, when, as is generally the case in Tagalog, there is a verb for that particular manner of action. It may be possible to make one's self understood by using gauá and adding the complementary term for every kind of work, but it is much better to employ the appropriate term for the particular manner or object of working, as seen in the following illustrations.

Working, doing.	Gauá. (root-word) (generic).
To make (something) speedily.	Magmadalí.
To make, to do something superficially.	Humapáo.
To do carefully.	Lumánay.
To make carefully.	Maglánay.
To do, to practice, to train, to exercise.	Magsánay.
To make something slowly or little by little.	Maghinay-hinay, mag-inot-inot, magotay-otáy
To work by night, to wake.	Lumámay.
To make something by night.	Maglámay.
To do at random.	Magpasumala.
To do something willingly.	Magcusa.
To make something. (many at the same time)	Mañgagsabáy.
To make something again.	Bumagò.
To work manually.	Cumimót.

To make a retraction.	Tumaliuacás.
To do harm.	Magpañganyaya.
To work earnestly.	Magsáquit, magsumáquit.
To work by the job.	Magpaquiáo.
To make salt.	Magtásic, magasín.

This, besides the common way of prefixing mag to a root expressing any thing that can be made, as explained in mag conjugation.

To break, to fracture, to smash.	Bumásag, másag, magbásag.
To destroy.	Sumira. (generic)
To split, to cleave.	Mali, magbali.
To rip, to unseam.	Tumastás, magtastás.
To rend, to tear.	Gumisí.
To break, to divide, to separate by } using one's teeth.	Ñgumalot.
To break some metallic object.	Bumigtal.
To break asunder.	Búmiac.
To break asunder rattans.	Manhimatir.
To crush, to break by collision.	Magpocol.
To crack. (as a nut or an egg-shell)	Magpisá.
To pound husk rice.	Bumayó.
To part, (a line), to disunite. (trans) }	Pumatid, matir, magpatid; lumagot,
To part (intrans.) to be disunited.	maglagot. Mapatid, malagot.

To strike.	{ Pumocpoc, mocpoc, magpocpoc (gen- eric).
To strike, to beat, to cudgel.	Pumalo, humampás.
To knock about, to deal out blows } with a stick.	Humanbalos.
To strike with the open hand, to slap.	Tumampal.
To strike with the fist, to box.	Sumuntoc.
To strike, to beat (as wool, cotton } etc.) for cleansing or fulling; to shake } clothes clean.	Pumagpag: magpagpag. (intensive)
To flap, to applaud, to clap.	Pumacpac, magpacpac.
To strike, to pound.	Pumitpit, magpitpit.

To throw away, to cast off.	Magtapon. (generic)
To throw something to the ground, to } dash.	Maghólog.
To throw up into the air.	Magtálang.
To thrust, to dart a spear.	Magborlong, sumibat.
To pelt, to throw stones at, to hurl.	Humaguís, maghaguís.
To throw about, to scatter.	Magbulagsac.
To cast up, to vomit, to emit.	Sumucá, magsucá.
To throw splints at.	Magbalíbang, magbalibat.
To shoot at, to aim at.	Tumurlá.

To look at.	Tumiñgin. (generic.)
To look at for.	Cumita.
To look back.	Lumiñgon.
To look at something in astonish- } ment, to behold, to gaze at.	Panóor.
To look sideways at.	Sumuliap.
To look upwards.	Tumiñgalá.

To look at from afar, to sight.	Tumanáo.
To stare, to look at fixedly.	Tumítig.

FIFTH. Try to get accustomed to the use of the radical alone, or the radical with the passive particle in the second persons of the imperative, leaving tone or gesture to complement the meaning.

Run.	Tabá.
Finish.	Tapús.
Take. (it, them, some.)	} (what is at } hand, sight.) }
Kill. (it, them.)		Cunin.
Cast. (it, them.)	do	Patayí.
Look at. (it, them, him, her.)	do	Ytapon.
Buy. (it, them.)		Tingní, tingnán.
Seize.		Bilhín.
		Daquip.

SIXTY FOURTH EXERCISE.

What shall I buy for his children? Buy some toys for them. Shall I send the servant for bread? Send him. Shall I kill the big cock? Kill it. What should he do with that money? Why do you go on foot? I like better to walk than (to) ride. What do you bring me there? I bring you some oil. What an idiot you are! I tell you to bring water, and you bring oil, you are behaving badly and it will serve you right if you got a drubbing. Why are these clothes thus destroyed? Because they were eaten up by moths. Where is the fruit destroyed by ravens? I threw it to the swine. What has been spoiled by ants? The plants of my garden, have been all of them spoiled by ants, and the trees dug up by swine. What does he carry along in walking? He carries along some food to eat on his way. (journey). What do kites carry off? Kites carry off chickens. Why is the food so badly cooked? Because the cook has cooked it in a hurry. Did you read the paper I lent you yesterday? I did superficially (perused, looked over). How shall I make this translation? Make it slowly. Do you engage in prayer the whole night? I pray the whole night. Did she do it willingly? She did. Is this letter well written? No, write it again. Did he use a tool to make that? No, he made it with his hands. Does the carpenter work on wages or by the job? He works by the job. Did you rip your shirt? No, I have not yet ripped it. Did Peter tear the book-leaves? He did. How does your grandmother break the betel nut? She uses to crack it with her teeth. Will your sister break the ring? She will. Is the rope parted. It is. Whom did he slap? He slapped his servant. Why did not my brother shake (flap) his clothes clean? He had to pound the rice. Why does your child throw away fruits? He is amusing himself by throwing some in the air. What are those boys doing? They are hurling stones at your horse. May I take that book? Take it. Where shall I put these papers? Throw them away. Where are the birds? Over there, look at them. Do you wish your friend to buy the horse? Let him buy it. What are you looking at? I am looking at the stars on the sky, they shine very brightly. Whom are you looking to see on that window? I am looking to see my child who was just a while playing with his schoolmates, but I no longer see him. Whom is Pete looking back for? He is looking back for Mary who remained at the well. What did you see at the theatre? I beheld there the killing of king Richard the Third. What were the love-engaged parties doing? They were looking sideways at each other. Why do you not climb up that tree? Because I am afraid of your looking upwards at me. From where did you sight the ship? I sighted her from the summit of that mountain. Why does his sister look fixedly at me? Because she likes you.

SIXTY FIFTH LESSON.

YCAANIM NA POUO,T, LIMANG PAGARAL.

MANNER OF SUBSTITUTING WORDS FOR THOSE WANTING IN TAGALOG.

The student will probably be much surprised when at this stage of the work he has not found such abstract terms as are common in modern languages. This lack of specific terms is only natural to every language or dialect in its primitive state. The ancient condition of Tagals and their present comparatively backward state of culture account for such deficiency. Every abstract idea of a thing, action or event not occurring to their minds or being presented to their senses, such as they could not be acquainted with in their isolated condition of life before the conquest, has to be conveyed to them by having recourse to Spanish words or through parables or metaphors, while, on the other hand, they have a profusion of words, either of a general or local use, for every shade of meaning of such things and actions as represent their customary dealings and transactions. A fair opportunity offers itself to the learner for exercising his mind by availing himself of the words he is already acquainted with, to convey the notion of such things and acts as have not proper terms of expression in Tagalog. If the speaker is conversant with Spanish and considers that the native whom he is addressing has been initiated in the language or that he has held some intercourse with Spaniards, the former will do well in trying first if by Tagalizing the proper Spanish term for the abstract notion he wants to convey, he succeeds to make himself understood. If he fails, he must then have recourse to such Tagalog words as may best serve his purpose, by using them in the way of parable or definition.

We subjoin sets of words and expressions showing the copiousness of terms for certain things and the scantiness for others, and how the latter may be replaced. In the latter case an English translation, as literal as it can be, of the allegorical Tagalog phrase is added on a third column; little care having been paid to the sense that the student may thus receive more valuable information.

DIFFUSIVENESS.

Rice. (generical term).	Bigás.

SYNCOPEs AND EPENNHESSES.

As indicated elsewhere in this work we now subjoin a list of the most usual contractions and other peculiar ways of forming Tagalog compounds, especially those in which the suffixes in and an enter.

The majority of these figures of diction are syncope^s or contractions affecting the last vowel of the root, or the latter and the final consonant or consonants thereof, which are dropped before receiving the aforesaid suffixes. There are, however, some which are epentheses, that is to say, some, in which some letter or letters are replaced, inverted or inserted in the middle of the root, the structure of which is, in the latter case, expanded for the sake of euphony.

The following compounds may be considered as examples of PROVERBS.

In no better way is the natives' fancy displayed than in proverbs, adages, riddles and paradoxes, which, one might say, constitute the very pith of their speech and are considered by them the highest form of wit.

We give hereafter some Tagalog proverbs which have fairly exact counterparts in English. A translation, as literal as it can be, of the Tagalog words is offered opposite in a third column. This translation will be found in many cases to trample upon English syntax and accurateness. It is needless to say that this has been done on purpose and with a view to help the learner to a better understanding of the matter.

SIXTY EIGHTH EXERCISE.

THE LORD'S PRAYER.

Our Father who art in heaven, hallowed be Thy name; Thy kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven; give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses as we forgive them who trespass against us; and lead us not into temptation; but deliver us from evil. Amen.

THE ANGELICAL SALUTATION.

Hail Mary, full of grace, the Lord is with Thee, blessed art thou among women, and blessed is the fruit of thy womb, Jesus.

Holy Mary, Mother of God, pray for us sinners, now and at the hour of our death. Amen.

THE APOSTLES' CREED.

I believe in God the Father Almighty, creator of heaven and earth; and in Jesus Christ, His Only Son, our Lord, who was conceived of the Holy Ghost, born of the Virgin Mary, suffered under Pontius Pilate, was crucified, dead and buried; He descended into hell; the third day He rose again from the dead; He ascended into heaven, sitteth at the right hand of God the Father Almighty; from thence He shall come to judge the living and the dead. I believe in the Holy Ghost; the Holy Catholic Church, the communion of Saints; the forgiveness of sins; the resurrection of the body; and life everlasting. Amen.

THE GLORIA PATRI.

Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost! As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be, world without end. Amen.

THE SALVE REGINA.

Hail holy Queen, Mother of Mercy, our Life, our Sweetness, and our Hope; to thee do we cry, poor banished sons of Eve; to thee do we send up our Sighs, mourning and weeping in this valley of tears. Turn, then, most gracious Advocate, thine eyes of mercy towards us, and after this our exile, show unto us the blessed fruit of thy womb, Jesus, O clement, O loving, O sweet Virgin Mary.

SIXTY NINTH LESSON.
YCAANIM NA POUO,T, SIYAM NA PAGARAL.

ON THE LIGAMENTS.

To what has been said in the part devoted to Prosody and in the fourth lesson about the ligaments we now append some additional remarks on the subject, one likely to tax the learner's patience.

G, ng and na, as ligaments, require two different terms to be linked. Thus, nouns referring to the very same person or entity are not linked together.

Father Charles.

Saint John Chrysostomus.

The Rodriguez family.

Si Pare Carlos.

Ang pón Si San Juan Crisóstomo.

Siná Rodriguez.

In the same way and for the same reason, nouns in the vocative case are not linked either.

You, Americans.

You, natives.

Listen, my brethren.

Ye, sinners, beware!

Cayó, mañga Americano.

Cayó, mañga Tagalog.

Paqingán, aquin mañga kapatid.

Mag-íngat cayó, mañga macasalanan.

If, however, a characteristic predicate is added to an historical name, or an adjective or numeral is used as an epithet to a noun, the ligament or the article should be employed, as it is also the case with the latter in English.

King Ferdinand the Saint.

Peter, the learned.

Lesson the second.

{ Ang Hari Si Pernandong Santo, or,
 { Pernando ang Santo.

{ Si Pedrong marúnung, or, Si Pedro
 { ang marúnong.

{ Pagaáral na ycalauá, or, ycalauáng
 { pagaáral.

The same takes place with any adjectival clause.

Jane, the daughter of our servant. { Si Juanang anac nang aming alila.
 { or, Si Juana, ang anac nang aming
 { alila.

As for the use of na after words ending in two different vowels, it may be said that this is generally done with such vocables as are accented on the antepenultimate syllable, and that, if the vocable is otherwise accented, ng is to be preferred.

Limpid water.

Clear day.

Plundering fellow.

Malínao na túbig.

Arao na maliuanag.

Magnanácao na tauò.

Good fellow.
Tenth exercise.

Tauong mabuti.
Ycasangpouóng pagsasánay.

Copulative and alternative conjunctions, whether polysyllabic or not, cause the preceding word to drop the ligament. Thus, nouns or sentences put in relation by means of any such conjunctions either expressed or understood, are not linked.

Life and death.
John, Peter and Frank.
Water and liquors.
Body and soul.
The Cruz family and Jane.
Little birds feed on worms and the former are eaten (devoured) by kites.
This or that.
Whether long or short.
Be it true or false.
Shall you come or not?

Ang búhay at camatayan.
Si Juan, Si Pedro, Si Quicoy.
Ang túbig patí álac.
Ang cataouán sampong calolóua.
Siná Cruz ni Juana.
Ang óor, ay quinacáin nang mumunting ibon at ang munting ibon ay linalamon nang láuin.
Ytò ó (cun) iyán.
Mahaba man, maiclí man.
Maguing totoò, maguing cabulaanan.
¿Pariritò ca, dili.?

Any pause in the speech, generally indicated in English by the comma or a similar sign of punctuation, is, in Tagalog, tantamount to the dropping of the ligament.

You, Sir, are wealthy; I, a poor man. { Cayó po,i, mayaman; acó,i, mahírap na tauò.
- Don't say that, you will be punished. { Houag sabihin iyán, icáo ay hahampasín.
The articles of Faith are fourteen, seven of which refer to the divinity of Jesus Christ. { Ang mañga punong sinasampalatayan ay labing ápat, pitò sa canilá,i. naoócol sa pagcadios ni Jesucristo.

In the same way and for the same reason, explanatory phrases introduced in the sentence by way of parenthesis, and words of a digressive character are not linked to either the word preceding or following them.

Soul,i, e., the vital principle. { Ang calolóua, díua bagá nang catauoán.
Religion, I say, not only is the word of God; but also. { Ang Religióin, anaquin, hindí lámang uica nang Dios; cundí namán.
Pay forthwith the debt, he says. { Bayaran mo dáo capagdaca ang utang.
The servant, it seems, lacks prudence. { Ang alila. anaqui, ualáng cabaitan.
The priest, he says, is dead. { Ang Pare, uica niyá,i, namatáy.
Faith, the Holy Fathers say, is like a torch that. { Ang pananampalataya, sabí nang mañga Santong Pare ay parang isang tangláo.

If between a noun and its qualifying word or vice-versa, some particle adding to the sense is inserted, the ligament incumbent on the first of the two, passes over to the particle.

Tall person. { Tauong mataás, or, mataás na tauo.
Person already tall. { Tauò nang mataás, or, mataás nang tauò.
She is likewise a wealthy woman. { Siyá,i, babaye namáng mayaman.
Old person still strong. { Malacás pang matandá, or, matandá pang malacás.
Much money indeed. { Marami ñgang salapí.

If two or more of such particles are inserted the ligament adheres to the last article.

A girl who is already also a school- }
 mistress. } Dalaga na namáng maestra.
 Saint John the disciple always most } beloved by Jesus Christ. } Si San Juan, ang alagad na paratí at lalo pang inifbig ni Jesucristo.

This rule holds good also for the monosyllabic pronoun ca.

You are a good boy. Bata cang mabait.
 You are, certainly, a scoundrel. Tauò ca figaning tacsil.

As indicated elsewhere the rule is not applicable to negative adverbs.

You did not write. Hindí ca sungmúlat.
 I will not say it. Di co sasabihin.
 You did not stop, that is the reason } why you did not see it. } Di ca tungmahán, cayá di mo naquita.

Houag is, however, an exception, as it causes the pronoun or the particle to be linked to the verb if the former is inserted, but not otherwise.

Let Peter be cudgeled no longer. } Houag nang hampasín Si Fedro, or, } houag hampasín na Si Pedro.
 Do not run. (plural). } Houag cayóng tumacbò, or, houag tu-
 } macbò cayó.
 Don't buy it. (sing). Houag mong bilhin.
 Let them not come here. Houag siláng pumaritò.
 Let him not kill the pig. Houag niyàng patayín ang bábuy.

Two verbs, one of which is as a direct complement to the other, are linked together if the first of them ends in vowel; but not if it ends in consonant. (n excepted).

We desire to learn. Tayo, i, nagnanasang magáral.
 They endeavour to learn. Silá, i, nagsusumaquit magáral.

The same is the case with phrases where an adjective governs the infinitive with the verb "to be" understood.

Beautiful to see. Magandang tingnán.
 Easy to be made. Magáng gaoin.
 Hard to be broken. Matigás biaoquin.
 Light for running. Malicsing tumacbò.

or, if the past participle is governed by an adverb.

Newly made. Bagòng guinauá.
 Written on purpose. Tiquis sinúlat.

Neither adverbs of place and negation nor the words following them take the ligament.

Write here. Ditò ca sumúlat.
 He ate there. } Diyán siyá cungmáin, or, cungmáin } siyá diyán.
 There my father died. } Dóon si amá namatáy, or, namatáy
 } dóon si amá.
 I don't wish to go out. Di co íbig umalís.
 He is not willing to drink any liquor. Hindí siyá íbig uminom nang álac.

Of the causative and adversative conjunctions, sa pagca, ñguní, datapóua, are linked by means of t; palibhasa, by means of i, as explained in foregoing lessons; the other are used without any ligament at or before them.

Man should be honest although he be poor.	Ang tauð,i, dápat magmabuting ásal' bagamán siyá,i, duc-hú.
This is not yours, but mine.	Ytò,i, hindí iyò, cundí aquin.
Buy it, since you have money.	} Yyòng bilhin, yámang icáo,i, may salapí.
Not a scoundrel, but rather a saint.	Hindí tacsil, cundí bagcús santo.

Interjections drop the ligament, unless they are made substantives.

Would to God he would come!	¡Cahimanauari pumaritò siyá!
What a pity, so much money!	¡Sáyang,! ganiyán caraming pílac.
What does this (word) abá mean?	Ytóng abáng itò, ¿anò ang cahulogán?

The interrogative pronouns excepted, any other interrogative word drops the ligament.

How many days?	¿Ylán árao?
Where are they going towards?	¿Sáan silá napatotòngò?
Why did you read it?	¿Baquin mo binasá?
When will you (plur.) pay?	¿Cailán cayó magbabayad?

Ay—i, is employed when the verb is used in merely the verbal sense or stress is laid on the action; ang, when it is used in the participial sense or stress is laid on the agent.

He stole.	Siyá,i, nagnácao.
It is he who stole.	Siyá ang nagnácao.

Notwithstanding all that has hereinbefore been said on the ligaments the student should remember that Tagalog is hardly yet fixed on this and other points, nor is it likely to be so for years to come, and that, as a consequence thereof, he will probably find these rules disregarded in practice. The fact is that the language has not yet been developed to a point where theory and practice can be made to coincide with any great degree of accuracy, and thus, the rules laid down should be considered as being only approximative.

SIXTY NINTH EXERCISE.

THE CONFITEOR.

I confess to Almighty God, to blessed Mary ever Virgin, to blessed Michael the Archangel, to blessed John the Baptist, to the holy Apostles, Peter and Paul, and to all the Saints, that I have sinned exceedingly, in thought, word, and deed, through my fault, through my fault, through my most grievous fault. Therefore, I beseech the blessed Mary, ever Virgin, blessed Michael the Archangel, blessed John the Baptist, the holy Apostles Peter and Paul, and all the Saints, to pray to the Lord our God for me.

May the Almighty God have mercy upon me, forgive me my sins, and bring me to ever-lasting life. Amen.

May the Almighty and most merciful Lord grant me pardon, absolution and full remission of all my sins. Amen.

FIRST VISIT TO THE MOST HOLY SACRAMENT.

Behold Jesus in the Holy Sacrament, the source of every good, inviting all to visit Him, "Let him that thirsts come to me"—Saint John VII—Oh! what waters of grace have the Saints continually drawn from this fountain, where, according to the prediction of Isaias, Jesus dispenses all the merits of His passion! "You shall draw waters of joy from the fountains of your Saviour" -Isaias XII.- From her long and frequent visits to Jesus Christ in the Holy Eucharist, the Countess of Feria, that illustrious disciple of the venerable Father M. Avila, was called the Spouse of the Sacrament. Being asked how she was employed during the hours which she spent at the foot of the altar, she replied: "I would remain there for all eternity; for the Holy Sacrament contains the essence of God, who will be the food of the blessed. Good God! I am asked what I do in the presence of my Saviour. Why am I not rather asked, what do I not do? I love Him, I praise Him, I thank Him for His favours. I supplicate His mercy; I do what a beggar does in the presence of a rich man, what a sick man does in the presence of his physician, what a person parched with thirst does before a clear fountain, or what a man fainting from hunger does before a splendid table".

O my most amiable, sweet, and beloved Jesus, my life, my hope, my treasure, and the only love of my soul. How dearly has it cost Thee to remain with us in this Sacrament! To dwell on our altars, and to assist us by Thy presence, Thou hadst first to die on a cross, and afterwards to submit to numberless injuries in the Holy Sacrament. Thy love and Thy desire to be loved by us, have conquered all difficulties.

Come, then, O Lord! Come and take possession of my heart. Lock the door of it for ever, that no creature may ever enter, to share in that love which is due to Thee, and which I desire to give entirely to Thee. O my dear Redeemer, mayest Thou alone possess my whole being, and, should I ever be wanting in perfect obedience to Thee, chastise me with severity, that, for the future, I may be more careful to please Thee in all things. Grant that I may never more desire or seek any other pleasure than that of pleasing Thee, of visiting Thee, and of receiving Thee in the Holy Sacrament. Let others seek Earthly goods, I love and desire only the treasure of Thy love. This gift only do I ask of Thee at the foot of Thy altar. Grant that I may forget myself to remember only Thy goodness. Ye, blessed seraphin, I do not envy your glory, but your love for your and my God. Teach me what I must do to love and please Him.

SEVENTIETH LESSON.
YCAPITONG POUONG PAGARAL.

READING AND TRANSLATING EXERCISES.

Books in Tagalog being very scanty, we have had recourse to a collection of sermons and selected the one which is given hereafter for practice in reading and translating. We can hardly commend it as a good morsel of Tagalog literature; it may serve however as an illustration of the manner in which religious truths are served to native people by clergymen.

The arrangement is so devised as to give the student a gradual assistance in his endeavours to translate. In the first part, every Tagalog word or phrase is marked by a number placed above it, and so also is marked the corresponding one of the English text over against it in the second column. In the case of phrases, whenever two or more words in Tagalog have a meaning to be expressed by a single word in English, the former have been enclosed in a parenthesis, the same having been done for English words and phrases in a similar case. When this could not be done, as when a Tagalog word or phrase is to be rendered by two or more English terms requiring the insertion of a third word between, the words bear separately the same number on the English side.

In the second part, both texts are brought face to face and compared without any numbers or parentheses; in the third and last one, the Tagalog text stands alone for the student to do the work and consult the key, if necessary, for what he may not understand; while, on the other hand, the whole exercise is supplemented with foot-notes.

The rendering in the first part is as literal as it can be, the proper rules of English syntax being sometimes disregarded for the purpose: the second part is somewhat less literal, but not so idiomatic and free as the closing one which will be found in the key.

whose sole pursuits here in the world are riches; their only desires, the brute appetites of their earthly bodies; and their longings, high offices and vanity. All this and other things of the same kind were just those which that great Saint was treating and preaching about, and he even wept over their behavior (lives) and propensities that paid no regard, however little, to the great and lofty glory that our Lord has prearranged for those who profess to obey Him.

What else should I add to what Saint Thomas of Villanueva says.?

Is it not a pitiable thing to witness (see) the children's ill demeanor and old people's disregard for their souls, the latter being already so near the grave.?

Is it not sorrowful to witness (to see) the impudence of women in dressing, in waddling, and in other ways, and the infidelity (treachery) of married people.?

Is it not a sad thing to witness (to see) so many people who live upon their robberies and the numberless Christians whose most eager pursuits, day and night, are back-biting at others' lives and destroying the characters of their fellow-creatures.?

All this was what Saint Thomas wept over when he was still alive and was preaching to men, and just this, too, is what men fearing God ought to mourn over, and also what (ought) to make them exclaim with David: "Notum fac mihi, Domine, finem meum"; that is to say; "make known to me my Lord God, what the end of my life will be"; for so many are the sins my eyes (eye) see here on Earth and so many the scandals spreading over cities and towns that I can hardly understand what my mother brought me forth (into the world) for, and scarcely know what Thou createdst me for.

Therefore, my brethren, the main purpose and final destiny God made man for, will be the topic I intend to develop, and the reason of my preaching to you to-day. Listen:

Of all things that have been created by God, man only is indeed disobedient. Yes, indeed, my brethren, for the other things created by God, our Lord, all of them obey and fulfill the task assigned by God to them, but man does not.

The sun, the moon and the other stars turn around and impart brightness, day and night, here to the (whole) Earth.

The soil, too, produces rice, maize and a variety of vegetables, and trees as well, all of which alternately blossom and bear fruit in their respectively appointed seasons and not even one (of these things) dares revolt against the task imposed by God on them.

Animals do carry out the commands of God to them and they besides acknowledge man as (their) master.

The buffalo, for instance, works the soil, carts stone, earth and sand; drags along timber (lumber) and reed-cane, and carries to market-places your husked-rice, maize and anything you deal in.

The horse allows himself to be mounted (ridden) by man and he carries his master to any place whatever.

The dog keeps watch at home, accompanies his master to the woods, to the cornfields, to hunting (with a dog) and takes care of the person (body) and property of him whom he considers as his master.

The sheep yields clothing to man and feeds him too with its tasteful meat.

The hen lays eggs at home and brings forth many chickens, the same serving man as a means to earn his livelihood.

And all animals conjointly fulfill the ends which were prearranged for them by God.

Man, only, is the most rebellious creature of the whole, for it is only he who dares face (stand) and disobey his Creator. It seems as if he did not know the end for which he was created by God, which was for (no) other purpose but that he might know the true God, remember, love and obey Him here in this life that he may behold and enjoy Glory in Heaven.

Is it not this very object (end) God created you for? And is it not just this that most men who boast to be the sons of God do not think upon and remember of?

SEVENTIETH EXERCISE.

TRANSLATION OF THE CLOSING PART TO THE EXERCISE GIVEN IN SEVENTIETH LESSON.

Alas,! my brethren, all these proceedings of yours are to no purpose. If you do not direct to the Lord God your actions, if you do not make the Lord, God, your destination, the goal of your will and the resting-place of your earnest desires and stanch purpose, if you do not put a stop to whatever other pursuit and whatever other desire, if you do not, I say, abandon and renounce every other pleasure here on Earth except God; alas,! all your works are void and certainly they cannot provide the path which shall lead you to Heaven.

Some people who earnestly desired to know the good doctrine asked of Moses to be taught the way leading them to Heaven. Well then, that pious and upright man, Moses, replied to them, "you know that every toil of men here in this world has indeed an end to be attained".

There are many hardships that a soldier has to endure in-time of war: he endures hunger, thirst, weariness, and he, besides, breaks through the enemies howeyer many, and however great may be the risk of death, and all this only because he expects a full reward from his king.

Of little moment to the farmer is the heat of the sun, the inclemency of the weather, the weariness, the toil and the other worries that may render difficult his task, because it is through such troubles in his work that he expects a good crop.

The tradesman does not fear to cross the sea, however strong the wind, however high the billows may rise, and great and certain the risk, when he thinks of the voyage as the means of obtaining a good and high price for his goods.

The sick person has no pity for his body, but rather he suffers willingly the bitterness of the medicine, the pain of the caustic plaster, the ache of the sore and anything the doctor considers right to do to his body, if such treatment is to cure him and bring about some relief to his sickness.

Well then, I now ask you: whereunto do you direct your labours? Whereunto, Sir, but, (you will probably reply to me); whereto, Sir, but to our salvation in Heaven: to our attaining, of course, a happy end and the Glory which our Lord God created for us? If so, I say to you, if so, imitate the soldier, the farmer, the tradesman and the sick person. That is to say, try to seek for what may bring health to your soul in the same manner as these people endeavour to get that which is capable of increasing their wealth and healing their bodies.

To this matter apply the questions of the holy King David who said: "Quis ascendet in montem domini?"? "Aut quis stabit in loco sancto ejus?"? That is to say, said David, "who, indeed, is the happy man who can ascend and attain to the lofty and magnificent seat of our Lord, God?"? "Who, then, lodges in his sacred glory?"? "Who is the happy man that can ever attain the grand end created by God for us?"? And to these questions, he himself answered by these words, "Innocens manibus et mundo corde: qui non accepit in vano animam suam"; which means: "men whose hands and hearts are free from stain, and those knowing how to value their souls", of which this is the meaning: Men who are free from sin, only they will attain salvation in Heaven.

Wherefore, I now ask: are there perchance any people not knowing how to value their souls or in any way undervaluing their souls? Yes, indeed, there are such, I say.

Your souls, you should hold above your household furniture or the tools you make use of at home or serving to earn your livelihood. What, then, if the plough is not employed for ploughing? Is it not meanly diverted from its proper use by the employer? The jacket, the apron, the shirt, the trousers and other similar things that you purchase, have cut in patterns and sewed by tailors and dressmakers, (experts), do you not undervalue them if, when already made, you conceal them in the chest, and do not put them on the body? The cutlass that you get made by the smith and you intend for use at home either to split reed-cane or to meet any other want: is it not debased if you chance to keep it in the sheath or stick it in the partition-wall?

Do I not debase this cresset in the church if, by chance, I get it not lighted by the sextons? Alas! my brethren, it is exactly, that which I may say regarding our souls.

Does not then, man debase his soul, as it were, if he does not make use of what are called powers, memory, understanding and will, for the purpose intended by the Lord God? Is not, I say, memory a vile thing if it is not made use of by man to remember the gifts of God? In a word, to remind man that he was made by God in His image and has been redeemed by Jesus Christ through His death and his precious blood on the cross only for man's sake? Is not the understanding worthless if it is not made use of by man to know God, and to acknowledge that the wisdom, the justice and the power of God is infinite, and that He is the source from which everything flows and to which everything flows back again? Is not the will vile if not made use of by man to love God as Father and Powerful above all things, to love also one's fellow-creatures and to honor and to practice every virtue leading the soul to Heaven, and to abhor every vice causing the eternal damnation in Hell?

Well then, my brethren, fix in your hearts this doctrine I am preaching to you: try to realize that the reason God made you for, was just for the sake of his being remembered, loved and obeyed here on Earth that you may there enjoy eternal life.

It is your giving faith to and your comprehending this teaching that will enable you to amend your wrongs, and this very same, too, will correct your long-standing bad habits. It is your believing in and comprehending this doctrine that will enable your hearts to bear with miseries for God's sake, in the same manner as the soldier bears with unutterable hardships for the sake of his king. It is through your believing in and comprehending this very doctrine that you will be capable of evercoming the enemies of your soul in the same manner as the husbandmen endeavour to evercome the difficulties in the farming of their fields, in fair weather or in foul, that they may attain a good crop.

Your believing and your comprehending of this doctrine will serve to take away from you your laziness in attending mass, in confessing, and all your excuses for not practising the commandments of God and of the Holy Church.

And finally, your believing in and comprehending rightly the main purpose and end the Lord God made you for, will enable you to employ well the powers and strength of your souls; the memory, use it to remember God and the gifts He made you a present of; the understanding, to know Him and His almighty power; and the will, to love Him here in this life, that you may attain there above the eternal life. Amen.

THE END

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Those who are acquainted with the poor press facilities Manila affords will not be surprised to find so many errata and imperfections of print in this work. The still scanty typographical ability of natives as compositors of English is accountable for most of these defects. It may be truthfully said, however, that no amount of labor or pains taken by the author would entirely eradicate the same. Fortunately, however, the errors occur for the most part in the English text and the student's knowledge of that language can safely be relied upon to prevent any misconception as to the sense intended.

As for the typographical deficiencies, the student's attention is called to a very important one, reference to which has already been made in the notice appearing on the cover and first sheet; namely, the employing of $\tilde{n}g$ instead of \tilde{ng} . Strange as it may appear, such Tagalog character, of the size and type suitable for this work, could not be found throughout the city, and, thus, the Spanish \tilde{n} had to be resorted to. The student is hereby again reminded that in writing this peculiar character he must carry the tittle above the n a little ahead to the right, so as to make it bear midway between the said letter and the g ; thus, \tilde{ng} , this two-lettered combination representing a single character in Tagalog.

The work with its manifold defects and imperfections is submitted to the fair and impartial judgment of the public. The author rests confident that whatever such judgment may be, the fact will be apparent to the reader that an earnest effort has been made to contribute something of value upon a subject that up to this time has received little more than a passing attention. Should this the first edition of the work meet with approval, the author assures the public that not only will all existing errors and defects be removed from the next edition, but that many and important additions will be made thereto.
